NARVA TENURE.

—Grant of narva village Its history and incidents
in inam—Alienations

NARVA TENURE—contd.

by narvadars—Baharkhali—Gammajmun—Patimajmun—Revenue survey in a narva village—Suit by inamdar to recover rent as settled by the survey—Landlord and tenant. The narva tenure and its incidents discussed and explained. The inamdar of the narva village of Dakor desires that the revenue survey should be introduced into it. The usual measurements and assessments were made, and the Superintendent of the Revenue Survey, following the analogy of the system prevalent in Government villages, held a conference with the narvadars and drew up a scheme to which the narvadars assented, for the future management of the village and for settling the future relations between the narvadars and the inamdars as representing the fiscal interests of the Government. The narvadars agreed to retain their narva tenure along with an assessment made upon the principles of the revenue survey; and they resigned their right over baharkhali lands aliened from the several narva shares, on the understanding that the inamdar was to levy from the tenants one-fourth of the difference between the quit-rent actually paid and the full assessment as ascertained by the survey. The narvadars and their tenants, the actual holders of the baharkhali lands, having refused to pay this one-fourth, the inamdar sued them to recover it or the full assessment as ascertained by the survey. Held, that the inamdar was entitled to recover the one-fourth according to the scheme, which was binding on the whole body of narvadars, even though the defendant and others, being a minority, had not assented to the action of the majority. The inamdar's fiscal rights include the right to levy the ordinary assessment, except where a contract stands in the way, and he can raise the assessment to a limit which is fair and equitable according to the custom of the country. As between the narvadar and the Government, there is nothing to prevent the former from consenting to the exclusion of any part of the village lands from the contract. The severance of such parts makes it immediately subject to full taxation on ordinary principles, and any agreement with an incumbrancer in limitation of the narvadar's right to take rent can operate only as a ground of action against the narvadar themselves. *MANOHAR GANESH TAMBEKAR v. Converts from Hindu religion—Joint family—Co-parcenership—Inheritance—Indian Succession Act (X of 1865), s. 93—Intestate and testamentary succession. Parcenership can be a part of the law governing the rights of a Christian family converted from the Hindu religion. Tellis v. Saldanha, I. L. R. 10 Mad. 69, disapproved. The Indian Succession Act (X of 1865) does not affect rights of co-parcenership as between those to whom it applies. The purpose of that Act was to amend and define the rules of law applicable to intestate and testamentary succession. It is with the devolution of rights on intestacy that the Act deals. It does not purport to enlarge the category of heritable property. S. 93 of the Act actually recognizes a joint tenancy with the right of survivorship. Navroji Manockji Wadia v. Perozbai, I. L. R. 23 Bom. 80, referred to. The distinction between co-partnership and inheritance is that in the case of inheritance property devolves on death, it survives in the case of co-parcenership; on inheritance new rights are acquired, on survivorship the enjoyment of existing rights is increased by the removal of one from the body of co-sharers. *FRANCIS GHOSAL v. with Native States how ascertained—Sovereign powers of the Governor of Bombay in Council—Exercise in Native States through Political Agent—Courts of Political Agent and Assistant Political Agents, if King's Courts—Function of Governor in Council on appeal, whether judicial—Appeal to Privy Council. The rights and powers of contract possessed and exercised over the Native States in India by the British Indian Government, with the corresponding restrictions upon the independent action of those States are, to some extent, the necessary consequence of the suzerainty vested in the predominant power. But apart from this general source, rights of very varying kinds have been acquired in connection with the several States, from other sources. Such rights differ not only in origin but in kind and in degree in the cases of different States, so that in each instance in which the nature or extent of such rights becomes the subject of consideration, enquiry has to be made into the circumstances of the particular case. Sayad Muhammad Yusuf-ud-din v. The Queen-Empress, 2 C. W. N. 1 : s.c. L. R. 24 I. A. 137, referred to. On a view of the relation of the Kathiawar States and their people to British India, and the character of the control exercised by the British Indian Government over those States and particularly with relation to the administration of justice:—Held, that the Kathiawar States are not included within the King's dominions. Large as has been the political control exercised over them, any assertion of territorial sovereignty has been avoided. No legislative power over them has ever been claimed. The intervention in their affairs has never been carried further than was judged necessary, in the emergency for the maintenance of peace, good order and security. The position of the Chiefs has always been respected and at least, in the case of the more important among them, many of the functions commonly regarded attributes of sovereignty have been preserved to them. The form adopted in establishing and regulating tribunals in the province has been that which was regular and appropriate, if it was not British territory, but quite irregular and inapplicable, if it was. Damodhar Gordhan v. Deoram Kanji, I. L. R. 1 Bom. 337, explained. If a Court, administering justice on the King's behalf, makes an order, judicial in its nature, by which some one is injuriously affected, the person aggrieved is not precluded from applying to the King in Council to redress his wrong merely by the fact that he is not the King's subject. The jurisdiction exercised by the Courts of the Assistant Political Agents and the Political Agent in Kathiawar, and by the Governor of Bombay in Council on appeal, is political and not judicial. No appeal lies to His Majesty in Council from the Courts in Kathiawar or from the decision of the Governor of Bombay in Council on appeal. HEMCHAND DEVCHAND v. AZAM SAKARLAL CHHOTAMLAL (1905) . . . authorities as to grant or user of land—Treaty, absence of—Power restricted to military purposes—Land belongs to State—Parsi Tower of Silence, grant of land for—Control of cantonment authorities. The Hyderabad Subsidiary Force, which had its head-quarters in the Secunderabad cantonment was a force in the employment of the East India Company and commanded by Company's officers, but maintained by agreement, in Hyderabad territory, for the protection of the Nizam. There never was in existence any treaty prescribing the limits of the powers of the Nizam's officers on the one hand, and the military commander commanding the Hyderabad Subsidiary Force on the other, with respect to the management, control and disposition of the cantonment and the land comprised in it. When the Nizam's government admitted a British force within its territory, and allotted to it Secunderabad cantonment as its head-quarters, it no doubt, by necessary implication, conveyed to the military authorities all powers of jurisdiction, control and management incident to maintaining the efficiency and the discipline of the troops, the peace and good order and convenient use of the cantonment. But it would be going a long way beyond this to hold that the officer commanding the troops was empowered to alienate, in perpetuity, land forming part of the cantonment and undoubtedly Hyderabad territory for a purpose wholly unconnected with military requirements. The appellants, who were members of the Parsi community, claimed that the founders of the Parsi Tower of Silence which stands on a portion of certain land situated in the Secunderabad cantonment were in their lifetime owners of the land in question, and that the property had devolved upon themselves as descendants and representatives in title, of the original founders. The respondents, who were also members of the Parsi community, contended that the land in question had been granted to the whole Parsi community for a public purpose, and to enure for the benefit of the community generally for all time by the cantonment authority. The most important document relied upon by the appellants was issued by an officer of the Hyderabad State and purporting to express a transaction by which the State had assented to the grant of the land in question to the founders, and directed possession of it to be delivered to them. Another document in evidence also obtained on behalf of the founders, through their agent, purported to be issued by the authority of the Brigadier Commanding the Hyderabad Subsidiary Force, and to certify that the Parsis of Secunderabad had permission to enclose the land in question, which was given for a tower to be built on it. Held, that the consideration set out above must be borne in mind in estimating the effect of the two documents; that the first, emanating from the State purported to deal with, and enforce, a grant of the land to the founders by name, and the delivery of possession to them; that the second document, emanating from the Cantonment authorities, did not deal with title or possession, but gave permission to use the land, already conveyed, for the particular purpose of a Tower of Silence, and to enclose the land, which were matters obviously within the discretion of the commanding officer, and that the effect of the two documents was to allow a good title in the founders, and not in the Parsi community. *PESTONJI JIVANJI v. Certain judgment-creditors were held to have committed an error of judgment in submitting their decree to Commissioners appointed under Act XVII of 1873, as if it were a new and unascertained claim. 1. ———— s. 12—Jurisdiction of Commissioners—Parties. The Commissioners appointed under the Nawab Nazim's Debt Act (VII of 1873) (an Act to provide for the liquidation of the debts of the Nawab Nazim, and for his protection from legal process) having ascertained and certified that a certain zamindari was nizamut property (i.e., held by the Government for the purpose of upholding the dignity of the Nawab Nazim for the time being), the fact that this property had, before the passing of the Act, been conveyed by the Nawab Nazim to his son, did not deprive the Commissioners of jurisdiction to deal with the question. The plain language of s. 12 of the Act is not controlled by any words in the preamble. A suit brought by a claimant against the Government and the grantee to recover the property, without the Nawab Nazim having been joined as a party, could not proceed. *OMRAO BEGUM v. 2. ———— Award of Commissioners conclusive—Construction of documents not establishing a charge on immoveable property. Commissioners appointed under Act XVII of 1873, by their award, found that an estate was in the possession of the Government for the purpose of upholding the dignity of the Nawab Nazim for the time being, a finding within their competence to make, of which the effect was that the Government held the property freed and discharged from all claims. In a suit against the Government it was alleged that the estate, when in the hands of the Nawab, had been charged with payment of an annuity and arrears in favour of the plaintiff's father on his abandoning the title which he had set up to the property. Held, that the above award, under the Act, would have been a sufficient answer to the claim, even if the charge had originally attached to the estate. But in equity no charge could be created unless there was an intent to charge. Here the documents showed that this payment had not been legally charged upon the property, neither party having contemplated this result, and there having been only a mandate by the Nawab for payment of the annuity out of his treasury. *OMRAO BEGUM v. 2. "Sue forth," meaning of—Sanction obtained after suit filed. The expression "sue forth" in s. 1 of Act XVIII of 1848 does not mean to sue for and to obtain so as to make the consent of the Governor a condition precedent to the institution of a suit. Accordingly, where the grand-daughter of the Nawab of Surat was sued along with her husband without previously obtaining the required consent, and it was contended that the suit was irregularly instituted, and the proceedings thereunder void:—Held, that the suit was rightly instituted, such a consent not being a condition precedent to the filing of the suit. *ZIAUNNISSA BEGUM v. 1. Guardian—Minors Act XX of 1864—Bombay Civil Courts Acts (XIV of 1869 and X of 1876)—Officer of Government—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 456. The Nazir of a Civil Court, who is appointed guardian of the estate of a minor under Act XX of 1864, is not an officer of Government within the meaning of s. 32 of Act XIV of 1869 as amended by s. 15 of Act X of 1876. An officer of Government, in order to come within those enactments, must be a party to a suit in his official capacity. A Subordinate Judge who, under s. 456 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X) of 1877, as amended by s. 73 of Act XII of 1879, appoints the Nazir or any other officer of his Court to act as guardian of a minor plaintiff or defendant in a suit in his Court, has no jurisdiction to hear it and pass a decree against that officer as guardian ad litem of the minor. *Trimbak Nimbaji v. 3. Attachment of property in execution of decree—Failure to return property attached in satisfaction of decree—Beng. Act V of 1863, ss. 4 and 8. In a suit brought against the plaintiff in the Collector's Court for arrears of rent a decree was obtained, and a warrant was issued for the attachment of certain moveable property belonging to the plaintiff. The warrant was addressed to the Nazir of the Collector's Court and was by him delivered to one of the registered peons of the Court for execution. The peon reported to the Nazir that he had attached the property in question, and had placed it in charge of certain persons, whose receipt for it he produced and filed. Subsequently, the plaintiff paid the amount of the decree into Court and an order was made releasing his property from the attachment. A peon was sent to restore the property to the plaintiff, but the persons in whose charge it was said to have been left alleged that they had never taken possession of the property, and the peon was unable to restore the property to the plaintiff. In a suit brought by the plaintiff against the Nazir to recover the property or its value:—Held, that the Nazir was not liable, Bengal Act V of 1863 having altered the relation which formerly existed between the Nazir and the peons of the Revenue Courts, and put them in the position of paid servants of Government. *KALEE COOMER CHATTERJI v. 4. ————— Warrant of arrest of judgment-debtor—Escape of debtor—Negligence. The plaintiff sued out a warrant for the arrest of his judgment-debtor on the 4th December 1876. The warrant was lodged with the Nazir on the 16th December, and was to be in force till the 4th January 1877. On the 22nd December 1876 the Nazir was informed that the judgment-debtor was already in the civil jail under a writ of execution issued by another creditor. The Nazir then returned the warrant to the Subordinate Judge who had issued it. On the 29th December, the Subordinate Judge again sent it to the Nazir's office, where it was duly received by the Nazir's karkun (defendant No. 2). This fact was not reported by the karkun to the Nazir (defendant No. 1) until the 4th January 1877. On the 1st January 1877 the judgment-debtor's debt was paid by Government, and he was released in honour of Her Majesty's assumption of the title of Empress of India. The judgment-debtor thereupon left the district, and could not be found, and the plaintiff's warrant remained unexecuted. The plaintiff sued the Nazir and his karkun for allowing his judgment-debtor to escape. Held, that the Nazir ought not to have sent the warrant back to the Subordinate Judge, and that there was no necessity for a fresh order on it until the time which it had to run had expired. Held, further, that, if the Nazir forgot the existence of this unexecuted warrant on the 1st January 1877, and thus allowed the debtor to be released from the former process, when he ought to have been re-arrested under the plaintiff's warrant, there was actual negligence on his part, making him liable in damages to the plaintiff. Quære: Whether or not the Nazir could have been made responsible for the negligence of the karkun, who was not his servant, but the servant of, and paid by, the Government and appointed by the District Judge, if the warrant had been lodged with the karkun in the first instance, and that fact had never been communicated to the Nazir, and if he had never known of the existence of the warrant. *KASTURCHAND v. 5. ————— Misrepresentation of solvency of surety, by witness to surety bond. The plaintiff held a money-decree against M, who was arrested in execution of it. On being brought to the Court, however, M applied for his discharge as an insolvent under s. 273 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act VIII of 1859). He was released on the security of G, who executed a bond for the appearance of M at the enquiry into his insolvency. The defendant attested the bond, and wrote in the attestation that G was a solvent person. In consequence of the non-appearance of M, the plaintiff sought to execute his decree against the surety G, who, on his arrest, also applied for his discharge on the ground of his insolvency, and was discharged after inquiry. The plaintiff thereupon sued the defendant for the amount of his decree and cost of execution, on the ground of his representation in the attestation that G was solvent. Quære: Whether the Nazir was liable to the plaintiff for negligence in not taking a proper surety. *NAGO MAHADEV v. 1. ——— Requisites for action for negligence—Act contrary to law. To sustain an action for negligence, there must be an obligation on the part of the defendant to use care, and a breach of that obligation to the plaintiff's injury is an act contrary to law. *SVAMI NAYUDU v. 2. ——— Sending goods by railway company—Carrier—Duty of persons sending goods of a dangerous nature—Notice—Act XVIII of 1854, s. 15—Action for compensation for destruction of life. Held (PEARSON, J., dissenting). that a person who sends an article of a dangerous and explosive nature to a railway company to be carried by such company, without notifying to the servants of the company the dangerous nature of the article is liable for the consequences of an explosion, whether it occurs in a manner which he could not have foreseen as probable or not. Held, also (PEARSON, J. dissenting), that such a person is liable for the consequences of an explosion occurring in a manner which could not have foreseen, if he omits to take reasonable precautions to preclude the risk of explosion. LYELL v. GANGA DAI . I. L. R. 1 All. 60

3. ——— Railway Company—Injury to persons travelling. The plaintiff was a passenger travelling on the defendants' railway, and received severe injuries from a fall which he experienced in stepping upon the platform when the train stopped. Held, that the Railway Company was guilty of negligence in not keeping the station properly lighted in allowing the train to overshoot the station, and in not warning the plaintiff against alighting; also that the injuries sustained by the plaintiff were caused by the negligence in question, and that the plaintiff did not by his own want of care contribute to the accident. *WOODHOUSE v. 4. ——— Hire of boats—Damage—Liability of bailee. A contracted with B for the hire of certain cargo boats. While being towed by a steamer which A had chartered according to agreement, the boats sustained great damage by reason of gross negligence on the part of C, whom A had placed in charge. Held, that A must be held responsible to B for the negligence of C. GREESH CHUNDER BANNERJEE v. COLLINS . 2 Hyde 79

5. ——— Damages for personal injuries—Unfenced hole—Licensee—Contractor. The plaintiff claimed to recover Rs 63,500 from the defendants as damages for injuries sustained by him by reason of his having fallen into a hole which had been dug upon certain land of the defendants on the 1st September 1885. The land in question was the property of the first defendants (the Port Trustees), and was in their possession at the date of the accident to the plaintiff; but an agreement had been made, whereby it was to be leased by them to the second defendant, who was accordingly let into possession in January 1886. For some years, the first defendants had been in the habit of letting out the greater part of the land for tenting purposes in lots marked out with pegs, but the tents were taken down each monsoon. For two or three years previously to the accident, people had been accustomed to cross the land without any hindrance or prohibition. The plaintiff himself had used the path across the land, as a short cut, for a period of eighteen months. This path led across the tenting ground to a gate which was generally open, and which opened upon the high road. No express permission had ever been given to any of the person who were in the habit of using this path. It was a mere beaten track, and, so far from being a public way, it was from time to time obstructed, in the tenting season, by the ropes and pegs of the tents. The plaintiff had for sometime been in occupation of a bungalow belonging to the first defendants, which was situated in that part of the land which was furthest away from the high road. There was a regularly constructed roadway from the bungalow to the high road, which the plaintiff might have used, but, as a short cut, he and others were in the habit of using the beaten track. For this he had merely a tacit permission. On the morning of the 1st September 1885, he left his bungalow and went to his business, as usual, by the short cut across the land. When returning by the same way at about 11 o'clock at night he fell into the hole which had been dug in the afternoon of that day, and sustained the injuries complained of. The hole was several feet deep and was dug right across the pathway. The plaintiff had no notice of the hole being dug, or of any intention to dig it. The night was very dark, and there was no negligence on the part of the plaintiff, nor any want of ordinary care and caution. There was no watchman and no fence, nor was there any light which might enable persons using the path to avoid the danger. The second defendant, as above stated, had agreed to take the said land from the first defendants on lease for building purposes. On the day of the accident, some months before the execution of the lease, the second defendant, through his engineer and contractor H applied to the first defendants for permission to make "borings" in the land, which permission was given. H thereupon caused the hole in question to be dug. In their written statement the first defendants contended that in using the short cut across their land, the plaintiff was a trespasser, and that he had used it without their knowledge, or consent; that the hole was dug without their knowledge, and that the "borings" for which they had given permission, were merely small holes of a diameter of six inches, or thereabouts, which could not have been a source of danger.

The second defendant pleaded that at the time of the accident he was not in possession of the land, but had merely entered into an agreement for a lease of it; that he had employed a competent engineer and contractor, H, to make borings, in order to ascertain of what the sub-soil consisted, and that H contracted to do the work and obtain leave from the first defendants to enter on the land; that the said H subsequently entered on the land, and according to his own discretion and without any control or interference from him (the second defendant), took such steps as he thought necessary to ascertain the nature of the said sub-soil; and he (the second defendant) contended that, if there had been negligence in the performance of the work, he was not liable. Held, (i) that there was negligence in digging the hole across a path used by several licensees, and in not placing any person or light to warn passengers of the danger arising from the hole and the excavated earth which was heaped up near it. Held, (ii) that the first defendants were not liable to the plaintiff. The permission which they had given to H was a permission to make "borings" only; and the hole, which was actually dug by H, was dug without their knowledge or permission. H was not shown to be in any sense their servant or agent. The plaintiff was a bare licensee, and the first defendants were under no obligation to him to keep the path in a safe state or in good order. Held, (iii) that the second defendant was liable to the plaintiff. H was not a contractor, in the legal sense, so as to exempt the second defendant from responsibility, but was the servant of the second defendant pro hac vice and that the digging of the hole was within the course of his employment, or within the scope of his authority. The Court of first instance awarded as damages, a sum of Rs 33,000, which, on appeal, was reduced to Rs 17,000. EVANS v. TRUSTEES OF THE PORT OF BOMBAY

6. ——— Suit for damages by parents of a child killed by negligence—Act XIII of 1855—Death by negligence—Contributory negligence—Liability for negligence of servants—Damages, Assessment of—Deduction for maintenance of child—Funeral expenses. The plaintiff's unmarried daughter, a child of between five and six years old fell into an open manhole of a sewer in a lane in Bombay on the 20th August 1880, between 4½ and 5 o'clock P.M., and, when her body was recovered, life was extinct. The sewer was vested in the Municipality of Bombay, and was under the control of the Municipal Commissioner by virtue of ss. 220 and 289 of the Bombay Municipal Act of 1888. When such manholes are opened, it is the duty of the Municipal Commissioner under s. 321 of that Act to have them properly fenced and guarded. On the 28th August 1890, the manhole in question was opened for the purpose of inserting a flushing-door in the sewer. From the time the manhole was opened until the occurrence of the accident the deceased child's mother was seated at the corner of the street selling cucumbers about four yards from the manhole in question. The hole was at first properly fenced with four timber hurdles about 4 feet high set upright round it at a distance of 2 feet from the hole, secured at the corners with ropes. Soon after 4-30 P.M., the superintendent in charge of the work gave orders to cease work and close the manhole for the night. The accident took place almost immediately afterwards. The Judge found on the evidence that the child fell into the open hole in the interval that elapsed between the taking down of the fence and putting the cover on the hole. What she was doing the instant before she fell, there was nothing to show. She was seen running and playing about the street during the afternoon. Her mother, who was sitting close by, did not see the accident, her attention being at the moment occupied by some customers. She admitted that before the accident occurred she knew the fence was down and the hole open, and she would not have left the child go to it had she been playing beside her. Held, (i) that the defendants were guilty of negligence, and that they were liable for negligence of their servants, although the latter acted contrary to the express orders given by their superior; (ii) that although the mother of the child might have been guilty of negligence which contributed to the accident, yet if the defendants could, by the exercise of ordinary care and diligence, have avoided the mischief which happened, her negligence would not excuse them; (iii) that, as regards damages, in cases of this nature, distinct evidence of the loss sustained or benefit expected is not necessary. The jury may look at all the circumstances of the case, and especially at the position of the parents and age of the child, and call in aid their own experience in arriving at their conclusions. Where damages are allowed, a reasonable sum should be deducted on account of the maintenance for such period as the child might reasonably have been expected to live with her parents. In an action under Act XIII of 1855, no sum can be awarded in respect of funeral expenses, whether for removal or disposal of the body or for outlay—for ceremonial or obsequial purposes. NARAYEN JETHA v. MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONERS OF BOMBAY. . . . . I. L. R. 16 Bom. 254

7. ———— Liability of principal for acts of contractor—Right of support of house by adjoining soil—Principal and Agent or Contractor. The plaintiffs were owners of a house consisting of a ground-floor and upper storey and measuring 77 feet in length. On the south side of the house was a gully, 3 feet 6 inches wide, separating it from another upper-storied house. The plaintiffs in the suit complained that in January, 1891, the defendant by his servants dug a trench, 8 feet deep, along the whole length of the gully for the purpose of laying a drain pipe, and that the work was done so negligently that the plaintiffs' house was injured and became in such a dangerous condition that it had to be pulled down. The plaintiffs claimed R3,996 as damages. The defendant denied the negligence, and alleged that the work was not done by his servants or agents, but by a contractor. Held, that the defendant was liable for the act of his contractor. The work was necessarily attended with risk, and the defendant could not free himself from liability by employing a contractor. The defendant, as well as the contractor, was liable to the plaintiff's. DRONDIBA KRISHNAJI v. MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONERS OF BOMBAY. . . . . I. L. R. 17 Bom. 307

8. ———— Loss by fire—Sale set aside—Decree in favour of vendor—Possession—Purchaser in possession after decree and pending appeal—Accident—Liability for damage—Maxim, Volenti non fit injuria. The plaintiff and the second defendant A were brothers, and worked a cotton press in partnership. In August, 1884, A sold the press for R35,000 to V (the first defendant), who paid A R5,000 earnest-money, and was put into possession. The plaintiff then brought a suit (No. 327 of 1884) against A praying for a dissolution of the partnership. V was also a party defendant to that suit. The plaintiff alleged that R35,000 was much too low a price for the press, and he objected to the sale. He prayed that V might be restrained from continuing in possession of the press and working it, and that a receiver might be appointed to take possession of it until further order. On the 21st April 1885, on a motion, the Court refused to grant an injunction and receiver, but ordered V to pay R30,000 (i.e., the balance of the purchase-money), to the solicitors of the parties, for investment until the hearing of the suit, and directed that, if that sum was not paid by the 21st May, 1885, a receiver should be appointed to take possession of the press. The suit (i.e., No. 327 of 1884) was heard on the 15th February, 1887, when it was held by the Court that the sale by A to V was without authority; that the defendant V took nothing under it, and that the plaintiff was entitled to have it set aside. Certain matters still remained to be decided; but on the 28th February, 1887, the decree in the suit was made giving effect to the findings already arrived at on the 15th February. The decree by consent directed various accounts to be taken, and among others, an account of the profits realized by the working of the press by the defendant V since his possession thereof, credit being given to him for all sums expended by him in the repairs, maintenance, and working of the said press and for the management thereof by him. The decree further ordered that the defendant V should be repaid the R30,000 which he had paid under the order of the 21st April, 1885, and directed "that on such payment the said defendant V do forthwith give over possession of the press to the plaintiff and the defendant A." The defendant V at once gave notice of his intention to appeal. There was some delay in drawing up the decree. The minutes were spoken to on the 31st March, 1887; the decree was sealed on the 13th April, 1887. Meantime on the 6th April, 1887, and while the defendant V was still in possession, a fire broke out in the press, and much damage was done. Subsequently to the sealing of the decree as above stated, the press in its damaged condition was handed over to the plaintiff's firm by V, who also desisted from prosecuting his appeal, the injury to press having made it contrary to his interest to appeal. In May, 1887, the plaintiff filed the present suit, claiming to recover R50,000 from the defendant V as the value of the press, or such further sum as might be necessary to rebuild and restore it. He alleged that the fire was caused by the working of the press, and contended that the working of the press by the defendant V after the decree of the 28th February was an act of trespass by him, and that therefore, independently of the question whether the fire was caused by the negligence of V and his servants, the said V was liable for the loss occasioned by the fire. Held, that, independently of negligence, the defendant V was not liable to the plaintiff for the loss occasioned by the fire. Down to the decree of the 28th February, 1887, the defendant in keeping possession of the press and working it was, no doubt, a trespasser, but subsequently to that decree he remained in possession and worked the press with the consent of the plaintiff. The maxim volenti non fit injuria, applied to the circumstances of the case. Held, also, that, no negligence having been proved against the defendant, the suit must be dismissed. JAMSETJI BURJORJI BAHADURJI v. Premature closing of water-supply by mistake of Revenue officer—Right of action—Parties. Plaintiff, a Government raiyat, occupied lands the cultivation of which depended upon a supply of water from a Government channel which was ordinarily kept open until a specified date, when it was closed. Defendant, a Revenue officer employed by the Government, negligently, but without malice and without any intention of harming plaintiff, caused the channel to be closed at an earlier date than was customary, thereby causing damage to plaintiff's crops. It was part of defendant's duty to see that the channel was closed at a certain date, but he had, on this occasion, closed it too soon by mistake. Plaintiff sued defendant for the damages which he had thereby suffered. Held, that, inasmuch as plaintiff's right to a supply of water was founded on contract, a right of action, in case of the water being improperly withheld, might exist as against the Government, but that there was none as against the defendant, by whom no legal injury had been committed. Semble: That, if malicious intention on the defendant's part had been proved, plaintiff might have had a cause of action. Krishna Ayyan v. 13. ————— Negligence of bailee—Bill of lading, construction of. M shipped 4,000 bags of rice in the S.S. Thorndale belonging to B for delivery at Tuticorin under a bill of lading which contained amongst others the following condition:—"The Company is to have the option of delivering these goods or any part thereof into receiving ship or landing them at the risk and expense of the shipper or consignee as per scale of charges . . . and is also to be at liberty until delivery to store the goods or any part thereof . . . In all cases and under all circumstances, the liability of the Company shall absolutely cease when the goods are free of the ship's tackle and thereupon the goods shall be at the risk, for all purposes and in every respect, of the shipper or consignee." The ship arrived at Tuticorin on the 23rd October and began discharging goods on the 24th. Heavy rains commenced on the 27th and continued till the 30th, but the discharge of the goods was not stopped and continued till the 30th. The bags got wet while being landed and became damaged by remaining on the foreshore without being immediately removed by M. M sued B for damages for the bags damaged and lost. It was found that the damage might have been averted if the bags had been removed by M immediately on their being landed and it was also found that B had not taken any precautions to protect the bags. On the above facts:—Held, that B was bound to take reasonable care and that his landing and stacking the goods uncovered on the foreshore during rainy weather amounted to actionable negligence. Per SUBRAHMANIA AYYAR, J., that the first of the two conditions in the bill of lading did not apply to the landing of the goods and that the second condition did not exempt the defendants from liability for negligence as bailees till actual delivery on land. Per MILLER, J. (contra). The second condition in the bill of lading applied to all stages of the transaction covered by the contract, including the stages of landing and storing, and the defendant were thereby exempted from liability for their negligence on such operations. If the second condition should be struck out, the defendants will still be protected from liability by the first condition. SHEIK MAHAMAD RAVUTHAR v. 14. — Misfeasance on the part of Municipality—The Municipality not keeping a ditch and sluices at a dam in proper order—Collection of the storm water in the ditch—The water passing over lands of another and doing damage The plaintiff sued to recover damages from the defendant Municipality for injury done to his property by storm water. The water had collected in an adjoining ditch, which the Municipality had not kept in a state of repair, but had allowed it to be choked with the rubbish of the town. They constructed a dam in the adjoining creek, but allowed the sluices at the dam to be choked up with weeds, sedges and silt. The consequence was that the storm water which had collected in the creek passed on to the plaintiff's land and did damage. Held, that there was misfeasance on the part of the Municipality, for they had turned their works by their negligence into a nuisance so as to throw the water collected on their property—the creek—on to the plaintiff's land, and that, therefore, they were liable for the damage caused thereby. Borough of Bathurst v. 15. — Negligence of carrier—Carrier liable unless exempted by clear and unambiguous words—Bill of lading, construction of—Burden of proof—Contract by carrier exempting himself from liability for negligence is legal and not void as opposed to public policy—Letters Patent, cl. 15—Whole case open on appeal. The defendants carried 4,000 bags of rice and other goods, consigned to plaintiffs from Rangoon to Tuticorin, under a bill of lading which contained, inter alia, the following general condition:—"The said goods to be carried and delivered, subject to the terms and conditions hereof, including those at the foot of this bill of lading, in the like good order and condition, at the port of Tuticorin, the Act of God . . . the Queen's enemies . . . accidents, loss or damage from vermin . . . accidents of sea, land . . . of whatsoever kind, and accidents, loss or damage from any act, neglect or default of whatsoever of the pilot, master, mariners or other servants of the company excepted . . ." Among the conditions at the foot of the bill of lading was the following:—"The company is to have the option of delivering

these goods or any part thereof, into receiving ship or landing them at the expense and risk of the shipper or the consignee, as per scale of charges to be seen at the Agent's office, and is also to be at liberty, until delivery, to store the goods in receiving ship, godown or upon any wharf, the usual charges therefor being payable by the shipper or consignee . . . In all cases and under all circumstances the liability of the company shall cease absolutely when the goods are free of the ship's tackle and thereupon the goods shall be at the risk, for all purposes and in every respect, of the shipper or consignee." The ship arrived at Tuticorin and the defendants, under the powers reserved to them by the last recited clause, landed the cargo. In a suit brought by the consignees (plaintiffs) to recover damages caused to the goods by the negligence of defendant's servants after such goods were free of the ship's tackle and before they were delivered to plaintiffs:—Held, per CHIEF JUSTICE and SANKARAN NAIR, J. (WALLIS, J., dissenting), on the construction of the bill of lading, that the liability of the defendants at that stage was specially provided for by the last recited clause, that they could not invoke in aid the general negligence clause in the body of the document and that they were not exempted from liability for negligence. Exemption of shipowners from liability for negligence must be provided for in clear and unambiguous terms and must not be left to inference from general words. The words "in all cases and under all circumstances" in the last clause, though as wide and general as possible, will not cover the case of negligence, which must be expressly provided for. Under the contract and the circumstances of the case, the defendants had to prove that the goods were ready for delivery before they became damaged. Per WALLIS, J.—The bill of lading sufficiently protected the defendants from liability for negligence during the discharge of the cargo. The general condition in the bill will, by itself, limit the shipowner's liability during the whole time he was in possession of the goods and will apply during the loading and discharge of the goods. The last clause cannot be considered as imposing on the shipowner at that stage, a liability for negligence, which had been already generally stipulated for. The artificial rule of construction laid down by WALTON, J., cannot be applied where the exemption clause does not stand by itself, but occurs, in a bill of lading containing complicated stipulations, as the bill under consideration. In the latter case the document must be considered as a whole. The last recited clause must be read with the general condition in the body of the bill and so read, clearly exempted the defendants from liability. The plaintiff's suit was not for non-delivery but for failure to deliver in proper order and condition; and the plaintiffs were bound to prove when they were delivered and also that the bags were in a bad condition at such time. Per CHIEF JUSTICE and WALLIS, J.—In England it is competent to a shipowner to protect himself by express contract from liability for the negligence of himself or his servants. This is also the law applicable in India. Per SANKARAN NAIR, J.—The rule of English law which allows shipowners to exempt themselves, by express contract, from liability for negligence, cannot be applied in India, as it is inconsistent with the provisions of the Indian Contract Act and the manifest intention of the Legislature in enacting such provisions. S. 148 of the Contract Act includes bailments for carriage and the shipowner is a bailee in respect of the goods entrusted to him. S. 151 of the Act lays down the absolute minimum of care required of bailees. Having regard to the provision of s. 152, which allows a bailee to undertake a higher responsibility, and to the absence of provisions allowing a bailee to limit such liability, the amount of care required by s. 151 is irreducible by any contract between the parties. A contract limiting such liability will be opposed to public policy and void under s. 23 of the Contract Act, as it will be against the interests of the mercantile community and not necessary in the interests of the shipowners. *Price & Co. v. [Act V of 1866 mentioned in the following cases, paras. 1 to 11, was repealed and its provisions reenacted in the Civil Procedure Code: see Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) ss. 532 to 538.]

NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS—concl'd.

1. ———— Return of summons—Procedure. In a suit under Act V of 1866, the summons should be returned in the usual way; and after the expiration of the required time, an order of the Court or a decree should be obtained. SCHILLER v. MARKER . 1 Ind. Jur. N. S. 283

2. ———— Time to obtain leave to defend—Act V of 1866, s. 3. Although Act V of 1866, s. 3, only gives the defendant seven days to get leave to come in and defend an action on a bill, note, etc., the Court must be satisfied before granting a decree that the defendant has had a full opportunity to obtain leave to defend. GROR v. PALMER
1 Ind. Jur. N. S. 395

3. ———— Extension of time for appearance—Jurisdiction. Where, in a suit under Act V of 1866, the defendant is at such a distance as would make it impossible for him to put in an appearance within the seven days allowed by the Act, the Court will stay execution for a time long enough to allow him to appear. Suits cannot be brought under this Act against persons resident out of the jurisdiction. CHANDRAKANT ROY v. POGOSE . . . . . 3 B. L. R. O. C. 83

4. ———— Leave to appear and defend—Practice—Costs. The Court will give leave to a defendant to appear and defend in suits under Act V of 1866, where he shows a defence apparently real; but where there is a doubt as to the bonâ fides of the defence, payment of money into Court will be ordered or security directed to be given. The Court has, in giving leave to defend, a discretion to order security for costs, not only where it doubts the bonâ fides of the defence, but also if it considers the matter of defence raised is unnecessary, though allowable. If the plaintiff has not been heard at first against the defendant's application, the Court will always allow him to come in afterwards and show that the leave ought not to have been granted, or, if granted at all, in more stringent terms. VONLINTZGY v. NARAYAN SING
6 B. L. R. Ap. 64

5. ———— Leave to defend. In an action on a promissory note under this Act the defendant was allowed to come in and defend after the plaintiff had obtained a decree; the decree was set aside and written statements ordered. JOSEPH v. SOLANO . . . . . 9 B. L. R. 441: 18 W. R. 424

6. ———— Notarial protest—Evidence of dishonour—Hundi—Bill of exchange. A notarial protest of any bill of exchange noted at any time after the passing of Act V of 1866 is primâ facie evidence that the bill has been dishonoured under s. 13 of that Act, although the sections relating to summary procedure on bills of exchange did not come into operation till May 1st, 1866. A hundi which contains a direction on sufficient consideration to the drawee, and accepted by him, is within the terms of the Act, and such a document is assignable without any regular form of endorsement, if sufficient cause appears in the handwriting of an endorser to indicate an intention to assign it.

EAST INDIA BANK v. KHOJAH VULLIE GOOLWANY . . . 1 Ind. Jur. N. S. 247

7. ———— Decree—Right of plaintiff suing under the Act. Under the summary procedure on Bills of Exchange Act (V of 1866), the plaintiff is entitled to claim by his summons and obtain by his decree whatever sum, principal and interest, is, on the legal construction of the instrument, demandable. DESOZA v. RANGAIAN . . . 6 Mad. 257

8. ———— Promissory note—Consideration—Evidence. In a suit under the Bills of Exchange Act to recover R1,200 on a promissory note the Court gave a decree for R700 only, that being shown to have been the full consideration received for the note. RAMLAL MOOKERJEE v. HARAN CHANDRA DHAR . . . 3 B. L. R. O. C. 130 : 12 W. R. O. C. 9

9. ———— Endorsement struck out—Promissory note—Evidence. A plaint was presented under Act V of 1866 by the endorsees of a promissory note endorsed as follows: "Received from the Chartered Mercantile Bank.—J. M. Reid, Agent." The note had not been paid when presented, and the endorsement was struck out. Admission of the plaint was refused, unless evidence was given that the note had been paid, and to explain why the endorsement was struck out. As under Act V of 1866 evidence could not be received, the plaint was not admitted. CHARTERED MERCANTILE BANK v. SECONDE . . . 3 B. L. R. O. C. 146

10. ———— Suit on promissory note payable by instalments. Where a promissory note is payable by instalments, and contains a stipulation that, on default in payment of the first instalment, the whole amount is to become due, a suit to recover the whole amount on default made in payment of the first instalment cannot be brought under Act V of 1866. REMFRY v. SHILLINGFORD . . . I. L. R. 1 Calc. 130

11. ———— Costs—Suit under R500—Jurisdiction of Small Cause Court. In an undefended suit brought under Act V of 1866 on a promissory note for R342, there was nothing in the petition to show that the suit could not have been brought in the Small Cause Court, the High Court gave a decree for amount of note and costs. DUFF v. FISHER . . . 8 B. L. R. Ap. 10

12. ———— Summary procedure on—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), Ch. XXXIX—Leave to defend, extension of time to apply for—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), s. 1, and Sch. II, Art 159. In a suit under Ch. XXXIX, Civil Procedure Code, 1882, the Court has no power, after the time fixed by the summons for obtaining leave to appear and defend has expired, to extend the time. Quere: Whether the Court has power to grant an extension of time if an application for such extension be made before the time fixed by the summons has expired. 13. ———— Payment—Contract of purchase—Hundi taken in part payment. Defendants agreed to sell paddy to plaintiff on the term that the balance of the price, after giving credit for an advance of R1,000, should be paid by plaintiff on delivery at a place mentioned. It was agreed that an assignment of a debt for R100 and a hundi for R900 should be accepted as payment of the advance. Defendants sold the paddy to a third party at a higher price, and plaintiff now sued for damages for breach of contract. Held, that plaintiff was entitled to damages. As the R100 assigned and the hundi for R900 were agreed to be the payment of the advance of R1,000, the acceptance of the hundi operated as payment, though it might be only conditional, and the right to receive the R900 as part of the price might revive, if the hundi should be dishonoured, and notice of dishonour duly given. Held, also, that the property in the paddy had passed to the buyer under s. 78 of the Contract Act and under s. 95 of that Act the defendants, as vendors, would have a lien on the goods and would not be bound to deliver until the price had been paid, including the R900 due under the hundi, if the letter were dishonoured. KUTTAYAN CHETTY v. PALANIAPPA CHETTY (1904) . . . I. L. R. 27 Mad. 540

14. ———— Fraud—Forged indorsement—Holder in due course—Onus of proof—Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881) ss. 9, 46, 58, 59. No person can claim a title to a negotiable instrument through a forged indorsement. Such an indorsement is a nullity and must be taken as if no such indorsement was on the instrument. Chandra Kali Dabee v. E. P. Champan, I. L. R. 32 Cal. 799, not followed. Hunsraj Purmand v. Ruttonji Waiji, I. L. R. 24 Bom. 65, followed. Where a plaintiff establishes the fact that a negotiable instrument was obtained from its lawful owner by means of fraud the onus of proving that a third party was a holder in due course lies on the defendant. ss. 7, 32, 53, 64, 115, 134—Bills of exchange drawn on defendant and endorsed over to plaintiff by the Bank in whose favour they were drawn—Failure of defendant to pay—Suits to recover on the bills—Plaintiff's capacity—Holder deriving title from holder in due course—Bills accepted need not be dishonoured and protested—Acceptor liable at maturity—Assent not signed on the bills, but on copies—Assent not valid. The plaintiff sued to recover on certain bills drawn on the defendant and endorsed over to the plaintiff by the Banks, in whose favour they were drawn. The suits were dismissed on the grounds that (1) the suits were defective in form inasmuch as the plaintiff was suing as agent without disclosing his principals and (2) the suits were not competent as the bills had never been dishonoured and protested. Held, (i) that the bills were endorsed over to the plaintiff by the Banks in whose favour they were drawn, so that he was a holder deriving title from holders in due course, and as such he was competent to sue under s. 53 of the Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881). Held, further, (ii) that the bills were made payable at Bombay. Therefore under ss. 134 and 32 of the Act the acceptor became liable at the maturity of the bills and the suits were not bad, because the bills had not been dishonoured and protested. S. 115 of the Act merely enacts that a bill is not dishonoured until it has been dishonoured by the drawee in case of need where such drawee is named in the bill. Presentment is not necessary to charge the acceptor. The acceptor is the principal debtor and his liability is independent of the presentment, the acceptance having been signed on the copies of the bills and not upon the bills or upon one of their parts in accordance with s. 7 of the Act. Held, that a material requirement of law had been omitted with the result that there was no valid acceptance. *ARDESHIR SORABSHA v. (XXVI OF 1881)—contd.

1. — ss. 8, 78—In a suit by a payee named in a negotiable instrument or an indorsee, plea that such payee or indorsee is benamidar not allowable. According to the law merchant which governed negotiable instruments in this country before the passing of the Negotiable Instruments Act, no person could sue on a negotiable instrument unless he were named therein as payee or had become entitled as indorsee or bearer. Ss. 8 and 78 of the Negotiable Instruments Act have reproduced the law as it stood before the passing of the Act. The general provisions of the Indian Contract Act as regards the rights and liabilities of undisclosed principals were not intended to alter these well established rules as to negotiable instruments. In a suit on a negotiable instrument by the payee named therein or the indorsee, it is not open to the defendant to plead that such payee or indorsee is a mere benamidar. *Ganapati Naiken v. 2. — Right of indorser indorsing for collection—Indorser on regaining possession of bill, may strike out name of indorsee and himself sue on the bill. The holder of a negotiable instrument within the meaning of s. 8 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, to whom payment must be made under s. 78 of the Act, is the person who on the face of such instrument, is entitled in his own name to the possession thereof and to receive or recover the amount due therefor from the parties thereto. Subba Narayana Vathiyar v. Ramaswami Aiyar, I. L. R. 30 Mad. 88, referred to. Where the drawer or indorser takes up a bill by paying the holder, he is entitled to strike out subsequent parties and maintain a suit on such bill against the parties antecedent to himself. Where a bill is indorsed for collection and is returned by the indorsee to the indorser, the former ceases to be the holder within the meaning of s. 8 of the Act, and the latter can maintain a suit on the bill by striking out the name of the indorsee. s. 9—Hundi—Holder in due course—Effect of fraudulent endorsement to fictitious indorsee. Two hundis not payable to bearer were intrusted to a broker by the payees for sale. The broker represented to the payees that a certain firm, known as Har Sahai Mal Kedar Nath, was willing to purchase them, and the payees accordingly endorsed them over to Har Sahai Mal Kedar Nath. The broker then forged two further endorsements on the hundis, the first from Har Sahai Mal Kedar Nath to Kedar Nath Chandu Lal; the second from Kedar Nath Chandu Lal to Bhola Nath Moti Ram. Both the last mentioned firms were fictitious. The hundis were then sold as by the last endorsees to Mahbub

Cl. (c)—Damage suffered by drawer by omission to give notice of dishonour—Onus of proof—Partnership between drawer and acceptor—Acceptor also drawer—Discharge of acceptor by limitation—Effect on liability of drawer. When the endorsee of a bill sues the drawer to recover the amount due under the bill, and relies upon s. 98 (c) of the Negotiable Instruments Act to excuse the omission to give notice of dishonour, the onus lies on the endorsee to establish that the drawer could not have suffered damage by the omission. The mere fact that the drawer and acceptor of a bill are partners does not give rise to the presumption that they are partners in respect of the drawing of the bill, or that the bill was drawn by one of them on behalf of both. In such a case the acceptor is not also a drawer, so as to render notice of dishonour unnecessary under s. 98 (e). The fact that the acceptor of a bill is not liable (because he was joined as a party to the suit after the period of limitation had expired) does not discharge the drawer from his liability, where the suit has been instituted as against him in time. *JAMBU RAMASWAMY BHAGAVATHAR v. NEWSPAPERS (INCITEMENTS TO OFFENCES) ACT (VII OF 1908).

s. 3—Nature of offences under the Act—Incitement to assassination—"Incitement," meaning of—Direct or indirect incitement—General incitement, not addressed to particular persons—Construction of offensive article. The question of the intention or knowledge of an individual may determine his criminal liability under the ordinary law of abetment by incitement by means of words, written or spoken, but under the Newspapers (Incitements to Offences) Act no question of the intention of the writer, printer or publisher arises, and no personal liability is imputed to any particular person. The order thereunder is not one against any person, but is purely restrictive and directed against the use or intended use, of a press for the purpose of printing or publishing a newspaper containing any incitement to murder or to any offence under the Explosive Substances Act (VI of 1908) or to any act of violence. The words "any incitement" in s. 3 (1) of the Newspapers Act include direct and indirect incitement, and need not be addressed to any particular person, nor expressed in violent and outrageous terms. "To incite" means "to move to action, to stir up, to stimulate, to instigate or to encourage," and a newspaper article comes within the scope of s. 3 if it is, as a matter of fact, calculated, directly or indirectly, to produce that effect. Per RYVES, J.—There can be no hard-and-fast canon as to what words or given set of words constitute

The mere fact that a mehal is a Noabad mehal does not necessarily attach to it the incidents of ordinary Noabad properties of later creation. All Noabad mehals of Chittagong have this in common that the proprietors have to pay rent or revenue to Government. But the incidents of different Noabad mehals may vary very greatly. The incidents of the present mehal determined, and held, mainly upon the basis of a kabuliyat executed by the proprietors in favour of the Government in 1852, that the revenue was fixed in perpetuity on the hasila area only. *RAM SUNDAR SAHA v. ss. 43, 83, and 241—Vendor and purchaser—Agreement—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—Cause of action—Assessment of revenue. The purchaser of a certain estate paying revenue to Government agreed with the vendors, shortly after the sale, that they should retain a certain portion of such estate free of rent, and that he would pay the revenue payable in respect of such portion. In 1853, in a suit by the vendors against the purchaser to enforce this agreement, the Sudder Court held that the revenue payable in respect of such portion of the estate was payable by the purchaser. In 1875, on a fresh settlement of the estate, the representatives in title of the purchaser applied, to the settlement officer to settle such portion of the estate with the representative in title of the vendors. The settlement officer refused this application, but it was subsequently allowed by the superior revenue authorities. The representative in title of the vendors then sued the representatives in title of the purchaser in the Civil Court, claiming "that he might, in accordance with the agreement between the vendors and the purchaser, be exempted from paying revenue in respect of such portion, as against the defendants, without any injury to the Government: that the defendants might be ordered to pay as heretofore such revenue: and that the defendants might be ordered never to claim or demand from him any revenue they might be compelled to pay in respect of such portion." Held, per SPANKIE, J., that, assuming that the agreement between the vendors and the purchaser was enforceable, the act of the defendants in moving the settlement officer to settle such portion of the estate with the plaintiff gave the plaintiff a cause of action. Also that the object of the plaintiff's suit being to obtain a declaration that, as between him and the defendants the latter were bound to pay revenue in respect of such portion, the suit was not barred by cl. (b), s. 241 of Act XIX of 1873. Also that, although the revenue authorities might regard the decision of the Sudder Court as binding on the parties then before the Court, for the currency of the then settlement, that decision, that settlement having expired, and s. 83 of Act XIX of 1873 having come into force, could not control the power of the revenue authorities to settle the land in question with the plaintiff who was its proprietor. Held, per OLDFIELD, J., that, with reference to ss. 43 and 83 of Act XIX of 1873, the Civil Courts could not relieve the plaintiff of his liability to pay revenue. Held, by the Court

1. Procedure—Inquiry into objections raising questions of title. When a Collector or Assistant Collector has determined to enquire into objections raising questions of title preferred under s. 113 of the N.-W. P. Land Revenue Act, 1873, his proceeding thereupon must be conducted as an original suit in a Civil Court. RANJIT SINGH v. ILAHI BAKSH . . . I. L. R. 5 All. 520

2. ss. 113, 114, 241 (f)—Partition—Question of title raised before and decided by Assistant Collector—Appeal to wrong Court—Suit in Civil Court for declaration of title—Jurisdiction. In an application for partition before an Assistant Collector certain parties raised an objection that they were exclusively entitled to a portion of the land sought to be partitioned. The Assistant Collector tried the question of title so raised under s. 113 of the North-Western Provinces Land Revenue Act, 1873, and decided it in favour of the objectors. The applicants appealed to the Collector, who entertained the appeal and reversed the finding of the Assistant Collector, and this decision was upheld by the Commissioner and the Board of Revenue. Before the partition proceedings were completed, the unsuccessful objectors filed a suit in the Civil Court praying for a declaration that the lands in question were their exclusive property and, if necessary, for a decree for possession. Held, that the suit was maintainable. No appeal lay on the revenue side from the Assistant Collector's order on the plaintiff's objection, which was now final; and inasmuch as the suit had been instituted before the completion of the partition proceedings, it was not obnoxious to the prohibition contained in s. 241 (f) of Act XIX of 1873. *Muhammad Sadiq v. He is, however, entitled to possession of the sir land as against the vendee. BALDEO PANDEY v. JHARI KUAR . . . 7 N. W. 334

2. — Usufructuary mortgage—Ex-proprietary tenant—Sir land. Held, by the Full Bench (OLDFIELD and BRODHURST, JJ., dissenting), that a person who creates a usufructuary mortgage of zamindari property becomes an ex-proprietary or occupancy-tenant of the sir land under s. 7 of the N.-W. P. Rent Act (XII of 1881). Per PETHERAN, C.J.—A usufructuary mortgagee is, for the time being, the proprietor of the property inasmuch as a proprietor is the person entitled to exclusive possession at the time; and the intention of the Legislature, as expressed in s. 7 of the Rent Act, is that, when a zamindar ceases to be entitled to occupy the sir land as proprietor, he shall have the right to occupy it as an ex-proprietary tenant under s. 5. Bhagwan Singh, v. Murli Singh, I. L. R. 1 All. 459, dissented from. Per STRAIGHT, J.—The words “lose” and “part with” in s. 7 of the Rent Act were intended to cover all cases in which a proprietor of land has either voluntarily or by operation of law deprived himself permanently or temporarily of the power to exercise full proprietary right over his property. Per MAHMOOD, J.—The meaning of the words “proprietary rights” in s. 7 of the Rent Act is equivalent to that of the term “full ownership,” corresponding to dominium in the Roman law and fee-simple estate in English law. The right of a usufructuary mortgagee cannot be called proprietorship; and having regard to s. 58 of the Transfer of Property Act, the execution of a usufructuary mortgage does not amount to a transfer of the proprietary right. The word “lose” as used in s. 7 of the Rent Act means the transfer of proprietary rights otherwise than by the will of the owner in consequence of some incident of law. The term “part with” is a general expression including both absolute and temporary alienation; and a usufructuary mortgage is a “parting with” some of the incidents of ownership, and falls within the purview of s. 7, inasmuch as the rights of possession and of the enjoyment of the usufruct are transferred from the mortgagor to the mortgagee, though such a transfer does not amount to a total alienation of proprietorship. Bhagwan Singh v. Murli Singh, I. L. R. 1 All. 459, dissented from. Gopal Pandey v. Parsotam Das, I. L. R. 5 All. 121; Ganga Din v. Dhurandhar Singh, I. L. R. 5 All. 495; and Gulab Rai v. Indar Singh, I. L. R. 6 All. 54, referred to. Per OLDFIELD, J.—The words “loss or part with his proprietary rights in any mehal” in s. 7 of the Rent Act mean a loss or parting which divests absolutely of all proprietary rights, leaving no interest of a proprietary kind in the mehal; this does not happen in a usufructuary mortgage, and therefore the latter is not a loss of, or parting with, proprietary rights, within the meaning of s. 7. Bhagwan Singh v. Murli Singh, I. L. R. 1 All. 459, approved. Per BRODHURST, J.—The word “lose” in s. 7 of the Rent Act, means involuntarily lose, as for instance, by auction sale, and “part with” means voluntarily and entirely divested of by means, e.g., of gift or private sale. “Proprietary rights” means the whole of the proprietary rights; and a usufructuary mortgagor of zamindari property cannot be said to have lost or parted with his proprietary right therein, and therefore does not, under the provisions of s. 7 of the Rent Act, become an ex-proprietary or occupancy tenant of the sir land. INDAR SEN v. NAUBAT SINGH

I. L. R. 7 All. 553

3. — Usufructuary mortgage of zamindari including sir—Losing or parting with proprietary right in mehal—Ex-proprietary tenant. A zamindar who makes a usufructuary mortgage of his zamindari including his sir land does not so “lose or part with his proprietary rights” within the meaning of s. 7 of Act XII of 1881 as to become an ex-proprietary tenant of his sir land. Bhagwan Singh v. Murli Singh, I. L. R. 1 All. 459, and Indar Sen v. Naubat Singh, I. L. R. 7 All. 553, referred to, and the judgments of the minority of the Court in the latter case approved. Khiali Ram v. Nathu Lal, I. L. R. 15 All. 219, and Jarao Bibi v. Kifayat Ali Khan, All. Weekly Notes (1893) 177, referred to. MADHO BHARTI v. BARTI SINGH . . . . . I. L. R. 16 All. 337

4. — Ex-proprietary tenant—Ex-proprietary tenancy arising on sale of part of the zamindar's share. In order that the provisions of s. 7 of Act XII of 1881 may come into operation, it is not necessary that the zamindar should lose or part with his proprietary rights in respect of the whole of his interest in the mehal. BHAWANI PRASAD v. GHULAM MUHAMMED.

MURLIDHAR v. PEMRAJ . . . . . I. L. R. 22 All. 205

5. — Ex-proprietary tenancy. The words “held by him as sir” in s. 7 of Act XII of 1881 (N.-W. P. Rent Act) must be construed to mean land belonging to him, or to which he was entitled, as sir, and as literal an interpretation should be placed upon these words as is consistent with the canons of construction. In 1879 one of the defendants sold a one-third share of certain sir land in a village to the plaintiff, who, at that time, was in cultivatory possession thereof under a deed of mortgage executed in his favour by the same defendant in 1877. The plaintiff alleged that, after the sale, he continued in possession of the sir land till 1884, when he was dispossessed thereof by the defendants. He sued for recovery of possession of the land. Held, that the defendants, being ex-proprietary tenants of the land in dispute, were entitled to hold possession thereof, by operation of law, with reference to the terms of s. 7 of the N.-W. P. Rent Act; and the plaintiff's contention that because for four or five years the defendants failed to assert their ex-proprietary tenant rights, they were debarred from doing so, could only be well founded if there had been any provision either in the Limitation Act or the Rent Act creating such a disability. Held, also, that, notwithstanding the fact that the plaintiff was in possession of the land in dispute as mortgagee at the time of the sale, and continued in possession afterwards, his vendor must be taken to have “held” the land as his sir at the time of the sale of his proprietary interest, within the meaning of s. 7 of the Rent Act. HARJAS v. s. 7—*contd.

being the whole of the sir land appertaining to the 10 biswas share. The deed of mortgage authorised the mortgagee to retain possession of the land until payment of the mortgage-money and to receive profits in lieu of interest; and he obtained possession accordingly. In 1872 F, W, and A gave to other persons usufructuary mortgage of their 5 biswas share together with a moiety of the 87 bighas of sir land; and it was stated in the deed that half the mortgage-money due to K on the mortgage of 1869 was due by the executants, and that they accordingly left the same with the mortgagees in order that the latter might redeem. In November 1876 H's 5 biswas share, together with its sir land, was sold in execution of a decree. Subsequently, K, alleging that the mortgagees under the deed of 1872 and the purchasers under the execution sale of 1876 had dispossessed him, and that his mortgage-debt had not been paid, sued to recover possession of the 87 bighas of sir land, by virtue of his mortgage-deed of 1869. The Court of first instance held that the plaintiff was not entitled to enforce his mortgage in respect of F's and W's share in the 87 bighas, because they were not parties to the deed of 1869. The lower Appellate Court further held that from the date of the execution sale of November 1876 H became an ex-proprietary tenant of his sir land, and that to give the plaintiff possession thereof would be contrary to the provisions of s. 7 of Act XVIII of 1873 (N.-W. P. Rent Act). Held, that, inasmuch as it was clear that at the time when the mortgage-deed of 1869 was executed F and W were aware of the transaction which made K, the mortgagee, under the deed, of the whole property, and that, knowing this, they allowed the possession of A, J, and H to appear as if covering the entire zamindari rights in the 10 biswas share of the sir land, and inasmuch as the statements contained in the mortgage-deed of 1872 were an admission on the part of F and W that the mortgage of 1869 was executed with their consent, the equitable doctrine contained in s. 4 of the Transfer of Property Act applied to the case and F and W had no defence, either in law or in equity, to the plaintiff's suit, with reference to their shares, and for the purpose of obviating the lien of 1869. Ramcoomar Koondoo v. Mcqueen, 11 B. L. R. 46, referred to. Per MAHMOOD, J., with reference to the effect of the execution-sale of November 1876, in regard to the provisions of s. 7 of Act XVIII of 1873, that the general rule that statutory provisions have no retrospective operation did not apply to the case; that, by reason of the sale, H, who had proprietary rights in the mehal, and held the 5 biswas share of the sir as such (the word "held" as used in s. 7 of the Rent Act not being confined to manual or physical holding), lost his proprietary rights, and so became an ex-proprietary tenant of the land belonging to him at that time; that although the mortgage of 1869 must not be so affected as to deprive the mortgagee

7. — and s. 14—*Suit for profits—Ex-proprietary tenant—Sir land held equally. A certain mehal, of which the plaintiff in this suit claimed a one-third share of the profits for a certain year, belonged in equal shares to the defendant (lambardar), and S and R, his two brothers, who had certain sir land in partnership. The plaintiff had acquired the share of S by auction-purchase, S thus becoming an ex-proprietary tenant. The sir land was not included in the rent-roll of the mehal, but was admitted by the defendant to be assessable with rent at a certain rate per bigha. Held, that, whatever might be the course proper to be taken for the purpose of assessing such sir land or S's share of it with rent, and notwithstanding that such course had not been taken, the plaintiff was entitled in this suit to claim and obtain his share in the profits of the sir land. *MUHAMMAD ALI v. —Expenses of cultivating sir land held in partnership by plaintiff and defendant. A recorded co-sharer of a mehal sued the lambardar for his share of the profits of the mehals for the year 1286 Fasli. At the time of the institution of the suit, the profits for 1287 and 1288 also were due, but no claim was then made in respect of them. The suit was struck off on account of the non-appearance of the parties under s. 140 of Act XII of 1881 (N.-W. P. Rent Act) with leave to the plaintiff to bring a fresh suit. Subsequently the plaintiff brought a suit against the same defendant for his share of the profits of the mehals for 1287 and 1288 Fasli. Held, that the Courts below had properly refused to deduct from the plaintiff's claim as "village expenses" within the meaning of s. 93 (h) of the Rent Act certain charges on account of the expenses of cultivation of sir land held in partnership by the plaintiff and the defendant. MULCHAND v. The effect of the provisions of ss. 93 (i), 171 and 177 of the N.-W. P. II, Art. 179—Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901), s. 175 et seq.—Appeal. A landholder obtained under Act XII of 1881, s. 35, a decree for arrears of rent against certain tenants. The decree-holder did not attempt to execute this decree against the tenants, until more than three years had elapsed from the date thereof; but meanwhile she did apply for and obtained the ejectment of the tenants. Held, that execution of the decree was barred and that the decree-holder's application for ejectment could not operate to save limitation. Sed quære, whether any appeal lay from the order of the first Court (Assistant Collector) disallowing execution. *Kharag Singh v. The tenant assigned his right to get the assessed value of the crops from the zamindar to a third person. Held, on suit by the assignee to recover the amount of the assessment, (i) that the assignee's proper remedy was by suit in a Court of Revenue, and not by application to execute the order awarding compensation; (ii) that the suit was not a suit of the nature cognizable by a Court of Small Causes; and (ii) that the assignment to the plaintiff after the award had been made was not an assignment of an actionable claim within the meaning of s. 135 of Act No. IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property). MATHURA DAS v. CROOKE . I. L. R. 2 All. 296

2. — Suit against Municipal Committee—Claim for a declaration of right—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Art. 120—Cause of action. The lessee of certain land belonging to the plaintiffs, situate within the limits of a Municipality, applied to the Municipal Committee for permission to establish a market on such land, and such permission was refused by the Committee on the 26th November, 1878. Meanwhile, the plaintiffs, on behalf of the lessee and on their own behalf as proprietors of such land, applied to the Committee for such permission, sending such application by post. No orders were passed by the Committee on such application because it had come by post. On the 18th April, 1879, the plaintiffs sued the Committee for a declaration of their right to establish a market on such land, and for a perpetual injunction restraining the Collector as President of the Committee from interfering with their so doing. The cause of action alleged was the refusal of the Committee of the 26th November 1878. Held by STUART, C.J., on the question whether such suit was barred by the provisions of s. 43 of Act XV of 1873, not having been brought within three months next after the date of the alleged cause of action, that it was not so barred, inasmuch as the provisions of that section were only applicable to suits brought against a Committee for something done under that Act in which compensation was claimed, and not to those in which compensation was not claimed; and that therefore the present suit was not governed by the provisions of that section, but by Art. 120, Sch. II of Act XV of 1877. Also, that the rejection of the lessee's application gave the plaintiffs a cause of action, as there was privity between them and the lessee; and that, as there was nothing in the Municipal rules prohibiting the presentation of an application by post, the application of the plaintiffs should not have been rejected. Held by DUTHOIT, J., that the suit of the plaintiffs was governed by the provisions of s. 43 of Act XV of 1873, and was therefore beyond time. Municipal Committee of Moradabad v. Chatri Singh, I. (c) of s. 55 of Act XV of 1883 was not intended to empower a Municipal Board to make rules which would enable it to confiscate private rights without making any compensation, or to treat as nuisances acts which are not in law or with regard to public health or convenience capable of being considered nuisances. The clause was meant to give to Municipal Boards power to make rules for prohibiting the establishment of markets, that is, to prevent new markets being established, and to give them power to control the maintenance of existing markets or of markets which might be established with their sanction. By "maintenance" is meant the keeping up of a market in such a manner as would make it a fit place for the carrying on of a market having regard to public health and public convenience. GANGA NARAIN v. 2. — and s. 71—Municipal rules—Infringement of rules—Prosecutions—N.-W. P. Government Notification No. 865, dated the 3rd November, 1869—Rule VI, legality of. Municipal Boards and Magistrates should see that, before prosecutions are instituted under the municipal rules care is taken that the requirements of s. 69 of Act XV of 1883 (N.-W. P. and Oudh Municipalities Act) are satisfied. A District Magistrate, who was also Chairman of a Municipal Board, having information that a certain person had evaded the payment of octroi duty, directed his prosecution for breach of municipal rules. The Magistrate, in thus causing proceedings to be taken, acted wholly of his own motion and authority. The accused was tried and convicted under Rule 6, Government, N.-W. P., Notification No. 865, dated the 3rd November 1869, read with s. 45 of Act XV of 1873 (N.-W. P. and Oudh Municipalities Act). This rule provided that any person evading or abetting the evasion of the octroi duties specified in a schedule should be deemed to have committed an infringement of a bye-law. It purported to have been made under s. 12 of Act VI of 1868 (Municipal Improvements Act, N.-W. P.), which authorized the making of "rules as to the persons by whom, and the manner in which, any assessment of taxes under this Act shall be confirmed, and for the collection of such taxes." Held, that, assuming the rule to have been legally made under s. 12 of Act VI of 1868, which was not clear, and that it was saved by s. 2 of Act XV of 1873, it would, as declared in s. 71 of Act XV of 1883 (N.-W. P. and Oudh Municipalities Act), continue in force until repealed by new rules made under such last-mentioned Act, and be deemed to have been made under that Act, and its operation was therefore subject to the provisions of that Act, and among them to s. 69, which made it a condition precedent to the institution of a prosecution against the petitioner, that there should be a complaint of the Municipal Board or of some person authorized by the Board in that behalf. Held, that the position of the Magistrate of the district in connection with s. 69 was neither better nor worse than that of any other member of the Board, and unless he had been duly authorized by the Board as a Board, he had no more locus standi to cause a prosecution to be instituted personally than any other individual member; and the words of s. 69 being mandatory, and the petitioner having from the outset urged this objection to the legality of the proceedings, he was entitled to the benefit of it now, and the conviction was illegal and must be set aside. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. 1. ——— Calcutta Municipal Act (Beng. III of 1899). ss. 406, 407, 408 and 474—Notice under s. 408—Standard plan—Necessity of attaching a copy of the plan to the notice—

Bustee improvement—Power and duty of the Corporation in respect thereof. The duty of the Corporation in improving bustees is a most important one and they have been invested with the most ample power, but when certain penal sections enforced by the criminal law are put in motion on the report of the servants of the municipality
it is incumbent on the Magistrate and the authorities of the Corporation to see that the legal procedure which is a condition precedent to any conviction, is strictly and properly carried out.
Where a letter was issued by the Deputy Chairman requiring the petitioners to do certain works, but no notice under s. 408 was issued directing them to

specifically carry out the works : Held, that the conviction of the petitioners under s. 277 of Beng. Act III of 1899 for neglecting to carry out the works, cannot stand. When the Municipality directs one of several owners of a bustee to carry out certain improvements and issues a general notice under s. 408 of Beng. Act III of 1899, it is the duty of the Municipality to serve him with a copy of the standard plan approved by the General Committee under s. 407 and point out to him on that plan what work he is to do. *KANAI LAL JALAN v. 2. ——— Public Demands Recovery Act (Beng. Act I of 1895), s. 10—Non-service of notice, effect of—"Adult"—Sale—Suit to set aside sale—Procedure—Limitation—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 244, 312—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Sch. II, Art. 12 (b). Where it is alleged that notice has not been served under s. 10 of the Public Demands Recovery Act, the onus is on the party alleging want of notice. Rakhal Chandra Rai Chowdhuri v. Secretary of State, I. L. R. 12 Calc. 603, referred to. It is not sufficient that such notice should be actually served ; it must be served in accordance with the provisions of s. 31 of the Act "Adult" in that section does not mean a person who has attained majority within the meaning of the Majority Act, but a person of such an age as to be capable and responsible for the due communication of the notice to the member of the family for whom it is intended. A duly made certificate has on its filing the force and effect of a decree. Until, however, service of notice under s. 10, which has the effect of an attachment, no particular property is bound by the decree. A sale without prior attachment is irregular, but not a nullity. Kishory Mohun Roy v. Mahomed Mujaffar Hossein, I. L. R. 18 Calc. 188, referred to. The due making and filing of the certificate gives it the effect of a decree, and therefore non-service of notice under s. 10 does not affect the validity of the certificate itself. A suit to set aside a sale on the sole ground that the decree under which it was held was an invalid decree simply because of absence of notice under s. 10, fails because such absence of notice does not affect the validity of the decree. Baijnath Sahai v. Ramgut Singh, I. L. R. 23 Calc. 775, followed. Saroda Charan Bandopadhyaya v. Kista Mohun Bhattacharjee, 1 C. W. N. 516 ; *Chunder Kumar Mukerjee v. The Secretary of State, I. L. immoveable property in Calcutta. Ss. 244 and 312 of the Civil Procedure Code apply to execution proceedings under the Public Demands Recovery Act. Art. 12 (b), Sch. II, of the Limitation Act bars the suit. HARI CHARAN SINGH v. CHANDRA KUMAR DEY (1907)

3. ——— "Adult," meaning of—Public Demands Recovery Act (Bengal Act I of 1895), ss. 10, 12, 31—The Collector of 24-Parganas—Certificate Officer. A person above the age of sixteen years at the date of the service of notice is an "Adult" within the meaning of s. 31 of the Public Demands Recovery Act. When a notice under s. 10 of the Public Demands Recovery Act actually reaches the judgment-debtor and he contests the claim, it cannot be said that the notice was not validly served because the person on whom the service was made is not proved to be residing with the judgment-debtor, the object of serving the notice being to enable the judgment-debtor to contest his liability. The Collector of 24-Parganas is the proper Certificate Officer to enforce a certificate under the Act against immoveable property in Calcutta. HARI CHARAN SINGH v. CHANDRA KUMAR DEY (1907)

4. ——— Cantonment property—Grant—Offer of compensation—Condition precedent—Notice to one of three executors—Joint occupants. Held, that the notice of resumption was not a condition precedent to the right of resumption. Even assuming that notice was a condition precedent, that provision had been satisfied by giving notice to one of the three executors, who were joint occupants. The provision as to notice was nothing more than a statement of what will be done, when practicable, for the purpose of saving the occupant from such inconvenience as an immediate resumption might involve. *SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v. nicipality—The Municipality not keeping a ditch and sluices at a dam in proper order—Collection of the storm water in the ditch—The water passing over lands of another and doing damage. The plaintiff sued to recover damages from the defendant Municipality for injury done to his property by storm water. The water had collected in an adjoining ditch, which the Municipality had not kept in a state of repair, but had allowed it to be choked with the rubbish of the town. They constructed a dam in the adjoining creek, but allowed the sluices at the dam to be choked up with weeds, sedges and silt. The consequence was that the storm water which had collected in the creek passed on to the plaintiff's land and did damage. Held, that there was misfeasance on the part of the Municipality, for they had turned their works by their negligence into a nuisance so as to throw the water collected on their property—the creek—on to the plaintiff's

1. ——— Order to close drain—Criminal Procedure Code, 1861, ss. 62, 308—Power of Magistrate—Order not in writing. The accused was fined by the Magistrate for not having closed a drain in pursuance of the verbal order of the Magistrate. Held, that the Magistrate should have proceeded under Ch. XX, Act XXV of 1861, inasmuch as the nuisance was not one from which immediate danger was apprehended, and not under s. 62, which empowered the Magistrate to put an immediate determination to the continuance thereof. A written order not having been given, the procedure was faulty, and therefore quashed. Only Magistrates of a district or division can act under Ch. XX, s. 308. GOVERNMENT v. CHOONEELALL

Before a prohibitory order under s. 518 can be made, there ought to be information or evidence before the Magistrate that the act prohibited was likely to cause a riot or affray, and that the stoppage of that act would prevent such riot or affray. GOSHAIN LUCHMUN PERSHAD POOREE v. In 1886, in which year there was no fresh promulgation of the order, the Saraogis took their procession along another route and at different hour, and for so doing some of them were convicted and sentenced under s. 188 of the Penal Code. Held, that the conviction was wrong, the order of 1876 having a temporary operation only. Gopi Mohun Mullick v. Without ascertaining the rights of the parties, the Magistrate made certain orders, the effect of which was to exclude the auction-purchaser for some time from exercising the right alleged to have passed to him under the purchase. Held, that the Magistrate ought to have made no order at all with reference to the property, leaving it to the parties to determine their rights in the Civil Court, and that he had ample power under the section to do what was necessary to prevent a breach of the peace. *LALOO v. 24. ———— Dispute as to right of possession—Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 518—Breach of peace imminent—Order not to interfere with a temple. Where a dispute arises as to the right of the possession of lands and buildings, a Magistrate, if he considers a collision between the parties and a serious breach of the peace imminent, may properly proceed under Ch. 39, instead of Ch. 40 of the Criminal Procedure Code. If the Magistrate had jurisdiction, the proceedings, not being judicial, cannot be revised by the High Court. An order to abstain from interference with a temple, and its property is an order to abstain from a "certain act" within the meaning of s. 518 of the Criminal Procedure Code. *ELAVARISU VANAMAMALAI RAMANUJA JEEYARSVANI v. With a view to prevent the dangers arising from overcrowding, and to improve the ventilation, the Magistrate, by a written order, under s. 62 of the Criminal Procedure Code, directed the hereditary priests of the temple to widen and lighten the doorway. Held, that such order was legal under the above section. Semble: That the

By "persons living or carrying on business in the neighbourhood," injury to whom the power to pass orders under s. 133 is intended to prevent, are meant, not the persons who in the exercise of their private rights may use a building supposed to be in a dangerous condition, but unascertained members of the public whose ordinary avocations may take them to the neighbourhood of such building. *Queen-Empress v. The dismissed trustees retained possession. A breach of the peace having become imminent in the opinion of a Deputy Magistrate, he made an order, under the Criminal Procedure Code, s. 144, directing the newly-appointed trustees not to interfere with the temple or its management. Held, that the Magistrate had jurisdiction to make the order, and the High Court declined to interfere on revision. *PALANI-APPA CHETTI v. 28. ——— Order as to procession in public streets—Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 518—Public worship—Conflict of rights—Duty of Magistrate when public peace threatened. In affording special protection to persons assembled for religious worship or religious ceremonies, the law points to congregational rather than private worship, and it may fairly be required of congregations that they should inform the Magistrate or police at what hours they customarily assemble for worship, in order that the rights of other persons may not be unduly curtailed. No sect is entitled to deprive others for ever of the right to use the public streets for processions, on the plea of the sanctity of their place of worship, or on the plea that worship is carried on therein day and night. The duties of a Magistrate in cases where the public peace is likely to be disturbed by one sect attempting to prevent another from using the public streets for processions, discussed. The

31. ——— Trespass by cattle—Penal Code, s. 188. A Magistrate issued an order warning owners of cattle to take proper care of them; and that in case of disobedience or neglect they would be punished according to law, and did punish them for disobedience under s. 188 of the Penal Code. Held, that the Magistrate was not competent, under s. 62 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1861, to pass such an order. The order contemplated under that section is in the nature of an injunction, and such an order passed by a Magistrate would not be legal. The conviction under s. 188 of the Penal Code was therefore illegal. In the matter of AMIRADDI . . . 2 B. L. R. A. Cr. 45

39. ———— Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 518. The operation of s. 518, Criminal Procedure Code, was confined to cases where, in the opinion of the Magistrate, the delay which would be caused by adopting a different procedure from that specified in the explanation to that section would "occasion a greater evil than that suffered by the person on whom the order is made or would defeat the intention of this (39th) Chapter." Where a Magistrate, without hearing the petitioner or giving him an opportunity of being heard, and simply on the foundation of a police officer's report, directed the petitioner to abstain from holding a hât upon his land on a certain day because another party had long been accustomed to hold a hât on his land adjacent to the petitioner's hât on the day following that on which the petitioner held his hât, it was held that his order passed under s. 518 was ultra vires, the police officer's report being vague and insufficient, and a private interest of this kind not affording a ground for making an order under s. 518 or any other order under the Criminal Procedure Code. *BANEE MADHUB GHOSE v. 41. ———— Order prohibiting holding of hât—Criminal Procedure Code, ss. 134, 144—Penal Code, s. 188—Disobeying order of public servant—Trader at hât. A District Magistrate, by an order made under s. 144 of the Criminal Procedure Code, after stating that it appeared that one "G G S has recently established a hât at S in the vicinity of K, an old-established hât, and held it on the same days, and that, in consequence of the establishment of the new hât and the endeavours made to induce or force people to frequent the new hât instead of the old one, a serious breach of the peace or riots are imminent," ordered that the said G G S and all other persons abstain from holding such hât on those days. The order was duly made and promulgated, but not strictly in accordance with s. 134 of the Code, and the orders of Government made thereunder. Notwithstanding the order, one P C A was found exposing goods for sale as a trader at the hât on one of the prohibited days, and he was thereupon charged with disobeying the order of the Magistrate, and convicted of an offence under s. 188 of the Penal Code. Held, that the conviction was bad, as P C A did not come within the description of the persons intended by the order to be prohibited from "holding" the hât, which referred to "holding" as owner or manager, not as a trader. Held, also, that the terms of s. 134 of the Code and the notification made by Government thereunder as to promulgation and issue of an order are directory, but an omission to follow strictly such direction, though it is an irregularity, does invalidate the order: where therefore it is shown that the order has been brought to the actual knowledge of the persons sought to be affected by it, such omission does not prevent the case coming within s. 188 of the Penal Code. *In the matter of the petition of PARBUTTY CHARAN AICH. revision when order cannot be made under that section. An order regulating the boat traffic at a certain landing place of a river in the manner directed by the order passed in this case held to be not an order that is authorized by s. 144 of the Criminal Procedure Code. If the order be one that cannot be made under s. 144 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the mere fact of the order purporting to have been made under that section does not prevent the High Court from interfering with it in revision. *Abayeswari Debi v. The Joint Magistrate of Dacca, purporting to act under s. 144 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, ordered R or any of his subordinates to refrain from entering upon the lands and properties and directed him to show cause why the order should not be made absolute or rescinded. No cause being shown when the case was called on, the order was made absolute ex parte. Held, that looking at the nature of the case and to the language of s. 144, Criminal Procedure Code it was clear that the section does not apply to a case like the present and the order purporting to be made under that section is therefore bad. Held, further, that when an order, though purporting to be made under s. 144, does not properly come within the scope of that section, the High Court's power of revision is not ousted by the provision in the last part of s. 435 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. *Ananda Chandra Bhattacharjee v. The order was posted in different quarters of the city, including the street in which the accused had his dwelling-house. A few days after the promulgation of this order, the accused gave a feast in a private house to about 500 people of his caste. He was thereupon convicted of disobedience to an order duly promulgated by a public servant under s. 188, cl (b) of the Penal Code, and sentenced to a fine of Rs. 35. Held, reversing the conviction and sentence, that the District Magistrate's order was, both in its substance and its manner of publication, illegal, as being beyond the powers conferred by s. 144 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The power of the Magistrate under that section is confined to the direction to a particular person to abstain from acts of a certain character, or to the public generally to abstain from similar acts when frequenting a particular place. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. It is only in the case of emergency, or where the circumstances do not admit of the serving in due time of a notice upon such person, that service of notice is dispensed with, and the order may be made ex parte under sub-s. (2). Where therefore an order was passed by the Magistrate directing the petitioners to remove certain huts erected by them within three hours from time of service of order and there was nothing on the record or in the Magistrate's explanation to show that there was any emergency in the matter or that it was of such a nature that the circumstances did not admit of the service in due time of the notice upon the petitioners, the High Court set aside the order. *MAHAMADDI MOLLAH v. fact and Mahomedan law, so as to satisfy himself as to what are the actual rights of the parties to the lands in dispute. If he has good reasons to believe that such a dispute is likely to cause a breach of the peace, the law enables him to ascertain and maintain actual possession, or, if it is shown that the members of the family are inclined to break the peace, he can bind them all over to keep the peace. Where there was a dispute between the parties, who were related to one another as to the amount of their shares to certain property which was claimed on the one hand to be joined in certain shares and on the other hand to exclusively belong to the other party, and no proceedings had been taken under s. 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, nor was there anything to show that there was any probability of a breach of the peace, the Magistrate passed the following order: "The applicants must not plough more than 12 annas of the land." Held, that such an order could not properly fall within s. 144 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, as an order under that section could only be passed on some emergency and would have effect for only two months. The present order in its operation would have effect, and was intended to have effect, until the parties went to a Civil Court to settle their disputes, and no emergency was even suggested. A civil suit was then filed, and during its pendency a second application was made under s. 133 of Act X of 1882, with a like object, which was refused on the ground that the civil suit was pending and that there was no likelihood of a breach of the peace. The civil suit resulted in the way being held to be a public thoroughfare. A third application was then made under s. 133 to have the obstruction removed, but the Magistrate held that in face of the two previous orders he could not interfere. Held, that the order of the Magistrate was wrong, upon the ground that he was bound to make such inquiry, and as there never had been any inquiry into the matter, the first decision being no decision at all, but a mere dictum of the Magistrate upon a personal local investigation without hearing evidence, and thus not on judicial inquiry, and the second decision being based merely upon the pen-

91. ———— Order to pull down house—Criminal Procedure Code, 1861, s. 308—Report of jurors—Illegal order—Obstruction to public way. The Magistrate of a district issued an order, under s. 308 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, calling upon the petitioner to remove a building, on the ground that it was unlawful obstruction upon a high road. A jury of five persons was appointed by the Magistrate's successor, under s. 310, to report within fifteen days whether the order was reasonable and proper. The jurors, being without instruction, took different views as to the performance of their duties; but four of them visited the premises, and were unanimous in finding that the building complained of was not on the high road at all. Five days after receiving reports to this effect, the Magistrate issued another order to the petitioner, requiring him to pull down his house within fifteen days, as the jurors had made no report within the time prescribed. The petitioner showed cause under s. 313, but without effect, and the order was repeated. The proceedings were ultimately forwarded to the Sessions Judge, whose successor in office returned them with the remark that nothing appeared to have been done contrary to the law for the removal of nuisances. Held, that the petitioner had shown sufficient cause to satisfy the Magistrate, under s. 313, that the order to pull down the house was not reasonable and proper. *REG. v. 94. ———— Functions of jury—Obstruction—Public thoroughfare—Procedure. Before a Magistrate can make an order under s. 521 of the Code of Criminal Procedure to remove an obstruction from a path alleged to be a public thoroughfare, he must first, in a proceeding held under s. 532, have come to the conclusion that the path is open to the use of the public. The only functions which a jury appointed under s. 523 can exercise are to consider whether the order made by the Magistrate under s. 521 is reasonable and proper, it being no part of their duty to determine the rights of parties in property. Held, therefore, that where a Magistrate, through a mistaken view of the law, ordered the removal of an obstruction on a pathway under s. 521, and had further submitted this order to the consideration of a jury appointed under s. 523, before he had himself come to a conclusion whether such pathway was a public thoroughfare, the only course left open to him under such circumstances was to stay all proceedings initiated under s. 521, and take action under s. 532. In the matter of the petition of CHUNDER NATH SEN I. 101. Criminal Procedure Code (V of 1898), ss. 133-139—Bonâ fide question of title—Jurisdiction of Magistrate and jury in such cases. Upon the institution of proceedings under s. 133, Criminal Procedure Code, the opposite party raised the contention that the way alleged to be obstructed was not one which is or may be lawfully used by the public. The Magistrate, without dealing with this objection, referred it to a jury, and upon receiving their report that it was a reasonable and proper order, he directed the removal of the obstruction. Held, that the Magistrate should have found whether the objection taken was a bonâ fide one, and if he found it to be so, he should have abstained from further action until the public right of way had been determined by a competent Court. Luckhee Narain Banerjee v. Ram Kumar Mukerjee, I. L. R. 15 Calc. 561, followed. The jury was not competent to decide whether the way alleged to be obstructed was public or not, for the decision of this matter affected the right of the Magistrate to interfere under s. 133, and it is only when the Magistrate is competent to pass an order under the section that a jury can be appointed to consider whether it is a reasonable and proper order. Whether the Magistrate had not expressly found that the objection was made bonâ fide, but the police report made by his order contained ample reason for such finding, the High Court set aside the order under s. 139 as ultra vires. *NASARUDDI v. 102. Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882), s. 133—Question of title—Bonâ fides of claim of title, right of Magistrate to enquire into—Jurisdiction of Civil Court. In a proceeding under s. 133 of the Criminal Procedure Code for the purpose of compelling the removal of an obstruction from a public way where a bonâ fide question as to the way being public is raised, there is no jurisdiction to make an order under the section, and the question should be left for determination by the Civil Court. To have this effect, however, the claim must be bonâ fide, and not a mere pretence to oust jurisdiction, and it is for the Magistrate to say whether the claim be bonâ fide or not. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. The claim of title must, however, be bonâ fide and not a mere pretence to oust jurisdiction and it is for the Magistrate to say whether the claim is a bonâ fide one or a pretence. Luckhee Narain Banerjee v. Ram Kumar Mukherjee, I. L. R. 15 Calc. 561, and Queen-Empress v. Bissessur Sahu, I. L. R. 17 Calc. 562, followed. Although no length of enjoyment can legalize a public nuisance—see Municipal Commissioners of Calcutta v. Mahomed Ali, 7 B. L. R. 499—yet the long possession or enjoyment of what is said to be a nuisance may give to the objection of the person so possessing or enjoying it the character of a bonâ fide dispute as to title such as might have the effect of ousting the jurisdiction of the Magistrate under ss. 133 and 137 of the Code, and making the question a proper one for the Civil Court. *PREONATH DEY v. tion by public servant not to repeat or continue—Criminal Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 134, 143, 144, Sch. V, Form 20. To support a conviction under s. 291 of the Penal Code, there must be proof of an injunction to the accused individually against repeating or continuing the same particular public nuisance. It must be shown that the person convicted had on some previous occasion committed the particular nuisance, had been enjoined not to repeat or continue it, and had repeated or continued it. The authority under which a Magistrate can order or enjoin a person against repeating or continuing a public nuisance is s. 143 of the Criminal Procedure Code. It is the infringement of this order that is punishable under s. 291 of the Penal Code. What is contemplated is an order addressed to a particular person. A Magistrate's powers to deal with public nuisances are contained in Chapters X and XI of the Criminal Procedure Code. Chapter XI is only properly applicable to temporary orders in urgent cases. It is only in such cases that an order may be made ex parte, and any exception is allowed to the general rule that it shall be directed to a particular individual. In such emergent cases an order may, under s. 144 of the Code, be directed to the public generally, when frequenting or visiting a particular place, to abstain from a certain act: but this provision does not apply to a proclamation directed not to the public generally frequenting or visiting a particular place, but to a portion of the community. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. The Jains complained to the Magistrate that the accused had made the air offensive, and caused annoyance. The Magistrate found that the meat was not in an offensive state, but convicted the accused of committing a public nuisance, under s. 268 of the Penal Code, on the ground that he had done an act by which several persons, being Jains, were much annoyed, it being a well-known fact that they had great repugnance to the killing of animals of every sort. Held, reversing the conviction and sentence, that in this case no real damage or injury was caused to the public or to the people in general dwelling in the vicinity, and that it was a case of private rather than of public nuisance, and therefore not one falling within the purview of the criminal law. The applicant's act was an annoyance merely by reason of its hurting the feelings of the Jains who have a repugnance to the killing of animals, and did not constitute an offence under s. 291 of the Penal Code. Muttumira

14. ——— Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 268, 283-290. The mere fact of an encroachment on a tidal navigable river does not necessarily amount to a public nuisance so as to render a person causing such encroachment liable to punishment under s. 290 of the Penal Code, but there must be evidence that such encroachment causes one of the results specified in s. 268. In the matter of the petition of Umesh Chandra Kar, I. L. R. 14 Calc. 656, considered and commented on. The rule laid down in that case to the effect that any encroachment, however slight, on a tidal navigable river constitutes an offence under s. 290, is too widely stated. Each case should be determined on its own merits, and a decision arrived at as to whether the encroachment has caused an obstruction or not. The petitioner was charged with having erected a jag in a tidal navigable river constructed of tress and dams, and thereby having committed offences under ss. 281 and 290 of the Penal Code. There was evidence to show that the jag was about 45 cubits long and 20 cubits broad, and that it was erected on the silted side of the river where it was about 300 hats broad, and that it did not obstruct the ordinary navigation of the river. The lower Court held that the jag could not but cause an obstruction, and convicted the petitioner under s. 283. Held, that, as there was no evidence to show that the petitioner had caused any danger, obstruction, or injury to any person in any public way or line of navigation, the conviction under that section could not be sustained. Held,

But where certain Mahomedans, for a religious purpose, killed two cows before sunrise in a private compound partly visible from a public road, and the killing of one of the cows only was witnessed by one Hindu :—Held, that the circumstances proved did not amount to the commission of a public nuisance as defined in s. 268 of the Code. *Muttumira v. 16. ——— Cremation—Disobedience to an order duly promulgated by a public servant—Penal Code (1860), ss. 188 and 290—Criminal Procedure Code, s. 143—Illegal order. On the 11th August, 1894, the District Magistrate promulgated an order prohibiting the people of the village of Thirukodikaval from using their burning grounds situated on the southern bank of the Cauvery, and directing them to use other burning grounds which had been provided. On the 11th May, 1895, certain persons, in defiance of this order cremated a corpse at the spot interdicted and were convicted under ss. 188 and 290 of the Penal Code, but the conviction under s. 188 was reversed on appeal. Held, that when persons entitled to use particular spot dedicated for the communal purpose of cremation, use it for that purpose in a manner neither unusual nor calculated to aggravate the inconveniences necessarily incidental to such an act as is generally performed in this country, they cannot be convicted of a public nuisance on the ground that their act caused material annoyance and discomfort to persons near the place on the occasion referred to. Held, further, that the order of the District Magistrate was not warranted by s. 143, Criminal Procedure Code, or by any other law, and must therefore be set aside. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. as a witness is a condition precedent to the administration to him of an oath or affirmation, and is a question distinct from that of his credibility when he has been sworn or has affirmed. In determining the question of competency, the Court, under s. 118 of the Evidence Act, has not to enter into enquiries as to the witness's religious belief, or as to his knowledge of the consequences of falsehood in this world or the next. It has to ascertain, in the best way it can, whether, from the extent of his intellectual capacity and understanding, he is able to give a rational account of what he has seen or heard or done on a particular occasion. If a person of tender years or of very advanced age can satisfy these requirements, his competency as a witness is established. Having regard to the language of the Oaths Act (X of 1873), a Court has no option, when once it has elected to take the statements of a person as evidence, but to administer to such person either an oath or affirmation as the case may require. Queen-Empress v. Maru, I. L. R. 10 All. 207, referred to. In a trial for murder before the Court of Session, one of the witnesses was a boy of twelve years of age, and, in answer to questions put by the Sessions Judge, he said that he worshipped Debi and understood the difference between truth and falsehood; that he did not know what would be the consequences here and hereafter of telling lies, but that he would tell the truth. The Sessions Judge proceeded to record the boy's statement, but without administering to him any oath or affirmation. Held, that there was nothing in law to sanction this procedure on the part of the Judge. The High Court required the attendance of the boy and of the accused, and, having satisfied itself of the competency of the former to depose as a witness, examined him as to his account of what had occurred. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. 1. ————— s. 8—Oath purporting to affect a third person—Revocation of consent to be bound by statement made on oath taken in a particular form. The plaintiff in a civil suit offered to be bound by the statement which the defendant might make on oath holding the arm of his son. The defendant accepted the proposal, took the required oath, and made a statement which had the effect of defeating the plaintiff's claim. When the defendant came into Court to take the oath, the plaintiff attempted to revoke his proposal, but alleged no further reason than that he did not understand what he had intended and did not think the defendant would speak the truth. Held, that the form of oath above indicated ought not, having regard to s. 8 of Act X of 1873, to have been administered; but as it had been administered, and was a form of oath specially binding upon Hindus, the statement made upon it should be accepted. Held, also, that, when one party to a suit offers to be bound by the oath of the other party, and such other party accepts the proposal, the party so offering to be bound should not be allowed to revoke his proposal except upon the strongest possible grounds proved to the satisfaction of the Court to be genuine grounds for revoking the proposal. *Lekh Raj Singh v. The provisions of ss. 8-11 of the Oaths Act (X of 1873) do not apply to criminal proceedings. The expression "party to a judicial proceeding" in s. 8 of the Act does not include either the complainant or the accused in a criminal case. In the course of a trial on a charge of assault the complainant's pleader agreed to be bound by the evidence on oath of a material witness, provided he swore on the Gita (a sacred book of the Hindus). The witness took the required oath, and stated that there was no assault, but merely a taking held of the hand. The Magistrate did not believe this witness, and proceeded with the trial. He convicted the accused on the other evidence in the case, and sentenced him to a fine of R25. Held, that the Magistrate was not bound to decide the case on the evidence of the witness who swore the special oath. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. offer of the guardian of a minor defendant on behalf of the minor to abide by the deposition to be given by a plaintiff on oath taken in a particular form under the Indian Oaths Act stands on a very different ground from an agreement or compromise contemplated by s. 462 of the Civil Procedure Code. Nor can a pleader so bind his client. Under the Indian Oaths Act (X of 1873), no person but the party himself can make such an offer as is contemplated in s. 6. *SADASHIV RAYAJI v. sides. On appeal by plaintiff against this order of remand :—Held, (i) that there is nothing in ss. 9 to 11 of the Indian Oaths Act, 1873, which allows a party who has agreed to the administration of an oath under those sections to retract after the opponent has accepted the proposal; (ii) that the Act gives the Court a discretion to administer the oath or not, and though it should not administer it if good grounds be shown for retracting, it is justified in so doing, notwithstanding the retraction if the grounds are frivolous; (iii) that if “the matter stated,” as referred to in s. 11 of the Act, affords sufficient material for the decision of the suit, a decree may be passed on the facts so proved. But if the facts so proved are not sufficient for the decision of the case, such further facts as are necessary should be proved by evidence adduced on both sides. The Act provides, not for the adjustment of a suit in an arbitrary way, but merely for the conclusive proof of facts; such facts, if not sufficient for the decision of the suit, should be supplemented by facts duly proved by evidence; and (iv) that the facts proved by the special oath are conclusively proved, and any further evidence that may be taken should be limited to matters not proved by the oath.

1. — Agreement to be bound by oath—Judgment on such agreement—Mad. Reg. III of 1806, s. 6. The mere agreement of one of the parties to a judicial proceeding to be bound by the oath of the other is in itself no adjustment of the suit. If the matter stated in the agreement is sufficient as the grounds of a decision, a judgment may be passed, for then it would be conclusive evidence under the Oaths Act. 2. — Agreement to be bound by oath of a particular person—Discretion of Court. The Oaths Act (X of 1873) does not constrain a Court to pass a decision in favour of a particular party. If a party to a suit says he will be bound by the oath of a particular person, s. 11 of the Act only means that pro tanto he will be bound, i.e., so far as the matter of that evidence is concerned, and that evidence will be conclusive as to its truth as against him throughout the whole of the litigation. But it in no way compels the Court trying the case to accept it as conclusive. Vasudeva Shanbog v. Naraina Pai, I. L. R. 2 Mad. 356, approved. MUHAMMAD ZAHUR v. CHEDA LAL

2. Refusal to take on oath—*Effect of such refusal—Estoppel—Evidence. The plaintiff sued to recover certain land from eight defendants, alleging it to be his exclusive property. One of the defendants pleaded that he was a co-owner with the plaintiff, who had hitherto paid him his share of the rent. In the course of the case he offered to withdraw his opposition to the plaintiff's claim if the plaintiff would swear a binding oath that his (the defendant's) allegations were false, and that the plaintiff had held exclusive possession of the property. The plaintiff refused to take the proposed oath. The Court, however, attached no importance to the refusal, and on the evidence passed a decree for the plaintiff. The defendant appealed, and in the Appellate Court the plaintiff's son, on behalf of his father, refused the oath, while on the other hand the defendant said he was willing, if required, to swear to the truth of his case. The Judge was of opinion that the plaintiff's refusal to take the proposed oath and the defendant's readiness to take it was, under the circumstances of the case, conclusive, and disregarding the recorded evidence, he reversed the decree of the lower Court, and allowed the defendant's claim. Held, (reversing the appellate decree and restoring the decree of the lower Court), that the Appellate Court was wrong in deciding the case on the ground of the plaintiff's refusal to take the proposed oath. That refusal did not conclusively prove the falsity of the plaintiff's claim. It was merely a piece of conduct which was evidence to be considered in the case together with the other evidence. In this case there was abundant other evidence, all of which was in favour of the plaintiff, and his refusal to take the oath did not necessarily constitute a sufficient reason to set aside that evidence. A party who makes an oath as prescribed by his adversary confers by so doing on his statement the character of conclusive proof, but his mere refusal to make the oath does not, under the terms of the Oaths Act (X of 1873), justify any legal presumption against him. Such refusal is to be considered merely as a piece of conduct to be considered along with the other evidence. CHINTAMAN BHAT v. SHRINIVAS BHAT . . . I. L. R. 22 Bom. 680

The Sessions Judge allowed her to be examined without administering any oath or affirmation, as it was found that she did not understand the nature of either. The prisoner's counsel objected to the admissibility of her statements, but the objection was overruled, and the prisoner was convicted of murder and sentenced to death. Held, per JARDINE, J., that the girl's evidence was admissible. The "omission," referred to in s. 13 of the Indian Oaths Act (X of 1873) includes any kind of omission, and is not restricted to accidental or negligent omissions. *Queen v. Sewa Bhogta, 14 B. L. 6. ——— and s. 6—Examination as witness of a child of tender years—Intentional omission to administer affirmation. A child, aged about six years, was called as a witness in a Sessions Court. The Judge satisfied himself of his intellectual capacity to give evidence, but intentionally omitted to administer an affirmation on the ground that he was of too tender years to render any attempt to bind his conscience expedient or practically operative. The Judge did not examine the child for the purpose of eliciting whether he knew it was wrong not to tell the truth, or whether he knew the difference between right and wrong, but he told him to tell the truth and permitted him to be examined as a witness. Held, that the child should have been affirmed. Quære: Whether the omission to affirm the child having been intentional on the part of the Judge, the case came within the provisions of Oaths Act, s. 13. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. 2. ——— Destruction of book by order of Criminal Court—Penal Code, s. 293—Act X of 1872 (Criminal Procedure Code), s. 418. A book may be obscene, within the meaning of the Penal Code, although it contains but a single obscene passage. The defence to a charge of selling and distributing certain obscene books was that they were sold and distributed in good faith in prosecution of a religious controversy. Held, that the excessive obscenity of such books took away the protection which their controversial nature might otherwise have afforded them. Held, also, that the intention of the seller and distributor must be gathered from the character of the matter contained in such books. As he had chosen to sell and distribute what was obscene, it must be presumed that he intended the natural consequences of his act, namely, corruption of the minds and prejudice of the morals of the public. It was not sufficient for him to say that his intentions were good. It was his public act that must be the test of his intentions; and having done an unlawful act, it was no answer to say that he thought it lawful. Queen v. Hicklin, L. R. 3 Q. B. 360, and Steele v. Brannan, L. R. 7 C. P. 261, followed. At the conclusion of the trial of a person for the sale and distribution of obscene books, the Court trying him ordered the destruction of certain copies of such books, voluntarily surrendered by him, under s. 418 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Held, that such Court was not empowered by that section to make such an order. *EMPRESS OF INDIA v. It is not necessary that the consent of the landlord should be obtained prior to the execution proceedings. Where in execution of a money decree against the defendant an occupancy holding belonging to him was sold and he had failed to raise the objection at the time of the sale, that the holding was not transferable, although he had full knowledge of the execution proceedings and had full opportunity to raise the objection: Held, that it was not competent to him to resist the purchaser after the confirmation of the sale and that as between himself and the purchaser the title to the property vested in the latter on such confirmation. *Sheikh Murullah v. 4. Occupancy holding, transferability of—Custom and usage, proof of—Second appeal, ground of—Finding of fact. To prove a custom or usage that occupancy holdings are transferable in any locality, it is not sufficient to shew simply that such holdings are sold in the village or neighbouring villages. The essence of a usage of transferability is that transfers made to the knowledge of, but without the consent of, the landlord are valid and must be recognised by him. Jagun Proshad v. Posun Sahoo, 8 C. W. N. 172, followed. When occupancy holdings are not transferable by custom the person who purchases them in execution of a money-decree purchases nothing. They are not transferable as between the judgment-debtor and the decrec-holder. PEARY MOHAN MUKERJEE v. JOTE KUMAR MUKERJEE (1906)

5. Occupancy-holding, non-transferable—Transfer, if may be questioned by transferor's heirs—Transfer by will—Void or voidable—Landlord's option. The transfer of an occupancy holding, which is not transferable by local custom or usage, is not a void transaction. It is binding between the parties, namely, the transferor and the transferee, and all persons claiming through them, and is voidable only at the option of the landlord. The heirs of an occupancy raiyat would therefore be bound by a transfer of the holding made by will. Bhagirath Changa v. Sheikh Hafizuddin, 4 C. W. N. 679, Basarat Mandal v.

Usage—Growing usage not sufficient—Usufructuary mortgage by tenant—Subsequent relinquishment to landlord—Right of landlord to re-enter—Mortgage or out and out sale. In 1894 an occupancy raiyat executed a usufructuary mortgage of the holding, put the mortgagee in possession, and though it was arranged that the tenant would continue to pay rent to the landlord, the tenant left the village and abandoned all connection with the land. In 1901, the tenant executed a deed of relinquishment in favour of the landlord and surrendered the land to him, and it did not appear that he had paid any rent since. BRETT, J., held, on second appeal, upon a consideration of the terms of the mortgage-bond and the circumstances connected with the transaction, that, although the document purported to be a usufructuary mortgage for sixty years, the transaction was really an out and out sale and the deed was drawn up in that form in order to evade the provisions of law against the transfer of occupancy holdings. Held, by RAMPINI, C.J., and MITRA, J.—That apart from such consideration, the moment the deed of relinquishment was executed by the tenant, the landlord became entitled to re-enter. A growing usage of transferability of occupancy-holdings is of no effect against the landlord. The usage, to be effective, must have already grown up. Ambica Churn Chakravarti v. Dya Gazi, 10 C. W. 1. ———— Murder—Beng. Reg. IV of 1797—Act XVII of 1862—General Clauses Consolidation Act (I of 1868), s. 6—Repeal of statute, effect of—Right of defence to High Court. Up to the 1st January, 1862, a person committing the offence of murder was liable to trial and punishment under the Regulations. By Act XVII of 1862 the Regulations prescribing punishments for offences were repealed "except as to any offence committed before the 1st January, 1862." By the same Act it was declared that no person who should claim the same should be deprived of any right of appeal or reference which he would have enjoyed under such Regulations. By s. 6 of Act I of 1868, the repeal of an Act does not affect anything done, or any offence committed, or any fine or penalty incurred before the repealing Act shall have come into operation. Under the provisions of this section, the repeal of Act XVII of 1862 by Act VIII of 1868 and Act X of 1872 did not, in respect of offences committed before the 1st January 1862, affect the penalties prescribed by such Regulations, nor were any of the Regulations prescribing punishments for offences, which were in force before the passing of Act XVII of 1862, repealed in respect of offences committed before the 1st January, 1862, prior to the passing of Act I of 1868. Held, accordingly, where a person committed murder in the year 1855, that such person was punishable under the Regulations. Held, also, that, inasmuch as such right as the right of reference given by s. 3 of Regulation IV of 1797 accrues on conviction, and therefore in the present case

The same substantive law is applicable to prisoners who conspire together in Bombay to destroy such ship on the high seas, and such ship is so destroyed in consequence. 3. ———— Jurisdiction of Criminal Courts—Power to legislate for high seas—Stats. 12 & 13 Vict., c. 96, and 23 & 24 Vict., c. 88. An offence committed on the high seas, but within three miles from the coast of British India, as being committed within the territorial limits of British India, is punishable under the provisions of the Penal Code. The ordinary Criminal Courts of the country have jurisdiction over such offences by virtue of the Stat. 12 & 13 Vict., c. 96, ss. 2 and 3, extended to India by Stat. 23 & 24 Vict., c. 88. Semle: The Governor General of India in Council has no power to legislate for offences committed on the high seas outside the territorial limits of British India, though he has power to legislate in respect of offences committed on the high seas within three miles of its coasts. Elmstone*, 7 Bom. Cr. 89, to the effect that English and not Indian law is applicable to offences committed on the high seas, is altered by Stat. 37 & 38 Vict., c. 27, which provides that such offences shall be tried and punished according to the local law. The accused, who was captain of a native craft, was charged with having dishonestly sold his cargo and scuttled his ship in the course of a voyage from Aleppy to Bombay. The accused was arrested in the Ratnagiri District, and committed for trial to the Sessions Judge of Ratnagiri, who convicted him under ss. 407 and 437 of the Penal Code and sentenced him to five years' rigorous imprisonment. On appeal, the accused contended that the Sessions Judge of Ratnagiri had no jurisdiction to try the case: 1st, because the first offence, if it took place at all, was committed within the territorial waters of Goa; and, 2ndly, because the offence, if committed on the high seas, could only be tried according to the law of England and not according to the Penal Code. Held, (i) that the Court at Ratnagiri had jurisdiction. If the offence were committed within three miles of Goa, the Treaty Act (IV of 1880) between England and Portugal as regards the Goa territory conferred the right to try such cases in British India. (ii) If the offence were committed beyond the three-mile limit and on the high seas, the Court had jurisdiction and the Penal Code applied under the provisions of Stat. 30 & 31 Vict., c. 124, s. 11, and Stat. 37 & 38 Vict., c. 27. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. 1. Official Assignee of insolvent judgment-debtor not a necessary party to such suit—Decree in such suit cannot declare property liable to be attached, but only that it is the property of the judgment-debtor. S. 253 of the Code of Civil Procedure gives a statutory right of suit to the unsuccessful party in claim proceedings and when the property of the insolvent judgment-debtor, which was attached in execution had vested in the Official Assignee during the pendency of such claim proceedings, the latter is not a necessary party to such suit. The decree in such suit should, where property had so vested, only declare the property attached to belong to the judgment-debtor and ought not to declare it liable to attachment. ANNAPURANI AMMAL v. SUBRAMANIAN CHETTIAR (1908)

I. L. R. 31 Mad. 347

2. Official Assignee—Disallowance of claim of Official Assignee to have proceeds of sale in execution of decree against insolvent judgment-debtor paid to him—Appeal. Held, that the Official Assignee not being the representative of an insolvent judgment-debtor, no appeal would lie against the disallowance of his claim to have the proceeds of a sale in execution of a decree against the insolvent judgment-debtor paid over to him. *Kashi Prasad v. 3. Insolvency Act (11 and 12 Vict., c. 21) s. 7—Insolvent—Vesting order—Withdrawal of petition for insolvency—Right of Official Assignee to bring suit—Right of Official Assignee to continue suit after withdrawal of petition. On the 14th October, 1903, a petition in insolvency was filed and a vesting order was made by the Court. On the 15th June, 1904, the insolvents took out a rule nisi to withdraw their petition, and the rule was made absolute on the 21st September, 1904. But the orders were not drawn up till 27th February, 1906. In the meanwhile the Official Assignee filed a suit on the 2nd March, 1905, on behalf of the insolvents to recover a sum of money alleged to be due to the insolvents' firm in respect of certain mercantile transactions. It was objected on behalf of the defendant that the Official Assignee was not entitled (i) to bring the suit and (ii) continue the suit after the withdrawal of the petition. Held, that at the date of the institution of the suit the insolvency proceedings were still in force and the assets still remained vested in the Official Assignee. The subsequent coming into force of the order could not vitiate the institution of the suit and it was clear that the Official Assignee was competent to bring the suit. He was also competent to continue it, for the order of withdrawal, even after it became operative, was not effective to divest the Official Assignee and re-vest the property in the insolvents. A withdrawal of a petition for which no provision is made in the Act, cannot be regarded as the legal equivalent to its dismissal by consent. Haji Sajjan v. Macleod (1907) . . . I. L. 4. Commission—Sale of Insolvent's Estate—Commission on sale of mortgaged property—Indian Insolvency Act (11 and 12 Vict., c. 21), ss. 19, 21, 31—Supreme Courts' Officers Act (XV of 1848), ss. 1, 2—Practice. On the application of the mortgagee, an order was made in insolvency proceedings directing the Official Assignee to sell certain immoveable properties belonging to an insolvent, but which were subject to a mortgage:—Held, that the Official Assignee was not entitled to charge a commission out of the insolvent's estate on the full value of the properties sold, but only on the amount coming to the insolvent's estate. Held, also, that although the practice of this Court for over thirty years had apparently been to allow such commission, it was contrary to the provisions of the Indian Insolvency Act (11 and 12 Vict., c. 21) and the Supreme Courts' Officers Act, 1848. 2. Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 2, and s. 424—Notice of suit. The Official Trustee is a "public officer" within the definition given in s. 2 of the Civil Procedure Code. The cases in which a public officer is entitled to notice of suit under s. 424 of the Code are those in which he is sued for damages for some wrong inadvertently committed by him in the discharge of his official duties, and the object of giving notice is that, if a public body or officer entrusted with powers happens to commit an inadvertence, irregularity, or wrong, before any one has a right to require payment in respect of that wrong, he shall have an opportunity of setting himself right, making amends, restoring what he has taken, or paying for the damages he has done. The Official Trustee, therefore, is not entitled to notice of suit, when the question to be decided relates to the rights of the cestuis que trustent in respect of the trust-fund, and not to a wrong committed by him. *SHAHUNSHAH BEGUM v. The main purpose of the Official Trustees Act was to place the Official Trustee and his successors in office in the same position and vested with the same powers as the persons who held the property in trust previous to the appointment of the Official Trustee, and a wide meaning must be given to the words "property" and "vest." That "property" in the Official Trustees Act was meant also to include action or actionable claims, and the vesting thereof was intended to have the effect of giving the Official Trustee complete power of enforcing all claims of demands in respect of the trust estate. The plaintiff, as a creditor of S E E, had obtained letters of administration to his estate and now brought this suit for the recovery of R12,000 on a mortgage which had been executed in favour of S E E. S E E in his lifetime was the trustee of a sum of R70,000, and the Official Trustee, who had been appointed trustee in his place and who was made a defendant in this suit, claimed the benefit under the said mortgage on the allegation that the said sum had been advanced by S E E out of the trust funds. The plaintiff contended that she was entitled to the usual mortgage decree and to get in the money thereunder, and that the proper course for the rival claimants to the money represented by the plaintiff in her personal capacity on the one side and the Official Trustee on the other was then to proceed to establish their rights to the money by separate suit or otherwise. Held, that the contention of the plaintiff was not correct, and the Court was bound to determine the question raised by the plaintiff representing the estate of the deceased and the Official Trustee representing the trust estate, and that the Official Trustee could adduce evidence in this suit to shew that the money was advanced out of the trust estate. GABRIEL v. SOLOMON

1. ACCOUNT.

See HINDU LAW—PARTITION. 13 C. W. N. 309

1. ———— Balance of account—Suit for sum due on balance of account. Where a plaintiff sues for a specific sum of money due on a balance of account, it is for him to start his case and show what sum is due on the account; and until he has done so, the defendant need not be called upon to rebut him. RUTTUN CHAND BYSACK v. BOCHA BIBEE

12 W. R. 529

2. ———— Suit founded on statement of account. Where a claim was founded upon a distinct statement of an account signed by the defendant, in which he acknowledged a particular sum to be due to the plaintiff:—Held, that it was for defendant to produce evidence to rebut the prima facie case made against him. ELIAS v. JORAWAR MULL . 24 W. R. 202

2. ACCOUNT BOOKS, ENTRIES IN.

1. ———— Suit for possession—Dispute as to whether transaction was a mortgage or sale—Entries in account books showing debts. The plaintiffs sued for possession of certain lands, alleging that they had been mortgaged to the defendant by their father under two documents. The defendant produced them and relied upon them as deeds of sale which conveyed to him absolutely the lands mentioned in them. The form of the instruments was not conclusive, but it appeared aliunde by the conduct of the defendant himself that the deeds were intended as mere securities for money, and that he had treated them as such. Certain entries in the defendant's accounts also treated the respective considerations named in the deeds as continuing debts due to the defendant from the plaintiffs' father. Held, that the entries, when put in evidence, were sufficient to shift the burden of proof from the plaintiffs to the defendant, and that it was incumbent on the latter to give either oral or documentary evidence which in some way neutralised or explained away their effect or showed that they related to other transactions than those mentioned in the two documents. GOVINDA v. JESHA PREMAJI

I. L. R. 7 Bom. 73

3. AGENT.

1. ———— Gomastah, suit against—Suit to recover advances due from discharged gomastah. In a suit to recover advances alleged to be due from a discharged gomastah, who pleaded acquittance at the time of his discharge:—Held, that plaintiff was bound to prove the payments to, and the receipts from, the gomastah, and to put in original documents, and not mere transcripts, even if the defendant had remained silent. WATSON & CO. v. SREEDHUR MUNDLE . 10 W. R. 421

2. ———— Agents of official assignee, suit against—Proof of items of account. Agents who have collected money on account of an insolvent estate are severally bound to prove to the assignee or his representative that the expenditure of the several amounts charged in their accounts has been actually and properly made and the onus probandi rests on such agents. It is incumbent on such agents to offer proof in support of all the items in their accounts which are impugned, and the propriety, or the actual expenditure of such items should form the subject-matter of issues properly framed. NUJUF ALI v. PATTERSON

2 N. W. 104

3. ———— Principal, suit against, for acts of agent—Authority of agent, Proof of. In a suit against a principal as liable for the acts of an accredited agent of the latter, the onus lies on the plaintiff to prove that the alleged agent was the duly accredited agent of the defendants in reference to the transaction, the subject of the claim. ONUS OF PROOF—*contd.*4. ARBITRATION—concl'd.

5. ATTACHMENT IN EXECUTION.

1. ——— Attachment of person of debtor—Execution of decree. In an application for an order for execution of a decree by attachment of the person of the debtor, the onus is on the judgment-debtor to show that he has no means of satisfying the debt, and that he has not been guilty of any misconduct; and not on the creditor to show that, by sending the debtor to prison, some satisfaction of the debt would be obtained. SETON v. BIJOHN . . . 8 B. L. R. 255 : 17 W. R. 165

2. ——— Claim by judgment-debtors to property seized in execution of a decree against them as representatives of original debtors—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 234. Where, in execution of a decree against the representatives of a deceased debtor, specific property was seized as the property of the deceased debtor and as being in the possession of his representatives and the judgment-debtors claimed the property so seized as their own:—Held, that the burden of proof lay on the decree-holder who asserted that the property seized in execution of his decree was the property of the deceased debtor and as such in the possession of the judgment-debtors. ABDUL RAHMAN v. MAHOMED AZIM . . . 4 C. W. N. 151

6. BAILMENTS.

1. ——— Negligence—Hiring—Accident—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 106—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 150, 151, 152. The question of the burden of proof in cases of accidental injury to goods bailed depends upon the particular circumstances of each case. In some cases, from the nature of the accident, it lies upon the bailee to account for its occurrence, and thus to show that it has not been caused by his negligence. In such cases it is for him to give a prima facie explanation in order to shift the burden of proof to the person who seeks to make him liable. If he gives an explanation which is uncontradicted by reasonable evidence of negligence, and is not prima facie improbable, the Court is bound in law to find in his favour, and the mere happening of the accident is not sufficient proof of negligence. S hired a horse from W, and while it was in his custody it died from rupture of the diaphragm, which was proved to have been caused by over-exertion on a full stomach.

ONUS OF PROOF—*contd.*6. BAILMENTS—concl'd.

In a suit by W against S to recover the value of the horse, the defendant gave evidence to the effect that the horse became restive and plunged about, that he might then have touched it with his riding cane, that it shortly afterwards again became excited, bolted for two miles, and at last fell down and died. This evidence was not contradicted on any point, nor was any other evidence offered as to how the horse came to run away. There was evidence that the horse was a quiet one, that for some time previously it had done hardly any work, that it was fed immediately before it was let out for hire, and that rupture of the diaphragm was a likely result of the horse running away while its stomach was distended with food. The Court of first instance held that the defendant was bound to prove that he had taken such care of the horse as a man of ordinary prudence would under similar circumstances have taken of own property, that he must have used his whip freely, or done something else which caused the horse to bolt, and that in so doing he acted without reasonable care, and had thus caused the animal's death. The Court accordingly decreed the claim. Held, by EDGE, C.J., that if the burden of proof was originally upon the defendant, it was shifted by the explanation which he gave, and which was neither contradicted nor prima facie improbable; and that the decree of the lower Court, being unsupported by any proof, and based on speculation and assumption, was one which that Court had no jurisdiction to pass, and should consequently be set aside in revision under s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code. Per BRODHURST, J., that as the decree was not only unsupported by proof, but opposed to the evidence on the record, the lower Court had "acted in the exercise of its jurisdiction illegally," within the meaning of s. 622. SHIELDS v. WILKINSON

7. BOUNDARY.

1. ——— Disputed boundary—Removal of boundary. Where a dispute arises regarding the direction of a boundary which one of the parties to a suit has demolished and the other party proves its general direction, the onus of proof that the direction is wrongly stated, if it be so, lies on the former, who removed the boundary. JUDONATH MULLICK v. KALEE KRISTO TAGORE

25 W. R. 524

2. ——— Failure of proof. Suit concerning the boundary line between contiguous mehals. The land in dispute (which, with the mehals adjacent, originally formed part of a permanently-settled zamindari, consisted of revenue-paying mehals, and of mehals alleged to be lakhiraj, all belonging to one proprietor) was so situated that it necessarily belonged either to Havelee, one of the latter, or to the contiguous rent-paying mehals. The Permanent Settlement did not define the boundary, nor was it fixed in subsequent resumption proceedings against Havelee, which ended in a temporary settlement of that mehal for twenty years. The ownership of Havelee having become severed from the ownership of the other mehals, the question of boundary arose, not as a question of revenue between the Government and a zamindar, but as one of title to land between the zamindars and proprietors of two contiguous and separate estates. The appellant having failed to prove that no part of the disputed land was included in the respondent's settlement (some portion at least being shown to belong to Havelee), and also having failed to prove by independent evidence his own right to recover the land specified in the plaint:—Held, that the suit should not have been determined upon that mere failure on his part to support the burden of proof cast upon him, because the judgment would be as final and conclusive between the parties as an adjudication on the merits would be, and its effect would be to give something to the respondent which on the evidence belonged to the appellant's mehals.

3. ———— Lakhiraj tenure and mal land of zamindar. In a question of boundary between a lakhiraj tenure and a zamindar's mal land, there is no presumption in favour of one or the other, but the onus is on the plaintiff to prove his case. BEER CHUNDER JOOBRAJ v. RAM GUTTY DUTT . . . . . 8 W. R. 209

4. ———— Failure to prove alleged boundary. Where the plaintiff sued to recover a quantity of land by rectification of certain survey awards, which he averred demarcated erroneously the boundary between his zamindari and the zamindaris of the defendants, it was held, on a consideration of the evidence, that his suit was rightly dismissed because he failed to prove the position or existence of a stream which he stated was the true boundary between the zamindaris. LEELANUND SINGH v. MOHENDRO NARAIN SINGH
13 W. R. P. C. 7: 13 Moo. I. A. 57

5. ———— Suit for possession where defendant alleges land to be within zamindari, but in protected tenure. In a suit by a talukdar to obtain khas possession of certain land as being an encroachment by the defendants, who admittedly held land within a howla appertaining to the talukh, the defendants alleged that the land in dispute was situate within a nim howla which they held within the howla. Held, that the onus was on the plaintiff to show that the land was not within the howla, and that he was entitled to khas possession. RHIDOY KRISTO MISTRI v. NOBIN CHUNDER SEN
12 C. L. R. 457

tenure—General rule as to onus of proof in suits for ejectment. In a suit by a landlord for khas possession of land in defendants' possession, the defendants set up and proved an intermediate tenure. Held, that it was on the plaintiffs to show that the parcel of land sought to be resumed was outside such tenure. Sahib Perhlad Sein v. Budhoo Sing, 12 Moo. I. A. 275, explained. Rhidoy Kristo Mistri v. Nobin Chunder Sen, 12 C. L. R. 457, followed. In this respect it makes no difference whether the plaintiff admits the existence of the under-tenure or the defendant proves such tenure to exist, although denied by the plaintiff. Mohima Chunder Mazumdar v. Mohesh Chunder Neogi, 1. L. R. 16 Calc. 473; Forbes v. Mahomed Hossein, 12 B. L. R. 210; Hurryhur Mookhopadhya v. Madab Chunder Baboo, 14 Moo. I. A. 152, referred to and discussed. RAJENDRO KUMAR BOSE v. MOHIM CHANDRA GHOSE
3 C. W. N. 763

7. ———— Lands in zamindari—Settlement of shikmi talukh. Lands situate within a zamindari must prima facie be considered as part of the zamindari; and it is for those who insist on the separation of lands from the general lands of the zamindari and on their settlement as a shikmi talukh to establish their title. WISE v. BHOOBUN MOYEE DEBIA
3 W. R. P. C. 5: 10 Moo. I. A. 165

8. ———— Suit for confirmation of possession of lands alleged to be within certain talukh. In a suit for confirmation of right and possession in respect of lands alleged to be within plaintiff's permanently-settled talukh, where plaintiff incidentally remarked that defendant (as intervenor in a previous rent suit) had claimed the lands as appertaining to another talukh which plaintiff alleged had no existence:—Held, that it was an error of law in the lower Appellate Court to place on the defendant the onus of proving the existence of that other talukh, instead of following the usual and recognized course of requiring the plaintiff to prove that the lands in suit belonged to his talukh. GUNGAMALA CHOWDHRAIN v. MADHUB CHUNDER ROY . . . . . 10 W. R. 413

9. ———— Mouzah which may belong to one of two zamindaris—Possession. If a particular mouzah has been held for many years as part of a particular mehal or zamindari, the fact of such holding affords a strong presumption that it is part of that mehal, even as against a purchaser at a sale for arrears of revenue of another mehal who claims that part of the mehal purchased by him. It is not conclusive evidence against such auction-purchaser, nor could any length of adverse holding prior to his purchase preclude the auction-purchaser from recovering it, if he could show clearly that it belonged to the mehal which he had purchased. PRAN KISHEN BANERJEE v. JUGGOBUNDOO DUTT

10. ———— Suit for possession of land once bed of a nullah. In a suit for possession of land which had once formed the bed of a nullah of which defendants held a julkur settlement, but which was situated within plaintiff's settled estate :—Held that, as defendants had failed to show that their settlement extended beyond the fishery rights, plaintiff was entitled to recover possession. MONOHUR CHOWDHRY v. NURSINGH CHOWDHRY . . . . . 11 W. R. 272

11. ———— Suit for possession—Disputed plots of land. In a suit to recover possession of two parcels of land alleged to have been comprehended in one plot on the ground that they had been held by the plaintiff and defendant jointly until by certain proceedings the former was virtually deprived by the latter of the usufruct, the defendant's case being that the parcels were divisible into two distinct plots, one held by the plaintiff and himself jointly and the other by himself exclusively. Held, that it was on the plaintiff to prove that the disputed parcel was a part of the land held jointly by him and the defendant. GUNGA PERSHAD DUTT v. LOKENATH NUNDEE . . . . . 12 W. R. 179

12. ———— Suit by purchaser of share of co-sharer in land jointly settled. Where the settlement proceedings showed that the question of extent of the shares of several persons on settlement was in dispute, and that the settlement was made jointly without prejudice to title, the onus, in a suit by a purchaser of one of the shares, was held to be on the plaintiff to show the extent of his vendor's share. GOOROO CHURN PODDAR v. HAFEEZA BIRBE . . . . . 7 W. R. 366

8. CLAIMS TO ATTACHED PROPERTY.

1. ———— Allegation of application by debtor during attachment. Plaintiff, alleging that an attachment subsisted, and that therefore the mortgage under which defendant claimed was invalid, is bound to prove his allegation, and the onus is not discharged by showing that the attachment was made some years previous to the alienation. TOOL-SEE DUTT MISSEER v. BROJO MOHUN THAKOOR . . . . . 9 W. R. 332

2. ———— Proof of attachment—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, ss. 235, 239, 270—Priority. Plaintiff claimed priority under s. 270, Act VIII of 1859, asserting that the property attached and sold by defendant was an identical property which he had attached prior to defendant's attachment. Held, that he was bound to prove the due attachment of the property, viz., by proof of having obtained a written order, under s. 235, prohibiting defendant from alienating the property by sale, gift, etc., and by the publication of the said order in the manner prescribed by s. 239. KANHYA LALL PUNDIT v. MUN RAKHUN ROY . . . . . 15 W. R. 202

4. ———— Right to begin—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 246. Where a claim was made under s. 246 of Act VIII of 1859, by a third party, to some timber, which had been attached by a prohibitory order under s. 234 :—Held, per PEACOCK, C.J., L. S. JACKSON, PHEAR, and MACPHERSON, J.J. (MITTER, J., dissenting), that the claimant must begin. The onus is on him to prove that the goods attached were his property, or in his possession, and therefore not in the possession of the judgment-debtor. His evidence must be confined to proving his own claim, and he cannot be allowed to show a title in a third person with whom he has no connection. Held (per MITTER, J.), that, on the proper construction of the words "proceed to investigate the same with like powers as if the claimant had been originally made a defendant" the onus of proof as against the claimant is on the decree-holder. *Nito Kali Debi v. 5. ———— Suit by a claimant to property under attachment. The defendant having attached certain property as belonging to his judgment-debtor, B, the plaintiff, applied for the removal of the attachment alleging that she had purchased the property from B prior to the defendant's decree. Her application was rejected, and an order maintaining the attachment passed. The plaintiff thereupon brought the present suit to establish her right to the property in question. The Court of first instance dismissed the suit. The plaintiff appealed to the District Judge, who reversed the lower Court's decree, holding that it was incumbent on the defendant to show that the alleged transaction of sale was fictitious. On second appeal by the defendant to the High Court :—Held, that the District Judge was wrong in throwing the burden of proof on the defendant. The defendant had obtained an order maintaining his attachment, and it was incumbent on the plaintiff, who impugned that order by the present suit, to prove her case. For this purpose it was necessary for the plaintiff to prove the payment of the purchase-money, and that she had been in possession since the alleged sale. GOVIND ATMARAM v. SANTAI . . . . .

The objector then brought a separate suit to have the property declared not liable to be taken in execution; but he did not file the sale-deed in question or account for its non-production. Held, that under the circumstances of the case it was in this instance for the plaintiff to prove that the deed he relied on was not fraudulent and collusive, as has been found in the previous proceedings. *Govind Aitaram v. 7. ——— Suit for confirmation of possession—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 246—Claim—Deed of sale. A decree-holder caused the right, title, and interest of his debtor in certain land to be attached in execution. A claim was preferred under s. 246, Act VIII of 1859, by a previous purchaser, but was rejected. In a suit thereupon instituted for confirmation of possession on reversal of the order, the defence was that the purchase was benami. Held, that the onus was on the plaintiff to make out his case. *MAHIMA CHANDRA KUNDU v. 8. ——— Suit to establish right after rejection of claim—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 246. In a suit brought to establish the plaintiff's right to certain property after an order against him under s. 246, Act VIII of 1859, the defendant admitted that the property had been in the possession of the person against whom the plaintiff had obtained his decree, but stated that it had passed to him by conveyance executed by that judgment-debtor in his favour; the plaintiff alleged that this deed of sale was fraudulent and void. Held, that the onus was on the plaintiff to show that the deed was not bona fide, and not on the defendant to prove the actual execution of the deed. *LALA RUDRA PRASAD v. 9. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 246—Claim. The plaintiff sued to establish his right to a decree, of which he stated he was the assignee, and which he alleged the defendant had seized and sought to sell as the property of the plaintiff's assignee. The defendant admitted the assignment, but alleged that it was a fraudulent transaction. Held, that the onus was on him to prove that the transaction was not a bona fide one. *LALBEHARI DUTT v. property, it is for the plaintiff to prove that the property in question is the property of the judgment-debtor. The onus of proof is upon him. He can have no right to attach property which is proved either never to have belonged to his judgment-debtor, or having been his, to have passed out of his possession and ownership, and become, in law, the property of others prior to the time at which attachment is sought. The defendant in defending such a suit may therefore rely on the title of a third person. ADAM ISUFBHAI v. JAMNADAS RANCHORDAS

11. ——— Suit for declaration of title—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 246—Equitable right. Certain property belonging to one S was mortgaged by him in 1810 and 1813 to O, under form of conditional sale. S had three sons, H, A and N, and in 1819 he sold the property included in the mortgage of 1810 and 1813 to his sons, H and A. In 1820 H and A entered into a fresh arrangement with O, who accepted from them a fresh mortgage of the property in lieu of those of 1810 and 1813, and of this mortgage in 1831 he obtained a decree for foreclosure. Subsequently, the Government resumed the property and settled it with O's widow as representing the proprietor, and the plaintiff afterwards purchased a one-third share of the estate. The defendant was the holder of a decree obtained in 1836 against the heirs of S on a money-debt of S, and in execution of that decree he, in 1866, caused the rights of N in the property to be attached and sold, and himself became the purchaser. On attachment, the plaintiff preferred a claim to it under s. 246, Act VIII of 1859, but it was disallowed. In a suit by the plaintiff praying for his right of ownership and possession, which was menaced by the defendant's decree and sale:—Held, the onus was on the defendant to show that he had an equitable right which he could assert against the plaintiff. *SHURFUN BIBEE v. 12. ——— Allegation of assignment by deed of sale—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 246. If a plaintiff coming into Court, under s. 246 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to set aside an attachment and sale, shows in proof of his title that a deed of sale has been executed in his favour by the judgment-debtors, and that consideration-money has passed and possession has been given him, he starts his case sufficiently. If the defendant alleges, notwithstanding, that the sale was collusive and fictitious, it is for him to show that it was so. DIGUMBUREE DOSSEE v. BANEE MADHUB GHOSE

14. ——— Suit to establish title under deeds of gift—Proof of bonâ fides. In a suit to establish title, unsuccessfully asserted in an execution case, to property sold in satisfaction of a decree, where plaintiff claims under a gift and other titles originating with the judgment-debtor, it is not sufficient for plaintiff to make out a prima facie case, leaving it to defendant to demonstrate fraud; plaintiff is bound to satisfy the Court of the genuine bonâ fide nature of the transfer. RAM KISHORE SINGH v. RAMSURBO CHATTERJEE. 11 W. R. 454

15. ——— Suit for value of goods taken in execution where a claim to them is allowed under s. 246, Act VIII of 1859—Evidence of title. M, to whom C, his judgment-debtor, had made over certain goods, attached the same in execution of his decree as the property of his judgment-debtor, but, on a claim being preferred to the goods by D and B under s. 246 of Act VIII of 1859, they were ordered to be released from attachment; they remained, however, in the possession of M. D and B having sued M to recover the value of the goods, the lower Court held that, inasmuch as M failed to sue within a year to set aside the order of the miscellaneous department, and establish his right to take the property in satisfaction of his decree as belonging to his judgment-debtor, the plaintiff's right to it must be admitted without further enquiry or proof, and decreed the claim on the basis of that order alone. It was held in special appeal that the defendant was not debarred by that order or by the law of limitation from disputing the plaintiff's right to the goods, and that the plaintiffs were bound to prove their right to entitle themselves to a decree and that the miscellaneous order was not conclusive proof of their right, and still less such an adjudication on the question as precluded a readjudication of it. *MADHO PARSHAD v. ## 10. CONTRIBUTION.

1. ——— Suit for contribution of Government revenue. In a suit to recover the amount of excess payments of Government revenue made by the plaintiffs on account of their co-sharers to save the estate from sale (each proprietor holding a well defined although not actually separated share):—Held, that the onus was on the plaintiffs to prove their shares and amount of revenue payable on them. AGHOREE RAM SAHOY v. RAMOLEE SAHOO. W. R. 1864, 309

2. ——— Money paid to Government treasury. In a suit for contribution for money admittedly paid by plaintiff into the Government treasury on account of defendants' share of the revenue, where defendants plead previous payment to the plaintiff:—Held, that the burden of proving such payment was upon the defendants. MOHADEO MISSER v. LAHOREE MISSER. 24 W. R. 250

11. CUSTOM.

1. ——— Custom at variance with law of inheritance—Proof of custom—Khojas. Where a defendant alleged a special custom of the Khoja community at variance with the Hindu law of inheritance:—Held, that the burden of proving the alleged custom rested upon her. RAHIMATBAI v. HIRBAI. I. L. R. 3 Bom. 34

2. ——— Impartibility—Suit for partition—Presumption as to partibility. In a suit for the partition of part of a deshgat vatan, brought by the younger brothers of a joint Hindu family against their eldest brother the desai, the defence was that the vatan was held by him as an impartible inheritance, subject to a right, by custom, that a brother should receive maintenance out of the income derived from it. Held, that there was no such general presumption in favour of the impartibility of estates of this kind as to shift the burden of proof, which was upon the desai, to show, that the vatan had, contrary to the general Hindu law, been inherited by him alone. It was for the desai to show, by evidence of the nature of the tenure of the vatan, that it was impartible or to show, by evidence of family custom or of district, i.e., local custom, that impartibility attached to it, such evidence being strong enough to rebut the presumption of the prevalence of the general Hindu law. ADRISHAPPA v. GURUSHIDAPPA

I. L. R. 4 Bom. 494

3. ——— Adoption—Custom, proof of. It is a general rule and fundamental principle amongst Brahmins, Kshatriyas, and Vaishyas, that they are absolutely prohibited from, and incapable of, adopting a daughter's or sister's son or son of any other woman whom they could not marry by reason of propinquity. The burden of proving a special custom to the contrary amongst any members of these regenerate classes, prevalent either in their caste or in a particular locality, lies upon him who avers the existence of that custom. *GOPAL SAFRAY v. burden of proving that his subsequent marriage worked a forfeiture of his office and its appendant property and rights, lay upon the defendant who impugned the plaintiff's right on account of the marriage. GOSAIN RAMBHARTI JAGRUPBHARTI v. SURAJBHARTI HARIBHARTI I. L. R. 5 Bom. 682

5. ——— Maintenance—Custom to reduce maintenance. Suit by a late Rajah's brother for maintenance allowance, which the present Rajah opposed on the ground that, as the plaintiff was no longer the ruling Rajah's brother, his allowance must be diminished. Held, that the onus was on the defendant to prove a custom of entitling him to diminish the allowance heretofore enjoyed in right of plaintiff's position in the family. MOOKOOND NARAIN DEB v. MOORALEE MOHUN . 6 W. R. 91

6. ——— Right to take fees—Vatandar joshi, right of. to take fees. The burden of proving that the vatandar joshi of a village is not entitled to officiate and take fees in the family of any particular caste, lies upon the person or persons asserting exemption. RAJA VALAD SHIVAPA v. KRISHNA BHAT . . . . . I. L. R. 3 Bom. 232

12. DAMAGES.

1. ——— Suit for damages against defaulting witness—Proof of liability. In a suit for damages against a defaulting witness the onus is on the plaintiff to prove that he was damaged by the non-attendance of the witness. The mere failure of the defendant to appear as a witness is not per se a sufficient proof of his liability to damages. DWARKANATH KOOREE v. ANANDO CHUNDER SAN-NEL . . . . . 5 W. R. S. C. C. Ref. 18

2. ——— Suit for damages for wrongful occupation—Refusal to give up possession. A party holding a decree for a share of a mouzah brought a suit for possession and damages on the allegation that he found the defendant in occupation of a part of the land on which indigo plants were standing, and permitted him to continue for a time till the plants should be removed, defendant promising them to give over possession, but that, when the time came, defendant refused to give over possession and was still occupying the land. Held, that it lay upon the plaintiff to show wrongful occupancy on the part of the defendant. GOUR SURUN DASS v. SCRONDY . . . 15 W. R. 144

13. DEBTOR AND CREDITOR.

1. ——— Release of debtors—Debt owing by partnership. The burden of proof that a creditor by agreeing to an arrangement whereby a firm indebted to him conveyed to two of the partners thereof certain property in trust to pay off his and certain other debts, thereby released the remaining members of the partnership, lies upon the parties who were originally liable to such creditor. *KALAI KHAN v. 2. ——— Debts contracted by persons in wrongful possession—Suits to charge zamindari. Where it was sought to charge a zamindari with debts contracted by persons who were at the time usurpers in wrongful possession of the zamindari, solely on the ground that the documents evidencing the loans recited that they were for the purpose of discharging the kists due to Government:—Held, that, as between the lawful owner and the creditor, the onus was on the creditor who was seeking to set up a charge in his favour made by one who was in possession, but without title; and therefore, in absence of any evidence on behalf of the creditor as to the circumstances in which the transactions were had with the usurping zamindar in possession, and the failure to connect the loans with the debts contracted by the former and lawful zamindars, the suit was rightly dismissed. ## 14. DECLARATION OF TITLE.

1. ——— Suit for declaration of title—Proof of title. Where a plaintiff brings a suit for a declaration of his title as owner, he is bound to establish his title affirmatively. He is in the same position as any other plaintiff, and must make out his case, and the onus probandi that he is in possession as owner is upon him. RASSONADA RAYAR v. SITHARAMA PILLAI . . . . . 2 Mad. 171

2. ——— Production of title-deeds. The plaintiff sued for declaration of her title to property, of which the defendant was in possession, but of which she produced the title-deeds in favour of herself. Held, that the onus was on the defendant to disprove the plaintiff's title. SWARNAMAYI RAU v. SRINIBASH KOYAL . 6 B. L. R. 144

3. ——— Reversioner—Setting aside deed of sale. In a suit for a declaration of plaintiff's reversionary title as heir to his late uncle's property, and for reversal of a deed of sale from that uncle set up by the defendant, the widow not having been made a party to the suit and her consent to or dissent from the alleged conveyance not having been ascertained, the issue tried was whether the deed was genuine, and whether defendant has possession under it. Held, that the onus was rightly placed on the defendant. BYKUNT NATH ROY v. GREESH CHUNDER MOOKERJEE 15 W. R. 96

4. ——— Suit for confirmation of possession—Intervenor. In a suit for confirmation of possession and declaration of title (the principal defendants admitting plaintiff's possession and title), in which a vendee from such defendants intervenes and claims the property on the allegation of being in possession:—Held, that such vendee must prove possession before he could

5. ———— Onus of proof—

Admission by party to suit, effect of, as shifting burden of proof—Admission not causing estoppel—Presumption as to admission by party—Right to rebut presumption—Question tried without specific issue—Remand—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 55, 562, 566.

In a suit for property to which the plaintiff alleged he was entitled by inheritance from his natural father the defence was that he had been adopted into another family and therefore was no longer his natural father's heir, and this contention was supported mainly by the plaintiff's admissions made in deeds and other documents signed by him, to none of which, however, the defendant was a party. Held, by the Judicial Committee, that although the onus was on the defendant to prove the adoption the proof of the admissions shifted the onus on to the plaintiff on the principle stated in Slatterie v. Pooley, 6 M. & W. 664, 669, that "what a party himself admits to be true may reasonably be presumed to be so," and until the presumption was rebutted the fact admitted must be taken to be established. Held, also, that where, as in the present case, there was no estoppel, the defendant being no party to the deeds, the plaintiff could give evidence to rebut such presumption. Heane v. Rogers, 9 B. & C. 577, 586; Newton v. Liddiard 12 Q. B. 926; In re Simpson L. R. 2 Ch. D. 72, 89, and Trinidad Asphalt Company v. Coryat, [1896] A. C. 587, followed. In this case their Lordships held that the plaintiff, so far from rebutting the presumption, had, in order to account for the admission made in the documentary evidence, put forward two different and inconsistent explanations, one of which was absurd and the other in its most important parts unproved and had failed to prove his title. Where no specific issue had been framed on the question of adoption, but the matter had been tried and determined without any objection on the part of the plaintiff, who had not been taken by surprise, but was fully informed by the defendant's lists of documents and from the cross-examination of his witnesses that the defence would be taken: Held, that under the circumstances it was undesirable that the case should be sent back to be re-tried on a special issue framed as to the adoption. CHANDRA KUNWAR v. CHAUDHRI NARPAT SINGH (1906)

pugners to prove their allegation. RABIA KHANUM v. WISE . . . . . 23 W. R. 329

2. ———— Deed, suit to set aside—Allegation that document is false. In a suit for a declaration that a document propounded by the defendant is false, it lies upon the plaintiff to prove that allegation. RAM NIDHEE KOONDOL v. GOLUCK CHUNDER MOSHANTO . . . . . 11 W. R. 280

3. ———— Relationship between parties as showing bonâ fides of transaction. The relationship between parties to a conveyance of property may be immaterial if the purchase is found true, but is not immaterial where the question to be decided is whether the purchase was true or fraudulent. The mere handing over of the purchase-money from one party to the other in the presence of strangers, and the registration of the deed, are not sufficient to prove the transaction to be bonâ fide. PRAN KISHEN DEB v. LOKENATH SINGH MOJOOMDAR . . . . . 10 W. R. 445

4. ———— Suit for possession and to have deeds declared fraudulent—Purchaser. The plaintiff executed a deed of sale of a moiety and a lease of the other moiety of certain property to B. B instituted a suit under s. 15, Act XIV of 1859, which was dismissed. B then returned the deed of sale and lease to A, with the following endorsement under his signature: "Returned; no claim." A instituted the present suit for recovery or possession of the said property, and the defendant set up in his defence that he had no right to sue for a moiety of the property, as the same had been conveyed to B, and that the endorsement on the deed of sale was not admissible in evidence, as it had not been registered. Held, that the onus was upon the defendant to prove his purchase. GIRISH CHANDRA ROY CHOWDHRY v. AMINA KHATUN

5. ———— Suit to have deed cancelled as a forgery. Under the special procedure provided in the Registration Act (III of 1877), the defendant, in whose favour a document was said to have been executed, succeeded in obtaining an order from the District Registrar for the registration of the same, although the plaintiff, who was alleged to have executed it, appeared before the Sub-Registrar, and subsequently before the Registrar, and denied executing it, and alleged it to be a forgery. In a suit brought under the above circumstances to have the document declared void, and to have it cancelled:—Held, that, under the circumstances, the onus of proof was properly placed on the defendant. *MOHIMA CHUNDER DHUR v. 7. ——— Suit to set aside order finding deed not genuine—Proof of bonâ fides. 8. ——— Suit for declaration of right to property—Possession under deed of gift—Allegation of fraud—Presumption. In a suit for a declaration that certain property, which plaintiff as decree-holder attempted to sell, belongs to his judgment-debtor, where the opposite party claims to have been in possession of the same under an alleged hibba, and plaintiff gives sufficient evidence to raise a reasonable presumption that there has been fraud and collusion in the case, it becomes the duty of the Court to go on to the evidence on the other side, and ascertain whether the transactions which are the subject of enquiry are fraudulent or valid. KADUMBINEE DOSSIA v. UNNOPOORNA DAYE . 14 W. R. 289

9. ——— Proof of bonâ fides of deed made under suspicious circumstances. Where the authenticity and bonâ fides of a hibba were called into question, on the ground that, at the time the instrument was executed, the executants were in a state of indebtedness, and the registration was delayed until the making of certain decrees against them:—Held, that it lay on the parties whose intention was impugned to give evidence of a satisfactory kind of the bonâ fides of the suspicious transaction. CHUNDER NARAIN SEN v. AMIRTO LALL SEN . 24 W. R. 292

10. ——— Allegation of want of bonâ fides of trust-deed. Where it is found on the face of a deed creating a trust that the transaction is bonâ fide, it is for the creditors who impugn the bonâ fide nature of the trust to prove their plea. KASHESHUREE DASSEE v. KRISHNA KAMINEE DEBEA 2 Hay 557

11. ——— Proof of mooktearnama alleged to be forged. Where a mooktearnama on the authority of which a suit was brought was impugned by the defendant as a forgery, and as not executed by the party alleged to have granted it, the Court held that, notwithstanding its attestation in due form by the Munsif of Muttra, the onus was on the parties charged to prove its genuineness. Bis-

14. ——— Suit to set aside deed on ground of fraud—Existence of motive. In a suit by a judgment-creditor to recover the amount of certain decrees by attachment and sale, and to have a certain deed of bye-mokasa, which was set up by the judgment-debtor's wife, set aside as executed in fraud of creditors; where plaintiff showed the existence in the mind of the judgment-debtor of a sufficient motive for the fraud, and also that the said debtor was in the management of the estate claimed and in the receipt of its rents, it was held that plaintiff had started a prima facie case, which shifted the onus on the defendant to prove the bonâ fides of the deed. GOWHUR ALI KHAN v. SAKHEENA KHANUM . 15 W. R. 507

15. ——— Suit to recover possession—Fraudulent deed. In a suit to recover immoveable property alleged to have belonged to the plaintiff's husband which she inherited from him, and from which, after seven years' possession, she was ousted by the defendant, whose possession was conferred by the Magistrate under s. 318 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1861, the defendants claimed under a deed of sale which the lower Courts found to have been executed in fraud of creditors:—Held, that, if plaintiff was in possession for seven years since her husband's death, she should not be allowed to be dispossessed on the ground of a fraudulent deed to which defendant was a party years previously, to which plaintiff was no party. *ECHAMOYEE v. minor adopted by his deceased brother, to succeed to the estate of the deceased. To induce the defendant to acknowledge the validity of the adoption, the adoptive mother of the plaintiff, as his guardian, executed a conveyance of one moiety of the family house to the defendant. Held, in a suit to cancel the conveyance, that the burden of proving that the defendant's objection to the validity of the adoption was groundless, and the conveyance therefore without consideration, was upon the plaintiff. *SUBRAMANIA AYYAN v. I. L. R. 6 Mad. 254

17. ——— Suit to set aside sale—Allegation of fraud. N, as reversionary heir of the former proprietor, and as now entitled to possession on the death of that proprietor's mother, sued for land in the possession of O, who obtained by it purchase at a sale in execution of a decree passed on a bond granted by O, which bond and decree were alleged by N to be fraudulent and collusive transactions. Held, that the burden was on the plaintiff to prove that the decree was fraudulently obtained. GREESH CHUNDER CHATTERJEE v. MOHESH CHUNDER NYALUNKAR . . . . . 10 W. R. 173

18. ——— Transfer of interest in joint family by one member to the other members. Where one brother of a joint undivided family transferred his interest in the joint property to the other brothers after a decree had been passed against him, although before attachment:—Held, that, when a question arose in such a case, the onus was on the brothers to whom the transfer was made to prove the bona fide character of the transaction. *BROJO LALL SANDYAL v. 19. ——— Suit to set aside collusive decree—Suit by judgment-debtor on allegation of decree being fraudulent and collusive. A, having obtained a decree in a suit instituted on a bond, purporting to have been executed by plaintiff's father and one D, proceeded to execute it by putting up for sale certain rights and interests of plaintiff as the legal representative of her father. Plaintiff sued on the allegation that the decree was fraudulent and collusive, and that she had not been served with notice of proceedings taken in execution. Held, that it was for the plaintiff to make out her case of fraud, and that it was not for defendant to show that the decree obtained from a competent Court was not collusive, or that notice had been actually served. *MOHIMA CHUNDER MULLICK v. In a suit by a Mahomedan widow against the brother of her deceased husband for her share of the property of her husband, the defendant set up a tumliknamah by which the deceased conveyed the property away to the son of the defendant. Held, that the burden of proof was on the defendant, and that he was bound to adduce the very strictest proof of the conveyance, as it cut away property from the natural heir. The tumliknamah was rejected, having regard to its terms and to the probabilities and facts of the case. SADUK ALI KHAN v. PEAREE . . . . . 9 W. R. 142

22. ——— Voluntary deed—Suit by settlor to set aside his deed. One M (the original plaintiff) was priest in the family of the first and second defendants, and was treated with much kindness by the first defendant (N), upon whom he chiefly relied for advice in worldly matters. A sum of R30,000, which was the bulk of his property, was in deposit in the defendants' firm at interest. Early in 1887 he became ill, and in June 1887 he expressed a wish to execute a trust-deed and an English will. He gave instructions to N for the trust-deed. By this deed, which contained no power of revocation, he settled R30,000 upon the first and second defendants (who were uncle and nephew), as trustees to perform his funeral ceremonies and to carry out certain religious observances and to pay two annuities, each of R25, and with the residue to found a Sanskrit class. The deed provided for the payment during his lifetime, of a sum of R100 per mensem for his maintenance and expenses, or such larger sum as he might require for such purposes, but in other respects it was not to come into operation until after his death. The will of even date gave certain property to his wife, and subject to this bequest gave the residue of his property to his sister. After receiving instructions for these documents, N took them to an attorney. From these instructions drafts were prepared, which were read over to M in his room by the attorney's managing clerk. Neither drafts, nor instructions, nor the documents themselves were, however, left with M. The drafts were then engrossed, M having made some trifling corrections in them. On the 23rd June 1887 he attended at the house of the attorney. The documents were explained to him by the attorney, and were interpreted to him by a High Court interpreter. M was then examined by a medical man with a view to ascertain whether he was capable of understanding what he was doing. M then executed the trust-deed and the will, and both were then duly attested. At the same time M signed the accounts in the defendants' books, and the balance of the money, which stood to his credit over and above the Rs30,000 comprised in the deed, was produced and made over to him, and he made it over to N to be kept by him personally. Shortly after this, M's sister and her son came to Bombay, and he fell under their influence. He became dissatisfied with what he had done with the Rs30,000, and on the 21st November 1887 he executed a will by which he purported to remove the deed and the will of the 23rd June, and he left the whole of his property to his sister. On the 2nd September 1888 his nephew took him to Surat, and on the 14th September 1888 at Surat he executed a deed revoking the trust-deed of the 23rd June 1887. He also signed instructions and a power-of-attorney under which this suit was filed. He died subsequently to the filing of the suit, and his sister and executrix became plaintiff. The plaint prayed that the deed of the 23rd June 1887 should be set aside on the ground of undue influence, etc., but the personal charges against the defendants were abandoned at the hearing. Held, that the deed must be set aside on the ground that the circumstances of the case threw upon the defendants the burden of showing that M understood the effect of the settlement and its finality. This they had failed to do. The facts of the case brought it within the principles deducible from Anderson v. Elsworth, 3 Giff. 154; Forshaw v. Welsby, 30 Beav. 243; and Wollaston v. Tribe, L. 23. ——— Suit for cancellation of instrument—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 39—Fiduciary relationship—Undue influence—Gift to spiritual adviser—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 111. In a suit under s. 39 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877) for cancelment of a deed of gift executed by the plaintiff in favour of the defendant, the plaintiff was a Chatri by caste, well advanced in years, and the defendant was his guru or spiritual adviser, a Brahman held in high consideration in the locality where he resided. The gift comprised the whole of the plaintiff's property and the only reason for its execution was the plaintiff's desire to secure benefits to his soul in the next world, and his having heard the defendant recite the holy book called Bhagwat. Almost immediately, after execution of the deed the plaintiff repudiated it, and sued for its cancellation on the ground of fraud. Held, that, having regard to the fiduciary relation subsisting between the parties, the improvidence of the gift, the absurdity of the reason alleged for it, and the principle recognized by s. 111 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872), the burden rested upon the defendant to show that the transaction was made without undue influence and in good faith; and, in the absence of such proof, the plaintiff was entitled to obtain cancellation of the deed. *Sital Prasad v. 24. ——— Deed of gift and endowment executed by Mahomedan widow in favour of agent—Fiduciary relationship—Burden of proving absence of undue influence. An instrument executed by a widow, after setting apart the rental of villages belonging to her as her patrimony to defray the expenses of her and her deceased husband's tombs, gave to her managing agent, who was her sole adviser, the management of the endowment in perpetuity with the residue, after the above expenditure should have been met, for himself, so that a large surplus would have remained each year in his hands and he would have been the person substantially interested. Held, that this transaction was within the well-recognized principle that every onus is thrown upon a person filling a fiduciary character towards another of showing conclusively that he has acted honestly and bona fide, without influencing the donor who has acted independently of him. In a suit by the agent's representative to have the gift enforced against the widow's successor in the estate, this burden had not, in the opinion of the Courts below, with which their Lordships concurred, been sustained, and it was held that the gift had been rightly set aside. *WAJID KHAN v. In after years the younger brother sued the elder for partition of the estate excepting so much of it as had already been the subject of the above gifts. The elder defended the suit on the ground that the deeds of gift had not been intended to operate, not representing any real transaction. To negative their effect, the burden of proving that the transaction was not real, but only a pretence, was laid upon the defendant who failed to adduce that proof. *SHAM CHAND PAL v. decree where the plaintiff's case was that the consideration-money was not paid, but a rooqua given for it, payable when the mutation of names took place:—Held, that the onus of proving non-payment was thrown upon the plaintiff in consequence of the acknowledgments she had made of the receipt of the whole purchase-money, viz., an admission which was made and recorded under Act XX of 1866, at the time when the deed was registered, and again an acknowledgment made in the petition presented to the Court which made the decree for mutation of names. against a young man recently come of age—Presumption—Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881), s. 118—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 114, ill. (c). Professional money-lenders sued a young man recently come of age to recover certain loans of money alleged to have been advanced by them to him on promissory notes. The defendant, who under the will of his father was entitled to a large property but had not yet come into possession of it, was of an extravagant and reckless character. He pleaded, as to part of the consideration for the notes, that he did not receive it, and as to a further part that the consideration was immoral. In dealing with the case the Court laid down the following propositions, not as rules of law, but as guides in considering the evidence in such a case: (i) That upon the above facts the ordinary presumption that a negotiable instrument has been executed for value received was so much weakened that the defendant's allegation that he had not received full consideration was sufficient to shift the burden of proof and to throw upon the money-lenders (the plaintiffs) the obligation of satisfying the Court that they had paid the consideration in full. That is the practical effect of ill. (c) to s. 114 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872). (ii) Where the plaintiff, in answer to such a defence, affirmed that he had paid the consideration in full, and was corroborated by his books and witnesses, the onus of proof again shifted over upon the defendant. (iii) The burden of proof thus thrown upon the defendant could only be met by a perfectly truthful and harmonious statement which the Court felt able to rely upon with confidence. In the absence of this, the ordinary presumption laid down in s. 118 of the Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881) must prevail, viz., that until the contrary is proved, the presumption should be made that every negotiable instrument was made for consideration. *MOTI GULABCHAND v. 12. ———— Proof of consideration for a registered mortgage—Income-tax returns—Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 76 and 77. The defendant in a suit for money secured by registered mortgage to be paid by him to the plaintiff denied the consideration of which he had, before the registering officer, acknowledged the receipt. The original Court, which dismissed the suit, would not have decided in favour of the defendant but for its having been shown, on an inspection of copies, officially certified, of income-tax returns made by the plaintiff, that he had not stated the interest accruing on the mortgage as part of his income. This judgment was reversed in appeal. The Judicial Commissioner was of opinion that the certified copies should not have been admitted in evidence, in reference to ss. 76 and 77 of the Indian Evidence Act (I of 1872); and also that, assuming the false statement of income to have been made, it still remained unproved by the defendant that the acknowledged consideration had not been paid. The judgment of the Appellate Court was affirmed by their Lordships, who concurred in the opinion that the returns, if the plaintiff had wrongly omitted to make a full return of income, would not have had any weight in changing the onus which lay upon the defendant of showing that no consideration had passed for this mortgage. *ALI KHAN BAHADUR v. 13. ———— Suit on bond—Proof of consideration where defendant denies and proves that he acknowledged receipt of it. In a suit on a bond, plaintiff rested his case entirely upon the bond and the defendant's acknowledgment therein that RS,000 was received in cash. 18. ——— Suit on bond—

Onus thrown on wrong party, effect of. The defendants in a suit on a bond admitted the execution of the bond, but denied that they had received, as the bond recited they had at the time of its execution, the consideration for it. The Court of first instance, instead of calling on the defendants to establish the fact that they had not received the consideration for the bond as it ought to have done under the circumstances, irregularly allowed the plaintiff to produce witnesses to prove that the consideration for the bond had been paid at the time of its execution. The evidence of these witnesses proved that the consideration of the bond had not been paid at the time of execution, and that, if it had been paid at all, it had been paid at some subsequent time. Held, that, although the plaintiff ought not to have begun, yet, as he had done so, and his witnesses had proved that the consideration for the bond had not been paid as admitted in the bond, a new case was opened up in which the onus was shifted back to the plaintiff to establish that he had, not at the time alleged in the bond, but at some subsequent time, paid to the defendants the consideration for the bond. MAKUND v. 19. ——— Non-receipt of full consideration—Suit on bond.* In a suit for money due on a bond between the representatives of the original parties to it, the defendant attempted to reduce the claim on the ground that the money had not been received in full, the bond having been given partly in respect of an old debt, and partly in respect of a credit, in account, upon which the debtor had not, in fact, drawn certain items. The Judicial Committee concurred with the High Court, which had reversed so much of the decree of the Court of first instance as disallowed these items; the latter Court not having correctly adjusted the burden of proof, and having acted as if the plaintiff had relied on his own books to prove the debt, besides having erred in weighing the evidence. RAJESWARI KUAR v. The Subordinate Judge held that the bond for R200 was not proved, but awarded the claim upon the other bond. On appeal, one of the issues raised by the Assistant Judge was—are the bonds in suit proved? He held that the plaintiffs had failed to prove execution of the bonds, and dismissed the claim in toto. Held, reversing the decision of the lower Court, that the defendant having admitted execution of the bonds in question, the Assistant Judge acted illegally in the exercise of his jurisdiction in raising the question of the execution. The first rule of adjudication is that a Judge shall decide secundum allegata et probata. The only question that could be tried in the present case was non-receipt of consideration. GORAKH BABAJI v. VITHAL NARAYAN . . . I. L. R. 11 Bom. 435

21. ——— Allegation of payment—
Allegation of loss of document. The plaintiff in a suit on a bond for money accounted for not producing it by alleging that the defendant had stolen it. The defendant admitted the execution of the bond, but alleged that he had paid it. Held, that the defendant was bound to begin and prove payment either by the production of the bond or other evidence, or by both. CHUNI KUAR v. UDAI RAM . . . I. L. R. 6 All. 73

22. ——— Plea of payment—Suit on bond—Alleged theft of bond by obligors.* The plaintiff sued on a bond made in his favour by the defendants, which he alleged had been stolen by the defendants. The defendants, while admitting the execution of the bond, pleaded payment, and that the bond had been returned by the plaintiff to them. They did not produce the bond, nor did they offer any evidence of the alleged payment. Held, that, as the defendants admitted the bond and pleaded payment, the burden of proof of such payment lay on them. SAVJI BIN SATU v. They also pleaded payment to plaintiff's undivided younger brother, which payment, they contended, was binding on the plaintiff. Held, that plaintiff was entitled to sue for the family debt without joining his undivided brothers, the contract on which the suit was based being in plaintiff's sole name and not purporting to have been obtained on behalf of any others but himself. And that, as to the payment pleaded, if true, plaintiff was, as regards the promisor, the only person prima facie entitled to payment; it therefore lay on the promisor to show that a payment to a third party was binding on the plaintiff, which had not been done. The contention that payment to any member of the family was by itself necessarily binding on the member who took the contract, could not be supported. ADAIKKALAM CHETTI v. MARIMUTHU . . . I. L. 24. ——— Bond in favour of one co-sharer—Payment of such bond made to another co-sharer when a discharge. Where a debt due to one member of a joint family has been paid by the debtor to another member of the family, the question whether such payment operates as a discharge depends on the circumstances under which it was made. A and B were members of joint Hindu family. Both managed the joint property for the common benefit. Each used to recover debts due on bonds taken in the other's name. In 1890 defendant passed a bond to A. In 1892 he passed a mortgage bond to B, the consideration for which was stated to be the balance due on the former bond. Subsequently A sued defendant on the bond of 1890. Held, that under the circumstances the mortgage-bond passed to B operated as a valid discharge of A's claim under the previous bond. GURUSHANTAPPA v. 27. ——— Suit for value of hundi—Proof of payment—Possession of hundi. On 2nd August 1872 A K filed a plaint against M H and M R, in which he alleged that on 1st April 1870 M R had given a hundi for Rs. 500, for value received, to A K, that on 27th March 1871 M H purchased this hundi from A K, promising to pay him Rs. 534 for it; that M H gave the hundi to his brother I H

for the purpose of obtaining payment of the amount from M R; and that I H subsequently informed A K that the hundi had been lost. A K accordingly prayed that defendants M H and M R might be decreed to pay to him Rs. 534 with profit and interest. M R admitted that he had executed the hundi, and had given it to A K for Rs. 500. He further alleged that it had been presented to him for payment by I H, to whom he had paid the amount with interest on 31st March 1871, and he produced the hundi with a receipt, purporting to be by I H, indorsed upon it. I H denied the payment by M R, and alleged the indorsement on the hundi to be a forgery. Held, that the admission by M R of the drawing of the hundi for value received laid on him the burden of proving payment, and that, though the possession by M R of the hundi was a circumstance in his favour, yet, as it did not in itself amount to proof of payment, the onus probandi was not thereby shifted on to the plaintiff. ABDUL KARIM v. MANJI HANSRAJ . . . I. L. R. 1 Bom. 295

28. ——— Statement in ikrar reserving equity of redemption—Loss of document—Absolute sale, deed of. Plaintiff sued for confirmation of possession and registration of certain property which had been mortgaged to him by defendants. The transaction on the face of the deed was an absolute sale, but an ikrar was executed at the same time as the mortgage which reserved the equity of redemption to the mortgagor. This ikrar was made over to the defendant, the mortgagor. Plaintiff's allegation was that the ikrar-namah was returned to him by the mortgagor, who thus surrendered the equity of redemption. Defendant alleged the ikrar had been lost, and had somehow found its way to the plaintiff. Held, that the presumption of law was in favour of the plaintiff, who had possession of the ikrar, and that the onus of proving its loss lay upon the defendant. RAJ KOOMAR SINGH v. RAM SUHAYE ROY

29. ——— Satisfaction of decree—Proof of payment made out of Court—Statement in receipt. Where money was paid in satisfaction of a decree, not through the Court, and a receipt was taken, but execution was afterwards enforced in a suit for refund of the money so paid:—Held, that the statement contained in the receipt to the effect that the decree had been satisfied was sufficient to shift the burden of proof to the defendant to show that it was an incorrect statement. DAVLATA v. nationality of the settlor was foreign, and, if he succeeds in doing so, the onus is then shifted upon the person supporting the settlement to show that the settlor had acquired a fresh domicile in British India, and that his estate ought to be administered according to Indian law. All rights over immovable property are governed by the law of the country where the property is situate, this principle being universally recognised. De Nicols v. Curlier, [1900] A. ## 18. EASEMENTS.

1. ———— Claim to restrain exercise of proprietary rights—Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882), s. 147. The right to restrain another from exercising ordinary proprietary rights over his own land is of the nature of an easement different from the ordinary rights of owners of land: the burden of proof would therefore lie upon the party alleging such rights. HARI MOHAN THAKUR v. KISSEN SUNDARI . . . I. L. R. 11 Calc. 52

2. ———— Right of way—Suit for declaration that party who has obtained an order under s. 320, Criminal Procedure Code, 1861, has no right of way—Proof of right to possession. In a suit for a declaration that defendant had no right of way over certain land belonging to the plaintiff, where it appears that the defendant had obtained an order from the Magistrate under the Criminal Procedure Code, 1861, s. 320, it was held that the onus of proving an easement did not lie, with the defendant, but that it was for the plaintiff to prove that he was entitled to exclusive possession. PUCHAI KHAN v. ABED SIRDAR . . . 21 W. R. 140

3. ———— Right of way or water-course over land—Suit to have right to easement determined after order of Magistrate under s. 532, Criminal Procedure Code, 1872. Where the right to have a way or water-course over certain land is disputed by the owner thereof, and an order, under s. 532 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, has been passed by the Magistrate in favour of the person claiming the right, the fact of such an order having been made will not be sufficient to relieve the latter from the onus of proving the claim, in a subsequent suit by the owner to establish his right to the exclusive use of the land. *Puchai Khan v. ## 19. EJECTMENT.

1. ———— Suit for ejectment—Limitation Act, 1859, s. 15. The law obtaining in India requires that in actions of ejectment the Courts should always enforce the rule that a plaintiff must recover by the strength of his own title; and a party who might have shifted the burden of proof, if he had proceeded under s. 15 of Act XIV of 1859, cannot, if he let slip that opportunity, obtain the same advantage in an action of ejectment. DADABHAI NARSIDAS v. SUB-COLLECTOR OF BROACH . . . 7 Bom. A. C. 82

2. ———— Trespass—Proof of title. In an ejectment suit, the defendant, though a trespasser, is entitled to require the plaintiff, who seeks to eject him, to prove that he has a superior title. KALU v. BARSU . . . I. L. R. 19 Bom. 803

3. ———— Defence of right of permanent occupancy—Defence of special character. In suits by the trustee of a temple to recover possession of certain lands with mesne profits, defendants set up in defence that they were absolute owners of the land in question, or, at least, were entitled to rights of permanent occupancy. In support of the latter contention, they relied, inter alia, upon certain pymash documents, which contained the word ulavadai, the use of which term, they contended, established the alleged right of permanent occupancy. Held, (i) that, where the occupier of land resists a suit for ejectment by setting up a claim of a right of permanent occupancy, the onus of establishing such a right lies on the defendant, inasmuch as by it he seeks to derogate from the ordinary incidents of property, and (ii) that the right expressed by the term ulavadai (which means an act or right of ploughing or cultivating lands) cannot be assumed to be a permanent right. RANGASAMI REDDI v. GNANA SAMMANDHA PANDARA SANNADHI . . . I. L. R. 22 Mad. 264

4. ———— Limitation—Tenancy. When a plaintiff seeks to eject persons from premises claimed by him, on the ground that they are in wrongful possession of the premises, he is bound to show that he or some of the persons under whom he claims have been in possession of the property within twelve years before suit. A mere allegation in the plaint that the persons sought to be ejected were the tenants of the person through whom the plaintiff claims will not shift the burden of proof. *Rao Karan Singh v. 6. ———— Nature of tenancy—Grounds of enhancement. In a suit to recover rent at an enhanced rate after notice had been granted, a kabuliati was put in in support of the plaintiff's case and admitted by defendants. A pottah put in by defendants was found by the lower Court to be a forgery. Held, that plaintiff's contention that the kabuliati does not give the full terms of the agreement binds him to show beyond all reasonable doubt what were the actual terms of the pottah. Having failed to do this, the kabuliati was treated as complete and conclusive evidence of the nature of the tenancy, which was inferred by the Court to be permanent and at a fixed rate. Held, that it lay upon the plaintiff to make out distinctly the different grounds on which he rested his right to enhance, viz., excess of area, increase of productiveness apart from the tenant's agency, and increase in the value of produce. *GOLAM ALI v. 8. ————— Similar rates.

MOHEHOODEEN AHMED* . . . . . 6 W. R., Act X, 39

9. ————— Custom to exempt certain land.

JOYESSUR NUNDEE*

6 W. R., Act X, 46

10. ————— Excess lands.

In a suit for enhancement of rent on the ground that defendant holds land in excess of what he pays rent for, it is plaintiff's duty to show that the lands in question are all included within the tenure of the defendant, but that the latter has been paying rent for a quantity less than the area of those lands. *AHMED HOSSEIN v. 11. ————— Alteration of area of tenant's holding.

To entitle the plaintiff to a decree for enhancement of rent on the ground of an alteration in the area of the defendant's holding, the plaintiff must show that the defendant is holding lands in excess of what he is paying rent for, and in order to do that he must show for what quantity of land the defendant is paying rent. *SURJA KANTA ACHARJEE v. 14. ————— Variation of rent.

The fact alone of variation in the amount of rent paid between one year and another does not necessarily establish a right in the plaintiff to enhance or affect the defendant's right to hold at a fixed rent. It is for the defendant to account for such variation. HURO NATH ROY v. CHITTRAMONEY DOSSEE . . . . . 3 W. R., Act X, 122

15. ————— Proof of uniformity of rent.

In a suit for enhanced rent of a talukh, the existence of which as an ancient talukh is undoubted, and in which the only question is whether the rent is fixed or variable, the onus is first on the defendant to prove that he has held at a uniform rate for twenty years, and (if the defendant prove so much) then on the plaintiff to prove that the rent has varied since the permanent settlement. *RASHMONEE DEBEA v. 16. ————— Beng. Reg. VIII of 1793, ss. 48, 51—Registration.

In a suit for enhancement of rent:—Held, that, in order to bring a talukh within the scope of s. 51, Regulation VIII of 1793, it was sufficient to show that the tenure existed, and was capable of being registered at the time of the decennial settlement, the fact of actual registration not being an essential element in the formation of a talukh. Held, further, that the effect of proof of the existence of such a talukh at the time of the decennial settlement was sufficient to throw the onus on the plaintiff to prove that it was held at a variable rent. *RADHIKA CHOWDHRAIN v. It is sufficient for him to show that he and they are the only representatives of the person who last held the property. 4. ——— Adoption under will—Proof of validity of adoption. A Hindu died leaving a son (who afterwards died a minor and unmarried), a widow, and three daughters. On the death of the minor, the widow succeeded to the property, and, under a will of her late husband, adopted in 1851 a son of her husband's brother. The widow died in 1866. One of the daughters, as guardian of her infant son born in 1853, brought a suit to set aside the will, and with it the adoption, and for recovery of possession of the property left by her minor brother. The defence set up was that the will was genuine; that the plaintiff should have sued within twelve years from the adoption; and that she had in 1851 admitted the adoption in having accepted a dar-patni from the guardian of the adopted son. Held, that the onus was upon the adopted son to prove the validity of the adoption, and not upon the plaintiff suing as heir to prove its invalidity, even though he alleged fraud and adduced no evidence in support of it. *TARINI CHARAN CHOWDHRY v. A few days before his death, S adopted the plaintiff (his nephew) and executed a deed of adoption, which stated that he had no hope that his son Bala was alive, and that he had therefore adopted the plaintiff. The deed further declared the plaintiff to be the owner of all S's property with all the rights of a natural son, but provided that, in the event of the lost son returning, he should have half. In 1892 the plaintiff, as S's adopted son, brought this suit to recover some of S's property, which was in the hands of the defendants, who claimed it as S's heirs. They (inter alia) impeached the plaintiff's adoption. Held, that, in order to recover the property as the adopted son of S, it lay on the plaintiff to prove a valid adoption. It was a condition precedent to prove that at the date of the adoption S was without a son. It was therefore for the plaintiff to prove that Bala was then dead. There was at that time no presumption that Bala was dead, and, there being no evidence on the point, it was impossible to say when he died, or consequently that the adoption was valid. Held, however, that plaintiff was entitled to succeed as donee under the deed of adoption. It was clearly S's intention to give the estate to the plaintiff as being his adopted son. But if the adoption was invalid, the gift had no effect. The onus here was on the defendants. It was for them to show that Bala was at that date alive and the adoption therefore invalid. That burden they had not discharged, and the plaintiff therefore was entitled to a decree. Per FARRAN, C.J.—Where a deed of gift or will confers an estate upon a named person, because he fills or by reason of his filling a certain character, he is entitled to recover the estate without affirmatively proving that he fills such character. The onus of proving that he does not fill the character, which is the reason of the gift, lies upon those who dispute his claim. The whole question is one of onus of proof. *RANGO BALAJI v. 6. ——— Suit to enforce the mortgage against son's shares—Joint Hindu family—Mortgage by father—Legal necessity—Burden of proof. As a general rule, a creditor endeavouring to enforce his claim under a hypothecation-bond given by a Hindu father against the estate of a joint Hindu family in respect of money lent or advanced to the father having only a limited interest, should, if the question is raised, prove either that the money was obtained by the father for a legal necessity, or that he made such reasonable inquiries as would satisfy a prudent man that the loan was contracted to pay off an antecedent debt, or for the other legal necessities of the family. There is a distinction between such cases as this and cases in which a decree has been obtained against the father and the property sold, or cases in which the sons come into Court to ask for relief against a sale effected by their father for an antecedent debt. Where a decree was obtained against the father and a sale effected, the presumption is that the decree was properly made. Where a son comes into Court to ask for relief against a sale effected by his father for an antecedent debt, it is for the son to make out a case for the relief asked for. In a suit against the members of a joint Hindu family upon a bond given by their father and in which family property was hypothecated no evidence was given on either side as to the circumstances in which the bond was given. There was no evidence to show that any inquiry had been made by the plaintiff as to the objects for which the bond was executed by the father. Held, that the burden of proof was upon the plaintiff to show either that the money was obtained for a legal necessity, or that he had made reasonable inquiries and obtained such information as would satisfy a prudent man that the loan was contracted to pay off an antecedent debt or for the other legal necessities of the family, and that, no evidence having been given, the suit must be dismissed. *JAMNA v. The plaintiff, widow of the only son who survived his father who was the owner of village lands and other property, had become, on her husband's death without issue, entitled, as the widow, to the estate which he had inherited. But she obtained possession of only half of it. The other half was in the recorded possession, when this suit was brought, of the widow of her late husband's younger brother, who died in his father's lifetime. The case which the latter widow, as defendant, now sought to make was that she had become entitled to a share in the estate as the result of a series of transactions, by way of family arrangement, in which the two widows, and their mother-in-law, widow of the deceased father, had taken part. These included a reference to arbitration, a release and dakhil kharij in settlement records. Held, that the plaintiff must succeed, in the absence of proof of which the burden was on the defendant that the plaintiff, when ceding half of the estate to which she was entitled, had knowledge of her right as widow, to the whole, and had freely made what in effect was a gift. *DEO KUAR v. execution of a valid deed by—Power of reversioner to sell or mortgage reversionary interest in—Expectancy—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 6, cl. (a). K died in 1866 possessed of considerable property, both moveable and immoveable. He left surviving him a widow, H, who died in 1878, a daughter, A, married to one L, and two grandsons, I and S, sons of A, the latter of whom, S, died some time subsequent to 1881, as did also his father L. In December 1877, a mortgage-deed was executed over certain of the ancestral property of the family of K, the ostensible executants being L for himself and H, A, and I through L as their general attorney. This deed was to secure a debt of Rs 10,000 stated to be to some small extent for an advance in cash, and as to the balance in respect of certain previous debts and interest thereon. At the date of this bond both I and S were minors. In April 1881, H having in the meanwhile died and I having attained majority, but S being still a minor, a second bond of a similar nature to the former was executed by L, A, and I for Rs 20,000, this sum being recited as composed of various debts of earlier date with interest thereon of an advance to pay Government revenue, an advance for expenses of the marriage of L's daughter, and a very small balance in cash. It was not shown that the debts secured by either of these two bonds were debts incurred for legal necessity by the widow or daughter of K, or that the mortgagees, after due inquiry, had reasonable grounds for believing that such necessity existed, nor was it shown that the mortgages were entered into with the consent of all the husband's kindred under circumstances which might raise a valid presumption that the debts secured by them were properly incurred. It was further not shown that the power-of-attorney under which L purported to act in executing the bond of 1877 on behalf of H, A, and I was ever properly explained to the professed executants or that they understood its import nor was it shown that either of the bonds was duly explained to and comprehended by the professed executants other than L himself, in manner required by law in the case of documents executed by pardanashin women; nor, though at the date of the execution of the second bond I had attained the age of majority, did it appear that he signed the bond with any clear knowledge of its contents or of the liability which he was professing to incur thereby, or otherwise than through the influence brought to bear on him by his father L. Held, on suit by the mortgagees to bring to sale the ancestral property which had been of K in his lifetime in enforcement of the two mortgages abovementioned, that the mortgages were not binding on the alleged executants or on the ancestral property at the date of suit in the hands of A. I's interest in the family property in suit could only be affected by the mortgage of the 2nd of April 1881 on proof that the debt was in fact one, or was on reasonable inquiry by, and statements made to, the lenders of the money believed by them to be one, in respect of which his mother A, as a Hindu daughter in possession, could mortgage or charge the family property beyond her own then vested interest in it, or on proof that he, as one of the reversioners, by joining with his mother in executing the documents of mortgage, led the lenders of the money to believe that such a necessity existed for the loan as enabled the Hindu daughter to create a valid mortgage on the family property beyond the extent of her own life-interest. The Hindu law which prevails in the N.-W. Provinces recognizes no power in a reversioner to sell or mortgage his interest in expectancy, even although he may be the heir-apparent. It is absolutely necessary, before holding that a pardanashin lady or her property is liable on a contract alleged to have been made by her or in consequence of an alleged execution by her of a general power-of-attorney, to be reasonably satisfied that the liability she was incurring and the nature of the transaction were explained to her; and more particularly is this the case if it is sought by reason of her having executed a document, to fix her and her property with a liability to pay a debt, which, if the document had not been executed by her or by an agent appointed by her with adequate power, could not have been enforced against her property. It is also necessary when money-lenders in this country seek to enforce against the property of a Hindu family a contract of mortgage made by a reversioner, who, although of age at the time, was then still of tender years and without experience of business, for the Court, when the question is raised, to be satisfied that the reversioner understood the nature of the transaction and the effect of the contract which he was entering into, or that the reversioner of the family property, in which the reversioner had an estate in expectancy only, was liable for the debt in respect of which the mortgage is sought to be enforced, and that no unfair advantage was taken of the reversioner's youth and inexperience. *ACHHAN KUAR v. 30. ———— Alienation by widow—Proof that money on mortgage was advanced for purpose justified by legal necessity—Evidence of sufficiency of husband's estate to maintain widow. A Hindu proprietor's heirs in possession after the death of his widow, who had mortgaged part of the inheritance, were sued by the mortgagee's heir, who represented him, to enforce the mortgage as binding on the land. There was evidence that, after the mortgage was executed, previous mortgages made by the widow were paid off with the borrowed money; but there was no evidence connecting any of those securities with a debt of the husband; or that the mortgage was made for a legitimate purpose. Held, that, although the suit was brought by the representative, and not by the original mortgagee, the burden of proving the money to have been advanced to the widow for a purpose justified by legal necessity was on the plaintiff; and that it was incumbent on him to adduce sufficient evidence of the nature of the transaction. That general evidence to the effect that the husband died in debt, and that the widow substituted new securities at reduced interest for former mortgages, was not sufficient to exempt the plaintiff from having to prove the particulars of the transaction and its justification. The question as to the onus of proof in such cases is one not capable of a general and inflexible answer, but the presumption proper to be made will vary with circumstances. Thus, a mortgagee, who is setting up a charge in his favour made by one whose title to alienate he knew to be limited, must prove the facts which embody the representations made to him of the alleged deeds of the estate and the motives influencing his immediate loan; but such proof must not be required from one not an original party, after a lapse of time and enjoyment and apparent acquiescence. Where, also, a charge is created by the substitution of a new security for an older one, and the consideration for the older one was an old precedent debt of an ancestor not previously questioned, the presumption will arise in favour of a consideration that binds the estate. The lender is bound to inquire into the necessity for the charge, and to satisfy himself that the manager is acting for the benefit of the estate. But if he does so inquire and acts honestly, the real existence of an alleged sufficient and reasonably credited necessity is not a condition precedent to the validity of his charge, and he is not bound to see to the application of the money. *HUNOONMAN PERSHAD PANDEY v. Following the principle laid down by the Court in the case of Kanailal Jowhari v. Kaminee Dabee, 1 B. L. R. O. collusion—Purchaser. Where a plaintiff alleges fraud or illegality as a ground for setting aside a sale made under s. 18, the onus lies upon him to make out a prima facie case of fraud or illegality, and to show that the debt, which formed the consideration for the sale in such case, was one for which the minor was not responsible. Per PRINSEP, J.—A stranger purchasing from a guardian, acting under the authority granted under s. 18 of Act XL of 1858, will be entitled to every protection from the Courts, so long as it is not shown that he acted in a fraudulent or collusive manner, knowing that the debts, for the liquidation of which the purchase-money would be applied, were not debts lawfully binding on the minor. The burden of proof in such a case would lie heavily on the person seeking to set aside the alienation. But where the purchaser is himself the creditor, and therefore has the means of satisfying a Court as to the origin and nature of the debts and how they are binding on the minor, the burden of proof is shifted on the purchaser, when the plaintiff has established a prima facie case. *SIKHER CHUND v. ## (c) MAINTENANCE.

40. ——— Right in property beyond mere maintenance—Right of widow exercising rights of ownership over estate of husband. Where the widow has been allowed to exercise acts of ownership in respect of landed property belonging to her deceased husband incompatible with a mere right to maintenance from his estate, the onus of proof that the widow is entitled to nothing beyond a bare maintenance lies upon the party asserting this. Now-INDH SINGH v. SOHUN KOORER.

(d) MARRIAGE.

41. ——— Hindu law—Panchals—Kurbars—Sub-divisions of Shudra tribe—Inter-marriage valid—Custom as to illegality. A marriage between a man of the Panchal caste and a woman of the Kurbar caste is valid. The Panchals and the Kurbars are sub-divisions of the Shudra tribe. The onus lies upon the party alleging an illegality by reason of immemorial custom to prove such prohibiting custom. *Inderun Valungy-pooly Taver v. Ramasawmy Pandia Talaver, 13 Moo. I. ## (e) STRIDHAN.

42. ——— Purchase with stridhan, proof of—Hindu wife seeking to exempt property from the debts of her husband. A Hindu wife seeking to exempt property from responsibility for her husband's debts must clearly prove that she had stridhan, and that the property was purchased bonâ fide with her exclusive funds. BROJOMOHUN MYTEE v. RADHA KOOMAREE

W. R. 1864, 60

43. ——— Proof of property being stridhan—Gift of Hindu widow. The burden of proving property (the subject of a gift of a Hindu widow) to be stridhan rests with those claiming under her. CHUNDER MONEE DOSSEE v. JOYKISSEN SIRCAR

23. HUSBAND AND WIFE.

1. ——— Suit by wife to recover property from husband—Alienation by husband of securities belonging to wife. In a suit by a Mahomedan wife, who had left her husband's protection on account of ill-usage, for recovery, among other property, of certain securities belonging to her which had got into the husband's possession, and the detention of which he justified on the ground that he had purchased them from her, and on their endorsement and delivery to him had paid the full value for them, the correct principle as to the onus of the proof is that, although the wife may have failed to establish affirmatively the precise case alleged by her, her husband, having admitted the receipt of the securities from her, was bound to show something more than mere endorsement and delivery; that the relation of the parties being what it was it lay upon him to prove that the transactions which he set up were bonâ fide sales and purchases, and that he actually gave full value for what he received from her; and where it was proved that the wife had the securities while under her husband's protection, and some had passed from her to him and others to his creditors, and that the wife left her husband's house in destitution, the proof adduced by the husband as to the sale for full consideration to him must be full and clear, and such as to satisfy a Court of Justice that the transactions were conducted fairly and properly, and with a due regard to the rights and interests of the wife. Where it was in proof that a portion of the immoveable property of the wife had passed to a bonâ fide purchaser under conveyances executed by the wife to her husband or to such purchaser, the burden of proof in a suit by her to recover the property is upon her, as she seeks to be relieved from the effect of her own conveyances, the execution of which she does not dispute against one who, if not an absolute stranger, stands in no fiduciary relation to her. *BUZLOOR RUHEEM v. 2. ——— Suit by wife for property after divorce—Mahomedan law. In a suit by a Mahomedan lady against her husband after divorce for recovery of property belonging to her which her husband held before the divorce, the possession of the husband being the possession of the wife, the onus lies on the husband to prove his right to the property; till that was done, the presumption was that the property so held by the husband was held by him on behalf of the wife. ABDOOL ALI alias SHOAGEEA v. KURRUMNISSA

9 W. R. 153

3. ——— Suit for possession of property of which husband and wife have been tenants—Nature of possession. In a suit to recover certain property on the allegation that plaintiff's father had obtained it in gift from his wife L., and that it had been in the possession of father and son more than thirty years, defendant having had his name recorded in the Collectorate as heir to L.:—Held, with reference to the fact, that there had been a tenancy of husband and wife together, that it was incumbent on plaintiff to prove that his possession was possession on his own account, and not that of an agent. VELAET ALI KHAN v. AZMUN . . . 11 W. R. 513

24. INTERVENORS.

1. ———— Suit for rent—Proof of receipt and enjoyment of rent. In a suit for rent under a kabuliati, if a third party intervenes and supports the defendant's case that the rents have been paid, not to the plaintiff, but to the intervenor, the onus of proving such previous receipt and enjoyment is altogether on the intervenor; and until his intervention is disposed of, the plaintiff need not prove his title or the kabuliati. RAM BHUROSE SINGH v. JAWA MAHATOON . . . 11 W. R. 319

RADHA KISHORE TALOOKDAR v. GOLUCK CHUNDER ROY . . . 11 W. R. 366

2. ———— Suit against person holding under decree under s. 77, Act X of 1859. The onus of proving title was on a plaintiff seeking to oust a person formally declared by a decree under s. 77, Act X of 1859, to be in enjoyment of the rent of disputed land and consequently in possession. RUNGO MONEE DOSSEE v. UNNO-POORNA DEBIA . . . 7 W. R. 149

3. ———— Suit to get rid of decision in favour of intervenor. In order to get rid of the effect of a Collector's decision in favour of an intervenor under s. 77, Act X of 1859, the party entitled must bring a suit to establish his title, it being not enough for him merely to establish a vague allegation of dispossession and throw it upon the defendant to prove title. MOHESUR MOOKERJEE v. KALEE DOSS MOOKERJEE . 11 W. R. 573

4. ———— Suit after successful intervention under s. 77, Act X of 1859. Plaintiff's suit for rent against the raiyats of certain land alleged to belong to a mouzah (Baboollee) which they had bought at an auction sale having been dismissed in consequence of defendant's intervention, under s. 77, Act X of 1859, they brought an action against her to recover possession. The defence was that the land in dispute did not belong to plaintiff's mouzah, but to defendant's mouzah, Gyruptore. Held, that the plaintiffs were bound to prove their own case, and to show that the land belonged to their purchased estate (Baboollee). In this case, however, both parties had consented to have the case decided on the question whether mouzah Gyruptore was or was not in existence and the defendant could not therefore make out a new case in special appeal. MOONDUR BIBEE v. HONOOMAN PERSHAD . . . 11 W. R. 277

5. ———— Suit after intervention under s. 77, Act X of 1859—Right to rent. Where a suit by the purchaser of an alleged lakhiraj tenure for rent from his under-tenant was thrown out by the intervention of the superior landlord, under s. 77, Act X of 1859:—Held, that all the plaintiff had to do in a regular suit brought by him in consequence was to prove that he was entitled to the rent from the under-tenant. It was not necessary for him to prove that his land was valid lakhiraj. RAJ CHUNDER GHOSE v. JOY CHUNDER DUTT . . . 12 W. R. 197

6. ———— Civil Procedure Code, s. 73. Where the plaintiff sued to recover possession of certain property which he alleged he had purchased from H., and proved his purchase, and B., the mother of H., intervened and contended that the property was her own and purchased for herself and not on behalf of H.:—Held, the onus was on B. to prove the title. JAGGADANAND MISSEER v. HAMID RASUL . . . 8 B. L. R. 182 note

S.C. JUGGODANUND MISSEER v. HAMID RUSOOL . . . 10 W. R. 52

7. ———— In a suit upon a registered kobala for possession of certain property the appellant intervened alleging a prior purchase by him from the plaintiff's vendor and was made a defendant. On the plaintiff having proved their title against the original defendants, the lower Courts held that the onus was on the appellant, who was not shown to be actually in possession to prove his allegation. Held, that the lower Courts were right in so holding. Jaggadanand Misser v. Hamid Rasul, 8 B. L. R. 182 note; 10 W. R. 52, approved and followed. BALNIA KUNDU DUROYE v. ADIKUNDA PUNDA . . . 7 C. L. R. 560

8. ———— Proof of title. A plaintiff who sues by right of inheritance for the recovery of lands in the possession, not illegal or forcible, of defendants, to the rents whereof it was held in a previous suit, in which he intervened, that he had not been in the actual enjoyment, is bound to prove as well his title to the estate as his lineal descent from, or relation in such decree of contiguity as would entitle him to part succession to, the original acquirer thereof. CHYTUN MYTEE v. LUKHEE CHURN PATNAIK . . . 8 W. R. 258

9. ———— Suit for kabuliati—Act X of 1859, s. 77—Intervenor. In a suit to obtain a kabuliati, the defendant admitted the plaintiff's title. A third party intervened (under s. 77, Act X of 1859) alleging that he was in actual receipt and enjoyment of the rent. Held, that the onus was on the intervenor to prove that he was bona fide in actual receipt and enjoyment of the rent, and not on the plaintiff to prove his possession. BAHARULLA v. MAJAN . . . 3 B. L. R. Ap. 61

10. ——— Suit for declaration of right—Suit for usufruct of property—Unsuccessful intervention. The mortgage of certain property having been purchased by S, he sold it to G, who foreclosed, got a decree for possession, and sold it to W. W's intervention having failed in a suit for arrears of rent by a party setting up a title intermediate between him and the raiyat, on the ground of a miras pottah obtained from the mortgagor subsequently to the mortgage, he (W) sued to have his right declared to the rents payable by the raiyat. Held, that it was not only not necessary for the plaintiff to prove possession, but the very ground he took was want of possession, his cause of action being that he was prevented from enjoying the usufruct. Held, also, that it was for the defendant to show that the incumbrance did not injure the outturn of the property. GORIND CHUNDER BANNERJEE v. WISE

25. LANDLORD AND TENANT.

1. ——— Allegation that lands are held under different title. Where a raiyat holds lands of considerable extent under a zamindar, and alleges that one or two plots occupied by him are held under a different title, the onus is on him to prove his allegation. RAM COOMAR ROY v. BEJOY GORIND BURAL

7 W. R. 535

2. ——— Allegation of independent title—Suit to confirm title In a suit by the lessee of the purchaser of the rights and interests of the first defendant to obtain possession of some portions of land alleged to fall within the share of the zamindari so purchased, defendants contended that the plots which were the subject of suit, although falling within the ambit of the zamindari, did not in fact form a portion of it, but were lakhiraj lands belonging to themselves by a title independent of the title to the zamindari. The evidence showed the principal defendant to have been in receipt of the rents and profits of the land in suit, as well as of his share of the zamindari. Held, that the onus lay upon the defendants to show the alleged independent title; failing to do so, the prima facie title made out by the plaintiff ought to prevail. SHUMDAN ALI v. MUTHOORNATH DUTT

14 W. R. 226

3. ——— Rival tenants—Resignation of tenancy. In a suit between two rival tenants claiming to hold under the same landlord, where one of them admitted the tenancy of the other, but pleaded resignation by him of his tenancy and a lease to himself the onus of proof was held to rest upon him who made the allegation. KISHEN CHUNDER SHAHA v. HOOKOOM CHAND SHAHA

W. R. 1864, 47

4. ——— Allegation of particular tenure—Proof of title. The onus in a suit in which the plaintiff seeks to obtain a declaration that the defendants held a tenure under him lies on the plaintiff, who must prove strictly the title under which he seeks that declaration. ROYES MOLLAH v. MUDHOOSOODUN MUNDUL

9 W. R. 154

5. ——— Transferability of tenure—Presumption. There is no presumption that any tenure held is not a transferable tenure, and a landlord who sues for khas possession on the ground that a tenure sold was not transferable must establish his case as an ordinary plaintiff. DOYA CHAND SHAHA v. ANUND CHUNDER SEN MOZUMDAR

I. L. R. 14 Calc. 382

6. ——— Transferability of tenures. In a suit brought to recover possession of certain lands forming part of the patni estate of the plaintiffs and constituting the raiyati holding of one M, which lands were sold in execution of a money-decree against M and purchased by the defendant, the defendant set up that the tenure held by M was of a permanent and transferable nature. Held, that the onus of proving the transferability of this tenure was upon the defendant. Doya Chand Shaha v. Anund Chunder Sen, I. L. R. 14 Calc. 382, not followed. KRIPAMOYI DABIA v. DURGA GOVIND SIRKAR

I. L. R. 15 Calc. 89

7. ——— Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 106, 108—Transferability of tenancy—Suit by zamindar to set aside a Court-sale of his raiyat's interest. A zamindari raiyat mortgaged the land comprised in his holding, and the mortgagee, having sued and obtained a decree on his mortgage, attached the mortgagor's interest in the land and purchased it at the Court-sale held in execution of his decree. The zamindar who had intervened unsuccessfully in execution now sued to set aside the sale and to eject the decree holder and the judgment-debtor from the land. Neither party adduced evidence. Held, that there was no presumption that the tenant was a tenant-at-will, nor was there a presumption that the tenancy was not transferable—such presumptions being contrary to ss. 106 and 108 of the Transfer of Property Act, respectively. The burden of proof, therefore, lay on the plaintiff and had not been discharged, and the suit must consequently be dismissed. APPA RAU v. SUBBANNA

I. L. R. 13 Mad. 60

8. ——— Non-transferable tenure. Where a plaintiff sets up a case of an exceptional nim osut-howla, alleging it to be not transferable, the plaintiff should be called on to prove the allegation, before a defendant in possession, under an order of a Revenue Court, can be called on to prove title. been in possession twenty years, and who also claimed a mokurari interest:—Held, that the onus lay with the substantive defendant to show that his lease was mokurari. RUGHONATH DOBEY v. PURES RAM MAHATA . . . 10 W. R. 9

10. ————— Khadimi tenure. Where persons have long held as Khadims under the superior holders or managers of endowed property and claim to hold a permanent khadimi-tenure from which they are not liable to be ejected, except for misconduct, the onus probandi is on them. CHAND MIAN v. KHONDEAR ASHRUTOLLAH . . . 6 W. R. 89

11. ————— Allegation that lands are sir—Sale in execution of decree. Where a person whose proprietary rights in a mehal have been sold in execution of a decree alleges that land held by him at the time of such sale was held as sir, the burden of proof lies on him. HARI DAS v. GHANSHAM NARAIN . . . I. L. R. 6 All. 286

12. ————— Suit for possession of ayma land—Identification by plaintiff. Where a plaintiff establishes a prima facie case of the identity of ayma land which he claims through his ancestor, who had been allowed by the Collector to retain it, it will rest with defendant to prove that the land is his own or that it is not the ayma land which the plaintiff's ancestor once held. MOLLA ABDOOR RUB v. HURRYHUR MOOKERJEE . . . 1 Ind. Jur. N. S. 50

13. ————— Gorabundi tenure—Transferability, proof of. The onus lies on a plaintiff claiming in virtue of a purchase of the tenure from a former holder to be entitled to possession of gorabandi lands, to prove that such lands are transferable. CHUTTERBHUI BHARTI v. JANKI PROSAUD SINGH . . . 4 C. L. R. 298

14. ————— Khoti tenure, proof of—Suit for rent. In a suit by a kabuliatar khot for rent from cultivators holding lands in a khoti village, the onus does not lie on the plaintiff to prove the land to be khoti; but the holder of land in a khoti estate must prove that he is exempted from paying rent according to the custom of the country. MUHAMMAD YAKOUB v. MUHAMMAD ISMAIL . . . 9 Bom. 278

15. ————— Suit for value of trees cut by tenant—Nature of tenure. There is no presumption that orchard lands in Behar are held on a bhaoli tenure, there being many instances of orchards there held on a nukdi tenure. The onus of proving the special nature of the tenure is on the zamindar suing for the value of trees cut down and not on the tenant-defendant. DOOMUN SINGH v. SOOKUN LALI . . . 2 W. R. 12

16. ————— Orchard land—Possession of planter of trees. Although generally it may be taken that land whereon an orchard is planted belongs to the zamindar, and has been granted to a stranger to plant trees thereon, in which case it reverts to the zamindar after the trees have disappeared and the land has become arable, yet when it is asserted that the land belongs to the planter of the orchard, having been acquired by purchase, it is for the zamindar to prove that the land belongs to him and was given for plantation; and in the absence of such proof the holder or occupant may rely on his long possession. DHUNEE RAM v. AMANUT HOSSEIN . . . 2 Agra Pt. II, 161

17. ————— Suit by landlord for possession of land in his estate—Right to possession. When a landlord sues for possession of land within his estate, the onus is on him to prove that he is entitled to that possession. GUDADHUR BANERJEE v. KANYE DEKHOORIA . . . 8 W. R. 191

18. ————— Suit by talukhdar purchaser at sale—Dispossession and disputed title. A talukhdar who had purchased at an execution-sale the under-tenure of one of his tenants, sued him to obtain possession of the land contained in the purchased holding, of some of which he said he had been dispossessed, and in regard to the remainder of which his title was disputed. Held, that the deputation of an Ameen was improper, and that the onus lay on the plaintiff to prove his case. SHUSTEE RAM PAUL v. NOBO KANT ROY CHOWDHRY . . . 14 W. R. 190

19. ————— Lease of land of particular nature—Proof that it came under that designation. Where a landlord leased out some land to a tenant, reserving to himself only such portion of it as fell under the definition of nila zamin:—Held, that it was for the landlord, in a suit for the possession of such nila zamin, to bring evidence to prove what portion of the land leased out was nila; and that, in the absence of such evidence, the whole land must be taken as having been leased out to the tenant. REILY v. BAMA SOONDUREE DOSSEE . . . 25 W. R. 398

20. ————— Suit for possession—Dispute as to ground and nature of possession. In a suit for possession of a portion of land on the allegation that it had belonged to plaintiff as his ancestral property up to the date of his being ousted, when the defendant, admitting the alleged possession, contended that it had been not that of an owner, but only permissive possession as that of a tenant:—Held, that the burden of proof lay on the defendant. BOISTUB CHURN SEIN v. TRAHEE RAM SEIN . . . 15 W. R. 32

21. ————— Suit to recover share of holding after sale in execution of decree for rent—Proof of status as tenant and recognition of division of tenure. In a suit to recover a share of a holding, the whole of which had been sold in execution of a decree for arrears of rent, the plaintiff, who claimed to hold a divided portion of the tenure, was held bound to prove either that such division had been recognized and ratified by the zamindar or that the latter received rent from him, i.e., he would have to prove his status as tenant in respect of the share in question. HURHUR SINGH v. OOMA KOORER . . . 16 W. R. 93

22. ———— Exercise of right incidental to tenure—Objection to right. When a party objects to the exercise by another of an ordinary legal right incidental to his tenure, it is for the objecting party to give some prima facie evidence as to the grounds on which that objection is founded. GYARAM MUNDUL v. GYARAM NAIK

1 Ind. Jur. O. S. 22: Marsh. 28: 1 Hay 65

23. ———— Right of occupancy—Permanent cultivators—Suit for ejectment. The defendant's ancestors were the only cultivating tenants of the lands of a certain temple from the year 1829, and in a suit brought by the temple trustees against one of the defendants in 1858 it was found that the occupancy of the defendant's ancestors dated back at least to 1806. In 1833, the defendant's ancestor was recognized by the Collector who then managed the temple, as an hereditary raiyat. In the paimash account of 1827, defendant's ancestor was described as a "cultivating parakudi ulavada," a term which does not necessarily imply a right of occupancy. Held, in a suit by the trustee of the temple to eject the defendants after notice to quit, that the burden of proving that a right of occupancy was not an incident of defendants' tenure lay on the plaintiff. KRISHNASAMI PILLAI v. VARADARAJA AYYANGAR . I. L. R. 5 Mad. 345

24. ———— Right of occupancy—Permanent cultivator—Paracudi. The defendant's ancestors or predecessors in title were the cultivating tenants of the lands of a certain temple from a date not later than 1827, in which year they were so described in the paimash accounts. In 1830 they executed a muchalka to the Collector, who then managed the temple, whereby they agreed among other things to pay certain dues. They were described in the muchalka as paracudis. In 1857 the plaintiff's predecessors took over the management of the temple from, and executed a muchalka to, the Collector, whereby he agreed among other things not to eject the raiyats as long as they paid kist. In 1882, the dues (which were payable separately) having fallen into arrear, the manager of the temple sued to eject the defendants. Held, that the burden of proving the permanent character of the tenure set up by the defendants lay on them. *Krishnasami v. 26. ———— Suit for ejectment—Right of occupancy. In an ejectment suit by a landlord against his tenant the plaintiff cannot succeed unless he shows that under the terms of the tenancy and in the circumstances that exist he has a right to eject the defendant, although the latter may allege and fail to establish a right of permanent occupancy. *VENKATACHARLU v. I. L. R. 15 Mad. 95

27. ———— Ejectment, suit for—Occupancy-rights—Madras Rent Recovery Act (Madras Act VIII of 1865), s. 12. A zamindari, having given to the defendant, who was a cultivating raiyat in the zamindari, a notice to quit, now sued to eject him from his holding. The defendant pleaded that he and his ancestors had been jirayati raiyats from time immemorial, and it was found that their holding had lasted at least one hundred and fifty years. The defendant had executed and delivered to the plaintiff a muchalka for one year, and he had made no default in payment of rent. Held, that the onus was on the plaintiff, and as she had failed to prove that the defendant's tenancy had commenced under her or her ancestors, the suit should be dismissed. VENKATA MAHALAKSHMANMA v. RAMAJOGI . . . I. L. R. 16 Mad. 271

28. ———— Right of tenant to dig a tank on his land. In a suit by a zamindar alleging that the defendant, his tenant, had dug a tank on his land, and thereby done him damage by converting the land from its original state, and the conversion is admitted by the defendant, but his defence is that he had a right to convert it, the onus is on the defendant to show his right to dig the tank. In the absence of clear proof of the nature of his tenure, he should at least show that the digging the tank is a fair and reasonable use of the land, and one which will not be to the detriment of the zamindar. *TARINI CHARAN BOSE v. 29. ———— Proof of zamindari rights—Right to garden planted with trees. The owner of a bagh in an estate in which he is not possessed of any zamindari rights must, if he claim a higher right than that ordinarily possessed by a tenant planter or the successor of such a planter, produce evidence in support of his claim; but when the bagh has been admittedly planted by a zamindar and has been, on the sale of his zamindari rights, reserved by him, it is incumbent on the purchaser to prove that by the reservation the vendor reserved only the interest which a tenant-planter would have possessed in the bagh. *ALI BUKSH v. 30. ———— Suit for assessment of lands accreted to zimma tenure—Beng. Reg. VIII of 1793, s. 51—Beng. Reg. XI of 1825. A suit for the assessment of lands accreted to a zimma tenure must be tried upon s. 51, Reg. VIII of 1793, the burden being on the plaintiff to prove that the tenure is liable to the assessment sought; and the

31. ———— Acknowledgment of tenancy—Suit for kabuliat. In a suit before the Collector for a kabuliat, on the ground that the defendant had occupied and cultivated certain lands of the plaintiff, the defendant pleaded that he was co-parcener with the plaintiff of the land, but he admitted that he had given a kabuliat for some of the lands he occupied. Held, that, since by giving the kabuliat the defendant had acknowledged the plaintiff to be his landlord, the onus of proving the plea was upon the defendant. *JUGGOBUNDU MOZOOMDAR v. GOOROO PERSHAD ROY v. JUGGOBUNDU MOZOOMDAR . . . . . W. R. F. B. 15: 1 Hay 228

32. ———— Suit by raiyat for pottah at fair and equitable rates. The proprietors of a certain holding having refused the terms of the Government, a farming settlement was made with the present defendant who undertook to confirm and ratify all amulnamahs granted by the zamindars while the settlement proceedings had been pending. Plaintiff, being a raiyat without a right of occupancy, but one who had got an amulnamah, sued for a pottah at the rate fixed by the amulnamah. Held, that the amulnamah formed the basis of a special contract between the parties and took their case out of the purview of ss. 5 and 8 of the Rent Law; and that by the terms of the amulnamah the defendant was bound to give plaintiff a pottah on fair and equitable rates ("upajukta"), which were to depend on the rates which he himself obtained from Government. Held, that the onus of proving that the rate which he claimed was fair and equitable was upon the plaintiff. *KISHEN PERSHAD SINGH v. 35. ———— Intervenor—Plea of payment. In a suit for rent where defendant denies the relationship of landlord and tenant as subsisting between himself and the plaintiff, and states that he paid his rent to an intervenor, it is not enough that the intervention is set aside; it still remains for the Court to investigate the question whether the defendant is a raiyat of the plaintiff. JAGURDEE v. RADHA KISHORE . . . . . 13 W. R. 259

36. ———— Eviction of tenant by title superior to lessor. Where a tenant is sued for rent, he can set up eviction by title paramount to that of his lessor as an answer, and, if evicted from part of the land, an apportionment of the rent may take place. The onus is on the lessor who claims to be entitled to an appointment to show what is the fair rate of the lands out of which the tenant was not evicted. GOPANUND JHA v. LALLA GOBIND PERSHAD . . . . . 12 W. R. 109

37. ———— Suit under special arrangement. In a suit for rent alleged to be due under a particular arrangement, the existence of which is repudiated by defendant, it is for plaintiff to prove the arrangement. SHUMBHOO GEER GOSSAIN v. RAM JEWAN LALL . . . . . 8 W. R. 509

38. ———— Rent of whole tenure—Suit by shareholder. In a suit for rent by a shareholder where the defendant contends that he is not bound to pay otherwise than by entirely to the person entitled to the whole rent, the onus is on the plaintiff to show that he is entitled to sue for a fractional portion. LALUN v. HEMRAJ SINGH . . . . . 20 W. R. 76

39. ———— Rate of rent, proof of—Evidence that rent stated in lease has been realized. The mere fact that a tenant some time ago gave a kabuliyat for a limited period at a particular rate of rent is not sufficient in itself to throw upon the defendant the entire burden of proving what the present rent is without any evidence on the part of the landlord that the rent specified in the kabuliyat had ever been realized from him. MOKUNDA CHANDRA SARMA v. ARPAN ALI SHEIKH . . . . . 2 C. W. N. 47

40. ———— Shifting of onus—Claim for rent—Written receipts, if necessary proofs of payment—Written receipts, if primary evidence. Written receipts for payments are important, but by no means necessary as proof; nor are they of the nature of primary evidence, the loss of which must be shown in order to let in secondary. On the evidence in the case it was held that, though the case is a most obscure and of an unsatisfactory character, and that, although the plaintiff had given good reasons for holding that such part of the defendant's case as related to the missing receipts was not worthy of belief, yet that the defendant did give evidence of payment of the rent claimed, sufficient to throw back again on the plaintiff the onus of proving that the rent was still due. Plaintiff's evidence was silent on the crucial point of payment, her Dewan kept out of the way of examination, and no sufficient grounds had been assigned for reversing the decrees of the High Court. RAMESWAR KOER v. BHARAT PERSHAD SAHI . . . . . 4 C. W. N. 18

41. Evidence—Plea of payment. In a suit by a landlord against his tenant for arrears of rent due for a portion of the year 1283 (1876), the defendant pleaded payment and called as his witness the plaintiff's agent, who admitted the receipt of certain payments from the defendant's under-tenant during the time for which the arrears were demanded, but swore that they were payments made in respect of arrears due on account of previous years. The lower Appellate Court, reversing the decree of the Court of first instance, gave the defendant credit for the payments so admitted. Held, that the lower Appellate Court was wrong; that the defendant, having pleaded payment, was bound to prove that the admitted payments were in respect of that portion of the year 1283 for which the arrears were claimed. S. 12 of the Rent Law applies to receipts given directly by the landlord to the tenant, and not to receipts given to third persons. SYEFUN v. RUDDER SOHAY

42. Proof of determination of tenancy—Beng. Act VIII of 1869, s. 20. The defendant held under a lease from the plaintiff which expired in 1867, when he gave up possession without any notice. In a suit subsequently brought against him for arrears of rent of 1867, 1868, and 1869 :—Held, that the onus was on the plaintiff to prove that the defendant held on after the term of the lease had expired. No written notice or relinquishment was necessary. S. 20, Bengal Act VIII of 1869, did not apply. TILAK PATAK v. MAHABIR PANDAY . . . . . 7 B. L. R. Ap. 11: 15 W. R. 454

43. Suit for arrears of rent—Proof of rate of rent. In a suit to recover arrears of rent from the defendants who, as ticcadars of the plaintiff's share in a certain mouzah, had been in possession from 1262 to 1281, without having paid any rent, the plaintiff, who claimed a bhowli rent at the rate of 9 annas of the crop, proved that in the mouzah in question the raiyats paid rent at that rate. Held, that, under the particular circumstances, the onus was on the defendants who alleged that the proper rate was 8 annas to prove their allegation. LOCHUN CHOWDHRY v. ANUP SINGH

44. Alleged possessions of portions only of land. In a suit to recover arrears of rent under a kabuliati the defendant who had paid rent for upwards of four or five years pleaded that he had obtained possession of portions only of the lands demised. Held (reversing the decision of FIELD, J.), that the onus was upon the defendant. BANY MADHOB MOOKERJEE v. SRIDHUR DEB GHUTTUCK . . . . . 10 C. L. R. 555

45. Suit for ejectment and for arrears of rent—Disputed rate of rent. In a suit for arrears of rent, and for ejectment in consequence of non-payment, where defendant challenged the rate claimed as well as plaintiff's right to sue alone :—Held, that the onus lay on plaintiff to prove his claim to the rate of rent sued for and to show that he was sole proprietor. *ASHRUF v. 46. Suit for ejectment—Ground for retaining possession, proof of. In a suit for ejectment by landlord against tenant after proof of due service of notice, the onus is on the tenant to show any ground for retaining possession. NUBO COOMAR GHOSE v. OZIR SHIKDAR . 23 W. R. 238

47. Nature of tenure—Evidence of. In a suit in ejectment valued under R100, the defendants, who were sued as yearly tenants, replied that their tenure was a mirasi gujasta tenure, and in proof of their allegation adduced evidence which was not displaced by the plaintiffs. The lower Courts considered that defendant's allegation was well founded. Held, that, there being evidence of the defendant's allegation, the plaintiffs, having failed to make out a prima facie case, were not entitled to a decree for ejectment. BYJI NATH SAHOO v. RAMDOUR ROY

48. Suit by landlord to eject tenant on expiration of tenancy. Where a landlord sues to eject a raiyat on the ground of his tenancy having expired, the tenant is not called upon to state the character of his tenancy until the plaintiff has given prima facie proof that it is of a terminable character, and that it has terminated. A sued to eject B on the ground that a temporary settlement effected with him had expired. B set up a gujasta title to the land. The lower Courts disbelieved plaintiff, but called on B to support the title he had set up, and he failing to do so, gave A a decree. Held, that A's suit should have been dismissed when it was found that the evidence he put forward was unworthy of credit. *BULLEE AHEER v. 49. Suit to eject tenant holding over after expiry of lease. In a suit to eject a tenant holding over after the expiry of a pottah which was merely for a number of years, the onus is on the landlord to show that the tenure was such that the express limit of years may be fairly applied to the possession and construed to give the right of re-entry. *ROY ODYTE NARAIN SINGH v. 51. ————— Ejectment—Right of occupancy. In a suit by a zamindar against a raiyat for recovery of possession of land, of which the plaintiff alleged he had granted the defendant a lease and taken a kabuliati, and that the lease had expired, the defence was that the defendant did not hold under any lease from the plaintiff, that the kabuliati was not genuine, and that the defendant by his holding had acquired a right of occupancy. Held, that the onus was on the plaintiff to prove the kabuliati, and not on the defendant to prove that he had acquired a right of occupancy. Therefore, where the plaintiff failed to prove the kabuliati, the suit was held to be rightly dismissed, though the defendant failed to show any right of occupancy. WALLAH ALLEE v. GOLAM GOUS

52. ————— Refusal to quit after notice. In a suit by a zamindar to obtain khas possession of land within his estate, if a defendant is a middleman, the right of plaintiff follows as a matter of course, unless defendant can make out his claim to exclude the zamindar; but if defendant is a raiyat, plaintiff must show some cause of action beyond the bare circumstance of defendant's refusal to quit after notice under X of 1859. He must show that the raiyat is of a class liable to eviction. LALLA JOYNATH SAHEE DEO v. LUTCHEN CHRISTIAN . . . . . 16 W. R. 158

It was contended that the onus of proving the tenure to the dar-mokurari, which had been thrown on the defendant, had been wrongly so thrown on him, as the suit was substantially one to set aside a decree. Held, that the onus of proving the validity and propriety of the settlement proceedings upon which he relied had been properly thrown on the defendant. *NADIAR CHAND SINGH v. 12. ———— Suit to recover possession of land—Limitation. A suit to recover possession of an unenclosed piece of ground must be brought within twelve years from the time the cause of action accrued, and in deciding this the issue is, not that the plaintiff must show that he

13. ———— Limitation—Settlement. In a suit for possession, where defendant denies plaintiff's title and sets up a defence involving the plea of limitation, the question of limitation does not depend upon whether defendant was in possession, but upon whether plaintiff was in possession. Where defendant admitted that the permanent settlement was ordered to be made with the party in possession, and that it was made within twelve years prior to the suit with the party from whom plaintiff claimed:—Held, that, until the contrary was shown, that party was rightly presumed to be in possession, and plaintiff's claim was not barred by limitation. 14. ———— Suit for possession—Proof of title. In a suit to obtain possession, where defendant pleads limitation, plaintiff is bound not only to prove his title, but also to show affirmatively that his cause of action accrued within twelve years before the commencement of the suit; and he must succeed upon the strength of his own title, not upon the weakness of his opponent's. 15. ———— Suit for possession—Limitation. In a suit for possession of land the defendants claimed to hold under a valid miras tenure so as to be entitled to the ground rent from the raiyats, and to pay the plaintiff who was the superior landlord merely the miras rent. Held, that, the plaintiff being admitted to be landlord, the onus was upon the defendants to prove either that they had a valid miras tenure, or that they had held adversely to the plaintiffs as mirasdars for more than twelve years, and that the plaintiffs had notice of such adverse holding. *Prahlad Sen v. 16. ———— Dispossession—Presumption—Onus probandi—Limitation—Joint owners, Adverse possession between. Under the former Limitation Act the cause of action, under the present law the event from which the limitation is declared to run, must have occurred within the prescribed period, and it lies on the plaintiff to show this. Accordingly, where the suit is for dispossession and the cause of action is dispossession, the plaintiff is bound to prove possession and dispossession within twelve years. Possession is not necessarily the same thing as actual user. When land has been shown to have been in a condition unfitting it for actual enjoyment in the usual modes, at such a time and under such circumstances that that estate naturally would, and probably did, continue till within twelve years before suit, it may properly be presumed that it did so continue, and that the previous possession continued also until the contrary is proved. Such a presumption is in no sense a conclusive one. Its bearing upon each particular case must depend upon the circumstances of that case. Many acts which would be clearly adverse, and might amount to dispossession as between a stranger and the true owner of land, would, between joint owners, naturally bear a different construction. MAHOMED ALI KHAN v. ABDUL GUNNY

17. ———— Conflicting evidence of possession—Presumption of possession from title—Possession and actual user—Character of land in dispute—Mode of enjoyment. It is only when the evidence of possession is strong on both sides and apparently equally balanced that the presumption that possession goes with title should prevail. The principle does not apply where the evidence of possession is equally unworthy of reliance on both sides. Dhram Sing v. Hurpershad Sing, I. L. R. 12 Calc. 38, explained. Possession, however, is not necessarily the same as actual user. When therefore the plaintiff has to prove possession of land in dispute within the statutory period of limitation, if there is anything special in the character of the land, for example, when it is permanently or temporarily incapable of actual enjoyment in any one of the customary modes, a presumption in favour of continuance of possession, though in no sense a conclusive one, may arise. *Mahomed Ali Khan v. 18. ———— Suit for possession—Previous dispossession—Limitation—Evidence. In every suit for the recovery of land, on the allegation of previous dispossession by the defendant, the plaintiff must start his case by showing that, at some time within twelve years previous to the institution of the suit, he has been in possession of the land sued for. *Perhlad Sein v. That being so, the burden of proof was on the claimants to prove their possession at some time within the twelve years (prescribed by Art. 152 of Sch. II of Act XV of 1877) next preceding the suit. That the claimants certainly showed an anterior title was not enough, without proof of their possession within twelve years, to shift the burden of proof on to the defence to show that the defendants were entitled to retain possession. *MOHIMA CHUNDER MOZUMDAR v. The plaintiff sued to recover possession of certain land, together with mesne profit until recovery of possession, alleging that he had obtained possession under his sale and that his possession was obstructed by the defendants. Held, that the suit fell under Art. 142, and not 144, of the Limitation Act, and that it was for the plaintiff to show that he, or those under whom he claimed, had been in possession within twelve years before suit. *Rao Karan Singh v. back for seven years before the suit. The documentary evidence showing that he had been in possession for more than five years immediately preceding those seven years was exactly similar to the evidence which accompanied his possession during that period. The evidence consisted of a series of documents such as were usually given to and received by the possessor of lands, and they extended throughout the period in dispute, going back far behind the twelve years which would bar. It was not necessary to consider whether the burthen of proof was shifted merely by the seven years' admitted possession, as the additional evidence raised the inference that the same possession had continued for more than twelve years. Held, that the burthen of rebutting this inference had not been discharged by evidence given by the plaintiff, while the evidence for the defendant had amply sustained the burthen originally laid upon him to show his twelve years' possession. *INNASIMUTTU UDAYAN v. appropriated for any public purpose, it cannot, by a suit brought for a declaration of title or for ejectment, the date at which the cause of action arose not being stated in the plaint, compel a defendant to prove possession for sixty years. As a general rule, a plaintiff must not only show he has a title, but that he has a subsisting title, which he has not lost by the prescriptive section of the Limitation Act. The probable explanation of the ruling in Radha Gobind Roy's Case, 7 C. L. R. 364, is that, when a plaintiff proves title and possession, it is to be presumed that his possession continues till the defendant proves that the possession was interrupted, but that, where the plaintiff can prove title only, and not possession, he must prove that the adverse possession of the defendant, or the acts of which he complains as impugning his title, occurred within the period prescribed by the Limitation Act. In a suit for the possession of lands formerly uncultivable, but subsequently brought under cultivation, the District Judge had allowed the plea of limitation to prevail against the plaintiff upon a finding—based, not upon evidence of actual possession by the defendants, but upon an inference from part of the evidence—that the defendants had been in constructive possession for over twelve years prior to the suit. Held, that, so far as the judgment and decree of the District Judge related to certain plots described as patit or uncultivable lands, they must be set aside, and the case remanded to the District Judge to determine (a) how far the presumption in favour of the plaintiff as to the continuance of the uncultivable state of the lands till within twelve years of suit applied; and (b) how far that presumption had been rebutted by evidence of actual possession on the part of the defendants. About the year 1830, a large tract of land was diluviated by the River Chutol within the mouzahs belonging respectively to the plaintiff and defendant, and after re-formation in 1837 a proceeding was taken by the plaintiff before the Magistrate under which he was ordered to be put in possession of a considerable tract of such newly formed land, the Magistrate laying down the boundaries. bed in the Magistrate's order from and since the date of that order. Held, that that decree must be taken to have established that the plaintiff was in possession of the land described in the Magistrate's order, and had continued in such possession; the question in the present suit being whether the lands now claimed are identical with those so described. Held, also, that the onus of proving that issue lay upon the plaintiff, because the foundation of his suit was that, having been in possession, he was dispossessed as a consequence of certain measurements made by Government officers. Held, further, that plaintiff had failed to sustain the burden of proof. He relied principally on the boundaries given by the Magistrate and certain maps prepared then and later as compared with the Government map of 1853; but their Lordships were unable to place firm reliance upon any inference drawn from these maps. Their Lordships were also of opinion that in questions of this kind, where the natural boundaries and landmarks have disappeared, evidence of possession was very important and satisfactory, and that there was no reason to distrust the witnesses of the respondent proving such possession. *GRIJA KANT LAHORY CHOWDHRY v. 41. ——— Right to alluvial land—Change in course of river—Boundaries—Disputed settlement. At the permanent settlement the River Gunduck divided mouzah Sohagpore (zillah Tirhoot) from the village of Dumri (zillah Sarun). In 1837 the river got into its southern channel, and a quantity of chur land to the north was resumed by Government and settled with the zamindars of Sohagpore. In 1846 it was again settled with the same zamindars, who remained in possession until 1848, when the river having returned to its northern channel the deara land was claimed by proprietors on the southern or Sarun side of the river: the consequence was an Act IV of 1840 suit which was decided in favour of the zamindars of Sohagpore. In 1856, on the expiry of the last temporary settlement, the question arose with whom Government should engage for the revenue, and it was finally decided by the Board of Revenue that a settlement should be made with the zamindars of Dumri, who accordingly obtained possession. The Board's decision proceeded on two principles,—viz., that a usage existed that the main channel of the Gunduck should be the boundary of the zamindaries, and that therefore the interest of the zamindars of Sohagpore had been of a limited, temporary, and conditional character. These zamindars then brought a suit to impeach this settlement and to recover possession. After decision, appeal and remand, it was finally decided by the High Court that the land in dispute was identical with that formerly settled with the maliks of Sohagpore, who (it was assumed) had a permanent proprietary interest therein. Held, that the proper issues to be tried were : first, whether the land had been settled in 1837 with the maliks of Sohagpore as proprietors of alluviums which had gradually accreted to their estate, or upon what other grounds such settlement was made, the onus of proving gradual accretion being on the plaintiffs; and, secondly, whether there was at the permanent settlement, and has been since, a clear and definite usage such as supposed by the Board of Revenue, the burden of proving the affirmative of this being on the defendant. *RAJENDUR PERTAB SAHEE v. 43. ———— Re-formation on old site of lands after diluvion—Limitation. Where, in a suit for possession of lands which have re-formed upon the old site after diluviation, the defendant relies upon a statutory title of twelve years' possession, the plaintiff, in order to succeed, must, according to the rule laid down in the case of Nitrasur Singh v. Nund Loll Singh, 8 Moo. I. A. 199, prove satisfactorily that the defendant has not been in possession for the period of twelve years next preceding the commencement of his suit. And where the evidence is not sufficient to support an affirmative finding that the whole of the lands claimed have re-formed within twelve years preceding the institution of the suit, it is incumbent on the plaintiff to show specially the portion, if any, which has not so re-formed. Per JACKSON, J.—I am unable myself to see on what principle or by what means the Court could of itself undertake to divide the portion of the land which may have re-formed within twelve years from the larger part which evidently re-formed more than twelve years ago, and had been in the adverse possession of the defendants. RUNJIT SINGH v. KRISHNO KISHORE DUTT I. L. R. 9 Calc. 802 : 12 C. L. R. 337

46. ———— Alluvion and diluvion—Title—Limitation—Acts of ownership. In a suit for declaration of title to, and recovery of possession of, alluvial lands which had been diluviated more than twelve years before the institution of the suit, the plaintiffs proved their title and possession up to the time of diluviation, and alleged that the lands had re-formed within twelve years, without alleging or proving possession during that period. The defendants, on the other hand, alleged that the re-formation had taken place more than twelve years before suit, and that they had acquired a title to the lands by adverse possession for that period. Held, that in such a case the submergence of the lands after diluvion ought to be presumed until the contrary was shown, and that the onus of proving reformation before twelve years and adverse possession was shifted to the defendants. Per WILSON, J.—As a general rule, where a plaintiff claims land from which he alleges he has been dispossessed, the burden is upon him to show possession and dispossession within twelve years. Proof of possession within twelve years does not necessarily mean proof of acts of ownership within that time. The nature of the proof of possession must depend on the nature of the case. There are many cases in which the party on whom the burden of proof in the first instance lies may shift the burden to the other side by proving facts giving rise to a presumption in his favour. In the case of lands gradually diluviated and gradually re-formed, if the diluviation has been more than twelve years before suit, the claimant, unless he can show possession since the re-formation, must at least show that he was in possession down to the date of the diluviation. Where the true owner is in possession at the time of diluviation, his possession is presumed to continue as long as the land continues submerged: probably also afterwards, until he is dispossessed. Per FIELD, J.—Although, according to the general rule, it lies upon the plaintiff, who is met with a plea of limitation, to show his own possession within twelve years before the institution of the suit when the property in dispute is capable of actual or visible possession, yet, in the case of property which is not susceptible of actual and visible possession, an exception from the nature of the thing must be made to the general rule. In such cases, when the title and possession have been proved to be in a certain person up to a certain point of time,—when there has been no transfer of the title to any third person, and there is no evidence that possession was exercised by a person other than the person having the title,—so long as actual visible possession was possible, the possession of the person having the title will be presumed to continue until the property has again become susceptible of actual visible possession. Proof of possession is presumptive proof of ownership, because men generally own the property which they possess. And if the ownership of property is proved and there is nothing to show that the possession of such property is with any person other than the owner, it may fairly be presumed to be with the owner. Such a presumption then takes the place of evidence to show the plaintiff's possession, within twelve years before suit, of a property in which, from the nature of the thing, evidence of actual possession is impossible. *MANO MOHUN GHOSE v. Subordinate tenure—Suit for recovery of possession of land—Re-formation on the site of plaintiff's villages. In a suit, brought by the plaintiffs on the 10th December, 1888, for recovery of possession of three plots of land, on the allegation that the lands in dispute were re-formations on the site of the villages of K and M, which were let out in patni and darpatni to third parties in 1868; and that the rights of the patnidar and the dar-patnidar were re-acquired by them in the years 1878, 1880, 1883, and 1892, the defence was that the lands were not re-formation, but accretion to the defendant's villages of C. Held, that, as the plaintiff's title to, and possession of the villages of, H and M, down to the time of their diluviation, was not denied, and as it was found that the disputed plots of land were part of the said villages, it was not incumbent on the plaintiffs to prove possession of the lands in dispute previous to the diluviation, but the onus lay on the defendants to prove adverse possession for more than twelve years prior to the institution of the suit, and the suit was not barred by limitation. *Woomesh Chunder Goopto v. 48. ————— Accretion—Right of riparian proprietors—Title to alluvial land contested between villages on opposite banks—Prescription. The plaintiffs were the proprietors of a village on the southern bank, who disputed with those of a village on the northern bank, the ownership of alluvial land formed by the Ganges. The current, after having encroached upon the southern bank, went away from that side of the river towards the northern, leaving the tract of alluvial land now in dispute. This appeared on its previous site to the south of the main stream. It was then carried away by diluvion, and again appeared after that. This land was claimed by the plaintiffs, not as part of their old land, but on the strength of their having held possession, adversely and without interruption, for more than twelve years before their dispossession by the defendants, by whom they alleged themselves to have been ousted within less than twelve years before they brought this suit. The evidence did not support their claim, the burden of proof being on them. It was shown that after the second recession of the river towards the north and after the re-appearance of the alluvial land on the south of the current, the land had been taken by the Government into their possession and that the latter had made over the greater part of it to the defendants who had since held this part. There had not been shown to have been any actual possession held of the remainder by the plaintiffs, who had thus failed as to the whole to prove the continued possession necessary to their acquiring title. *UDIT NARAIN SINGH v. 49. ————— Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Sch. II, Arts. 142, 144—Boundaries, Dispute as to—Ownership of land reclaimed from a bhil contested between proprietors of contiguous estates—Prior possession of land by one of two claimants—Presumption as to continuance of possession of land by original owner, limitation being pleaded by party in possession. In suits relating to disputed boundaries where the decision of the lower Court as to the ownership involves questions of the correctness of surveys, maps, recorded description, and other such evidence, the appellant should do more than show points requiring explanation. He should be prepared to show in what respect the decision has been wrong in regard to the evidence, and what other course would be right. The question was as to the ownership of land reclaimed from a bhil within the confines of one or other of two adjoining revenue mehals, the one belonging to the plaintiff, the other to the defendants, and involved the identification of the land in suit with some that had been covered with water, but of which the plaintiff's possession, with title, had been affirmed in proceedings of the revenue survey in 1857. In consequence of the nature and condition of the land, there was no evidence of any act of possession done by either party during the first two years of the twelve immediately preceding the date of the institution of the suit, and during the last ten years the defendants had been in possession. The latter, having tried and failed to establish adverse possession in themselves contended that, even if the plaintiff's possession had been shown to have existed in 1857, he could not succeed without his showing that his possession remained till later than the 9th April, 1869, the suit having been filed on 9th April, 1881, or unless he proved some act of dispossession by the defendants within that period. Held, that the presumption was in favour of the plaintiff's possession, which had been with apparent title, having in fact continued over the two years in question, as to which continuance there was no evidence to the contrary. If the burden was on the plaintiff to show possession down to within twelve years of suit, it had been discharged. RAJKUMAR ROY v. GORIND CHUNDER ROY . . . . . I. L. R. 19 Calc. 660

54. ———— Limitation—Suit on bond—Instalment-bond—Indorsement of payment of instalments. Where a defendant sets up the defence of limitation, he must plead it and show that the claim is barred. If, when the plaintiff has proved his case, the facts show that the cause of action accrued at a date earlier than the period of limitation and the plea of limitation has been set up by the defendant, the latter will be entitled to take advantage of the plaintiff's evidence that the claim is barred, and to have judgment given in this favour. The obligee of a bond, by which the obligor covenanted to pay the sum of R3,800 by annual instalments of R200 and in which it was also agreed that payments of the instalments should be indorsed on the bond, brought a suit against the obligor alleging default in payment, and claiming to recover the amount of the bond. He gave credit for payment of the instalments for seven years and alleged that his cause of action arose upon default in payment of the eighth instalment. The bond showed on its face indorsements of the payments for which credit was given. The obligor alleged that no instalments were paid after the third year, that therefore the debt became due at an earlier date than that stated by the plaintiff, and that the claim was barred by limitation. Held, that, inasmuch as the defendant adduced no evidence to show that the later instalments were not paid, and inasmuch as the evidence produced by the plaintiff did not show that the debt accrued at a date earlier than the limitation period, the plea of limitation failed. *RADHA PRASAD SINGH v. 55. ———— Suit for possession by member of family admittedly not joint—Partition. The plaintiff sued for possession of certain property, alleging that it had belonged to a joint family, of which he had been a member, and had been allotted to him on partition. The partition was not proved, and the suit was dismissed on the ground of limitation. On second appeal it was contended that, if the partition was held not to be proved, the family must be held to be joint; and as the possession of one member could not be adverse to another, the decree dismissing the suit on the ground of limitation was erroneous. Held, that, as the family was admittedly not joint, the plaintiff was bound to remove the bar of limitation by showing some sort of possession by himself within twelve years before his suit could be entertained, and, as he had not done so, his suit was properly dismissed. *TULSHI PERSHAD v. 56. ———— Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Sch. II, Arts. 127 and 144—Suit for possession of land alleging a previous partition. The defendant had purchased the land in question at a sale in execution of a decree obtained by him against cousins of the plaintiff. The plaintiff claimed to recover the land, alleging that it was his share of ancestral property which had been allotted to him on partition four or five years before suit, and of which he had actually been in separate possession. The lower Court upon these allegations rejected the plaintiff's claim, holding that the suit was not one for partition and did not fall within Art. 127 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), but that Art. 144 applied, and that the plaintiff had failed to show that the defendant's adverse possession had begun within twelve years preceding the suit. 57. ———— Suit for redemption of usufructuary mortgage—Plaint, form of—Proof of title—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 118. There is a clear distinction as to the onus of proof between cases where a plaintiff sues for possession of land by redemption of mortgage and cases where the defence to a suit for possession of land is twelve years' adverse possession by the defendant. In each case the plaintiff must plead his title; and if that title is in issue, he must make it out by at least prima facie evidence before the defendant can be put to proof of his defence. Where the defence is twelve years' adverse possession, the defendant must plead and make out the title he alleges, and thus show that the title of the plaintiff, which otherwise had been proved or admitted was lost. In a suit for possession of land by redemption of mortgage, the very nature of which presupposes that the possession of the defendant or his predecessor was lawful, the plaintiff must in his plaint show the title upon which he relies and therefore a title subsisting at the date of suit. Unless he gives prima facie evidence to show that his suit is within time, he fails to prove his title or subsisting right to the property. Philipps v. Philipps, L. R. 4 Q. B. D. 127; *Dawkins v. 59. ———— Limitation—Act XV of 1877, Sch. II, Art. 127—Proof of exclusion from joint family property—Mere non-participation in or refusal to live on joint property, insufficient—Hindu law—Suit by one of three widows against her two co-widows, for partition of widow's estate in their late husband's property—Proof of unchastity on part of plaintiff during widowhood, no ground for refusal—Tenant-in-common—Partition a matter of right. One Panguni died in or about the year 1881 leaving three widows surviving him. The three widows, as tenants-in-common, participated for some time in the profits of their late husband's property. After his decease, one of the widows began to lead an immoral life and refused to live with the other two. In 1895 she sued her co-widows for partition and for an allotment of her one-third share of the property. She claimed to have participated in the profits of the family property until 1890, but the defendants contended that she had ceased to participate therein for more than twelve years before the institution of the suit, and raised the plea of limitation. They also pleaded that plaintiff was not entitled to claim partition, by reason of her unchastity. It was proved that plaintiff had been living with her paramour subsequent to her husband's decease, and had supported herself without recourse to the family property, and had refused to live with defendants. Held, that the burden lay on the defendants of proving that plaintiff, who was admittedly a tenant-in-common with them till 1882, was excluded from enjoyment of the property. Mere proof of refusal on the part of the plaintiff to live with her co-widows, or of non-participation by her in the family property, did not establish ouster or exclusion by defendants, and there was no other evidence to show that she had abandoned her interest to their knowledge. Held, al o., that proof of plaintiff's unchastity after her husband's death did not disentitle her to claim partition of the property by metes and bounds. A widow, being a tenant-in-common, is entitled to partition as a matter of right, and the Court has no discretion in the matter. SELAM v. CHINNAMMAL (1901) . I. L. R. 24 Mad. 441

entered into possession. In 1888, however, Kalia and Vallabh had sold the land to one Nagar, who in 1895 sold it to the plaintiff. In 1897 the plaintiff brought this suit for possession. The first Court passed a decree in his favour, but on appeal the Judge reversed the decree, holding that the defendant and her father Dullabh had had adverse possession for more than twelve years, and that the suit was therefore barred. On second appeal: Held, by the High Court, that adverse possession had not been proved. The burden of proving adverse possession should have been placed on the defendant. Possession, to be adverse, must be shown to be continuous, public and adequate to the circumstances of the case. As between brothers, especially when no partition is proved, the adverse possession of one should be proved by more satisfactory evidence than was given in this case. *JAGJIVANDAS v. ## 31. MORTGAGE.

1. ——— Suit for redemption of mortgage—Alleged sale. In a suit for redemption of property which, the plaintiff alleges to be mortgaged, but which the defendant contends was sold absolutely, the onus is on the plaintiff to prove the mortgage; and the existence of a mortgage cannot be presumed from the failure of the defendant to establish the alleged sale. Balaji Narji v. Babu Deoli . . . . . 5 Bom. A. C. 159

2. ——— Evidence Act, I of 1872, s. 110. The plaintiff sued to redeem certain land, alleging that it had been mortgaged by his father to the defendant in 1854-55. The defendant denied the mortgage, and alleged that he purchased it under a deed of sale from the plaintiff's father in 1849, and had ever since been in his possession as owner. The deed of conveyance was not forthcoming nor was the alleged mortgage-deed. The Court of first instance rejected the plaintiff's claim on the ground that the mortgage was not proved. The lower Appellate Court reversed the decree of the Court of first instance. The defendant appealed. Held, that the defendant's possession was prima facie evidence of a complete title, and that the plaintiff, who alleged that the defendant was merely a mortgagee, was bound to prove his own right as mortgagor, clearly and indefeasibly. Mere statements that the property had been mortgaged, which failed to establish any particular mortgage, did not shift the burden of proof, or require the mortgagee to show what were the terms of such mortgage, or his right to retain possession under it. Ramchandra Apaaji v. Balaji Bhaurav

3. ——— Lost mortgage-deed. In a suit for redemption, the mortgage-deed dated 21st July, 1840, having been lost, the Judicial Commission held that the onus lay, not upon the mortgagor to prove that the term did not expire before 13th of February, 1856, but upon the mortgagee to prove that it did. Held, by the Privy Council, that the burden of proof was prima facie on the mortgagor, regard being had, as respects the quantum of evidence required, to the opportunities which each party might naturally be supposed to have of giving evidence. *Kishen Dutt Ram Pandey v. sued, on the 31st of December, 1861, to redeem a mortgage of lands in Sarun, dated the 30th of November, 1801. The mortgage-money was payable on the 28th September, 1806. If not paid, the property was to vest absolutely in the mortgagee without foreclosure. The defendant admitted that he had not foreclosed, but stated that Regulation XVII of 1806 was promulgated in Sarun on the 7th January, 1807, and consequently that the money became due before the Regulation was promulgated. Held, that the onus was on the plaintiff to prove that the Regulation was promulgated before 28th September, 1806. *SARIFUNNISSA v. 6. ———— Profits. In a suit for redemption, on the ground that the debt has been satisfied with interest, the onus is on the plaintiff. A mortgagee is not an assurer of the continuation of the same rate of profits as his mortgagor was able to raise. Hence an estimate of the rental preceding the mortgagor's possession is not sufficient proof of the profits in his time. SHAH MAKHAN-LAL v. SRIKRISHNA SINGH

The defendants, admitting the proprietary title of the ancestor of the plaintiffs to the villages, alleged as to 10 biswas of each village that they were sold to their ancestors in 1842 by him for R1,250 and as to the other 10 biswas of each village, that they were subsequently mortgaged to their ancestors by him for R14,000, borrowed by him from them for the purpose of defending a suit arising out of the previous sale, which sum had not been satisfied from the usufruct. Held (STUART, C.J., dissenting), that the burden of proving the mortgage of the 10 biswas of each village of which the defendants alleged the sale lay on the plaintiffs. *RATAN KUAR v. 9. ———— Joint mortgage—Redemption by one mortgagor—Suit for other mortgagor for his share. K and J jointly mortgaged 36 sihams or shares of an estate to C, giving him possession. C transferred his rights as mortgagee to T and M. In execution of a decree for money against K held by M, K's rights and interests in the mortgaged property were sold, and were purchased by P, whose heirs paid the entire mortgage-debt. R, an heir of J, sued the heirs of P to recover from them possession of J's sihams in the mortgaged property, on payment of a proportionate amount of the mortgage-money paid by P. The plaintiff alleged that the mortgage to C had been made forty years before suit. The defendants contended that a much longer period had expired since the date of the mortgage: that forty-one years had elapsed since C transferred his rights as mortgagee; that they had redeemed the property twenty-one years ago and had been since its redemption in proprietary and adverse possession of the sihams in suit: and that the suit was barred by limitation. Neither party was aware of the date of the mortgage, and neither adduced any proof on the point. Held, that, the defendants being admittedly in possession, though the existence of a mortgage as the origin of their possession was conceded by them, it lay upon the plaintiff to give prima facie proof of the subsistence of that mortgage at the date of suit: but that, assuming that notice was given to the defendants by the plaintiff to produce the mortgage-deed, and that they failed to do so, very slight evidence would have been sufficient to satisfy the obligation which lay on the plaintiff. *Kishen Dutt Ram Pandey v. It was found, however, that C had been in possession from 1869 to 1885, and that in 1876 the land had been sold in execution of a decree against C (to which A was not a party) and purchased by D, who re-sold to C in 1879. The lower Court held that C's possession must be taken to have been derived from B, till the contrary was proved. Held, that the burden of proving that his possession was not derived from B lay upon C. *NILAKANDAN v. For the mortgagee it was contended that the attachment could not prevail, it not having been proved affirmatively that the requirements of s. 239 relating to the intimation of the attachment had been complied with. Held, that this objection to the validity of the attachment could not be raised for the first time on this appeal, even if it was not rather for the mortgagee, seeking to deprive the attaching creditor of his possession, to prove the non-observance of the formalities in question. *RAMKRISHNA DASS SURROWJI v. the defendant to prove the alleged partition. GOOROO PERSHAD MOOKERJEE v. KALEE PERSHAD MOOKERJEE . . . . . 5 W. R. 121

2. ——— Private partition—Private arrangement—Subsequent partition by Collector. A and B were joint owners of a mouzah. B leased his share in patni to C. By arrangement between A and C, a partition of the lands was made, and each party collected the rents of the lands allotted to him. Forty years afterwards, a butwara of the mouzah was made by the Collector between A and B, whereby lands held by C under the previous arrangement were allotted to A. C was no party to the butwara proceedings. In a suit brought by A against C for possession of the lands so allotted, the plaintiff alleged that the previous division of the lands between A and C was a temporary one, made after the commencement of the butwara proceedings. The lower Appellate Court found that the plaintiff's allegations had not been proved, and dismissed the suit. Held (TOTTENHAM, J., dissenting), that the decree of the lower Court was correct as it lay on the plaintiff to show that the private partition had come to an end. OBHOY CHURN SIKKAR v. HURI NATH ROY I. L. R. 8 Cal. 72 : 10 C. L. R. 81

3. ——— Suit for possession on allegation of partition. In a suit to obtain possession of certain lands, on the ground that they had been assigned to plaintiffs by a partition made by the Collector :—Held, in the matter of certain of the plots which plaintiffs alleged to be included in particular daghs in the butwara chittahs, that as defendants denied that they were so included, it was on the plaintiffs to prove their allegation. Held, in respect to a dagh in which plaintiffs were admitted to be entitled to a certain quantity of land, that it was their business to prove that the particular lands which they claimed had been assigned to them by the butwara proceedings. BHUGGOBUTTY GOOPTA v. SARODA SOONDUREE DEBEA 11 W. R. 337

4. ——— Suit for possession after partition—Interference with possession after Collector's award. In a suit for possession with mesne profits, on the ground that the lands claimed were allotted to plaintiff's share by a butwara under Bengal Regulation XIX of 1814, where defendant, admitting the allegation, urged that plaintiff had given up possession as soon as the butwara was completed :—Held, that it was for plaintiff to prove that defendant had interfered with the possession awarded to him by the Collector. MOBARUK ALI v. IMDAD ALI . . . . . 16 W. R. 200

5. ——— Suit to have property excluded from partition—Nature of possession. In two suits in which the prayer was substantially to have certain property which had been included in a butwara before the Collector excluded from such butwara, it was held that, as plaintiff's possession was admitted and defendant had failed to prove his plea that such possession was in the quality of

34. POSSESSION AND PROOF OF TITLE.

1. ——— Suit for 'possession—Weakness of defendant's case—Title, proof of. In a suit for possession of land, where plaintiff's title and previous possession are both denied, it is not proper for a Court to start with the case put forward by the defendant, the onus of proof being primarily on plaintiff. WALKER v. ATNA RAM MUNDUR 14 W. R. 478

2. ——— Person out of possession—Evidence of title. Possession is evidence of title, and is primarily exclusive. It is for him who impugns this exclusive title to show that the possession arose in some way which has preserved his own right. In every case the person who has been out of possession for more than twelve years must make out some prima facie title, and some agreement or acknowledgment of that title, such that possession is deprived of its ordinary effect through being held on a joint right or a subordinate right. *RAMCHANDRA NARAYAN v. He proved that for five years and more W had been in possession of such property as ostensible owner. Held, that, this being so, it rested with A to prove his title. *MATHURA DAS v. 7. ————— Dispossession—Proof of title. In a suit to recover possession, on the allegation of a previous possession and forcible ouster, both being denied by defendants who set up a title of their own, it is for plaintiffs to prove the alleged ouster. If they do so to the satisfaction of the Court, the burden of proof will be on the defendants to show the title on which they ousted the plaintiffs. Should the defendants prove such a prima facie title, then it will be the duty of the Judge to call upon the plaintiffs to establish their title. GOUR PAROY v. The defendant set up a lease from the same inamdar, but it was held to have been granted without any authority. Both the leases required to be registered under Act XX of 1866, but were not registered. Held, that the plaintiff, although suing more than six months after the date of dispossession and without resorting to a possessory suit (Act XIV of 1859, s. 15; Act I of 1877, s. 9), was entitled to rely on the possession previous to his dispossession as against a person who had no title; the onus being on defendant to prove his title. KRISHNARAV YASHVANT v. that the plaintiff had been dispossessed by a benami-dar, in whose favour a conveyance had been executed by the plaintiff's father :—Held, that the presumption arising from the defendant's recent and unexplained possession being rebutted by the plaintiff's prior continuous and peaceful possession, the defendant must show affirmatively that his title was a valid one, and could not raise the defence that the plaintiff was prevented from showing it to be invalid. MAHESH CHANDRA BANERJEE v. 20. ——— Resistance to execution by third party—Suit for possession—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 331. The plaintiff had obtained a decree for possession of certain land against his tenant B. On proceeding to execute his decree, he was obstructed by the defendants. He therefore filed a claim against them for possession under s. 331 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), which was duly registered as a suit. The lower Court found as a fact that the plaintiff through his tenant B had been in possession of the land. The defendants pleaded that the land had belonged not to the plaintiff, but to one J, on whose death they were entitled to it. Held, that in a proceeding under s. 331 of the Civil Procedure Code, where possession is shown to have been with the plaintiff, the defendants are not, without showing title in themselves, at liberty to impeach the plaintiff's title, or to set up a jus tertii. The onus of proving a better title than the plaintiff's rests with them, and they may prove their title as a defence. BAPUJIRAO v. FATTESING SHAHAJI BHOSLE

The plaintiff was filed on the 27th January, 1877. Defendant answered that he purchased it from G under a deed of sale dated 5th January, 1865, and that he had been in possession since that day. The deed of sale was not admitted in evidence for want of registration, but it was found that defendant had been in possession as owner since 5th January, 1865. Held, that, as the defendant admitted that he had derived his title

25. ————— Suit to establish title—Bom. Reg. XVII of 1827, s. 7, cls. 1 and 2—Bom. Act I of 1865—Miras land. On the 28th August, 1857, the plaintiff passed a kabuliati to Government and took possession of certain miras land, abandoned by the mirasdar for four or five years previous to that date. The plaintiff continued in possession of his land, and paid the Government assessment from 1864 till 1872. In an action brought by the plaintiff to recover possession of the land, he alleged in the plaint that he had taken the defendants as partners in the cultivation of the land, and had been dispossessed by them. Both the lower Courts rejected the claim. The lower Appellate Court based its decision on the ground that, as the plaintiff failed to prove the fact of his alleged partnership with the defendants, he could not succeed, notwithstanding that Court found in the plaintiff's favour the other facts stated above.

The defendants alleged that the ten cottahs were not included in the ganti jumma, under which plaintiffs claimed. Held, that the onus was on the plaintiffs to prove that the ten cottahs were included in the ganti jumma under which they claimed. It was not on the defendants to show the extent of that tenure while it was in their possession and when it was transferred to the plaintiffs, although the fact was one peculiarly within their knowledge. *GIRDHAR HARI v. The plaintiff filed a kabuliati which had been executed by B, the terms of which supported the plaintiff's allegation as to the nature of the grant. The defendant alleged that the grant was auladad, but failed to produce the sanad or account for its non-production. Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree. *JUGGERNATH SAHEE v. 41. ————— Title by possession—Attachment and sale under a decree of property claimed by a third person—Suit by a third person to establish his title—Civil Procedure Code (Act VIII of 1859), ss. 230-246. S obtained a money-decree against the sons and heirs of A, and under that decree attached a shop as part of A's estate. N (father of A) applied to have the attachment removed under s. 246 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act VIII of 1859), alleging that the shop was his. The application was rejected, and the shop was sold in execution and bought by P, the defendant. N then brought his suit against P (the purchaser) to establish his title. The Subordinate Judge dismissed the suit. On appeal, the District Judge reversed that decree, holding that the plaintiff had been in possession of the shop and had proved his title. The defendant appealed to the High Court. Held, that, the plaintiff having proved his possession at the date of the execution sale, it lay upon the defendant (P), who claimed the property, to prove a title in himself or in the judgment-debtor A, and that, he having failed to do this, the plaintiff was entitled to a decree declaratory of his right to the property as against the defendant. Where a dispossessed party proceeds, under s. 230 of Act VIII of 1859, to vindicate the possession of which he has been deprived, although he may give evidence of his title, he is not bound to do so, but may rest his right to recover on his possession and cast upon the decree-holder the burden of proving his title, i.e., his right to dispossess the applicant. Per WEST, J.—A person in possession of property which is sold in execution as that of another is not called upon, when suing to establish his title, to prove his proprietorship as by an action in rem against all the world. It is enough if he establishes a good title as against the judgment-debtor whose right has been sold; and as he is in possession, that possession in itself affords a ground for an assertion of full proprietorship for the purpose of the suit, except so far as the right vested in the judgment-debtor can be shown affirmatively to contradict or qualify it. Possession constitutes an interest requiring affirmative proof of a superior title on the part of any one who seeks to disturb it, and therefore, where a person in possession of property which has been sold in execution as being the property of another sues to establish his title to such property, the burden of proof lies, not upon him, but upon the person who claims as purchaser at the execution-sale. *PEMRAJ BHAVANIRAH v. The Court of first instance called upon the defendant to prove his title as a son by adoption notwithstanding that the plaintiff was out of possession, and could not have succeeded, in the event of the defendant's failure to prove it, without first proving his own title as collateral heir by descent, thus in effect, proposing to make the establishment of the plaintiff's title depend upon the failure or success of the defendant in proving the

45. ———— Presumption of ownership—Possession—Suit for ejectment—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 110. It is usually for the plaintiff who seeks ejectment to prove his title. But where he proves himself to have peaceably enjoyed possession for a considerable time, the person who has recently dispossessed him has to meet the presumption of law that the plaintiff's possession indicates his ownership. In a suit for possession of immoveable property and other reliefs, it was proved that the plaintiff and his predecessors in title had been in undisturbed possession for thirty or forty years previous to his dispossession by the defendant. The defendant alleged, but failed to prove, that the plaintiff had paid him rent as tenant-at-will of the premises. The lower Appellate Court, upon the finding that the plaintiff's possession was that of a licensee, modified the first Court's decree, which had allowed the claim in full. Held (by MAHMOOD J.), with reference to s. 110 of the Evidence Act, that although in the first instance the burden of proving his title was on the plaintiff, it was shifted by his proving long undisturbed possession, that the defendant's failure to prove the alleged payment of rent went far to prove that the plaintiff's possession was adverse; and that the Court below, in acting upon the theory that such possession was that of a licensee had wrongly set up for the defendant a defence, which he had not set up for himself. *LACHHO v. They alleged that they purchased the land in July, 1888, from the patel of the village, and had been in possession ever since, and that their vendor had previously been in possession. They now sued because their possession had been threatened by the orders of Government officials. It was admitted that the plaintiffs had been in actual possession since 1888. The District Judge held that the burden of proof of title to the land lay upon the plaintiffs. He was of opinion that they had failed to prove it, and he dismissed the suit. Held per JENKINS, C.J., and

RANADE, J. (WHITWORTH, J., dissenting), that the plaintiffs being in possession (not shown to have wrongfully originated), such possession was good against the whole world except a person who could show better title; that the burden of proving such title lay therefore upon the defendant; that he had failed to prove it; and that therefore the plaintiffs were entitled to the declaration sued for. Per WHITWORTH, J.—That the evidence did not show such possession in the plaintiffs as under s. 110 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872) shifted the burden of proof upon the defendant; that, prior to the alleged sale to the plaintiffs in 1888, the defendant had been in the position of an absentee owner of the land in question, represented partly by the village officers and partly also by the village community, and that he might be said to be in possession; that the sale to the plaintiffs in 1888 by the patel of the village, who should have protected the defendant's interests, was a wrongful act; that the plaintiffs were therefore not relieved from the burden of proving their title; and that they had not proved it. Per RANADE, J.—When a person in possession of land has been dispossessed, and sues to recover it, the fact of his previous possession will not entitle him to a decree unless he sues under s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877) within six months of the date of dispossession. If he sues after the six months have expired, he must prove a prima facie title. In such a case he is entitled to a decree, unless a superior title is proved on the other side. It is in reference to such cases that it has been held that possession is evidence of title, and that the plaintiff, who proves such possession and subsequent disturbance, shifts the burden of proof on the defendant when the prima facie title is made out. When no such prima facie title is made out by the plaintiff, who asks for a declaratory decree, he cannot obtain that decree on the mere ground that he was in possession and that the defendant had no title. Mere wrongful possession is insufficient to shift the burden of proof. HANMANTRAY v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA (1900) . I. L. R. 25 Bom. 287

4. ————— Purchase money—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 106. In a suit to enforce the right of pre-emption, in which the plaintiff impugns the correctness of the price stated in the instrument of sale, although the burden of proof prima facie is on him to show that the property has in fact been sold below the stated price, yet very slight evidence is ordinarily sufficient to establish his case; and when such case is established, it rests upon the defendants, the vendor and vendee, to prove by cogent evidence that the stated price is the correct one. The principle laid by the Privy Council in Kishen Dutt Ram Panday v. Narendar Bahadoor Singh, L. R. 3 I. A. 85, applied. Mahomed Noorul Hossein v. Hyder Buksh, W. 5. ————— Dispute as to price—Assessment of amount. Bhagwan Singh v. Mahabir Singh, I. L. R. 5 All. 184, followed as to the rule of onus probandi, where the plaintiff in a suit to enforce a right of pre-emption impugns the correctness of the price stated in the instrument of sale. In determining the amount of the price which a pre-emptor has to pay, the Court is not called upon to assess the amount which would be a fair and reasonable price for the property, but to ascertain what amount actually changed hands as consideration for the sale. TAWKKUL RAI v. LACHMAN RAI

6. ————— Purchase-money—Evidence of consideration. In suits for pre-emption where the amount of the consideration for the sale is in dispute, the rule as to the burden of proof is that, in the first instance, the plaintiff who alleges the price stated in the deed of sale to be fictitious must give some prima facie evidence leading to the presumption that the price so stated was not the true price. Having done that, it then lies upon the vendor and vendee to give such an explanation by evidence as will go to rebut the presumption raised by the plaintiff's evidence. In the majority of cases, the only prima facie evidence which the plaintiff pre-emptor could produce would be either evidence showing that the vendor or the vendee had made an admission that the price was fictitious, or else evidence showing that the market value of the property was so much less than the alleged price as would lead any reasonable man to come to the conclusion that the alleged price was not the real price. Where the price stated in the deed of sale was nearly five times the market value of the property sold, and the purchaser gave no explanation showing why he was willing to buy the property at a price apparently so extravagant:—Held, that there was sufficient evidence upon which to find that the price alleged in the contract was fictitious. *Bhagwan Singh v. ## 36. PRINCIPAL AND AGENT.

1. ————— Evidence as to liability of agent to account. In 1884 a deed of release exonerating an agent from liability to account was executed by his principal, stating that there had been a settlement between them. In 1885 the agent signed an ikrarnama addressed to the principal, stating that there had not been a settlement of accounts, and that he was willing to account from the day of his appointment to date. Subsequently, having resigned his employment, the agent brought a suit to have the latter document set aside, but that suit was dismissed. In a suit brought by the principal, the release of 1884, and its contents, were proved to the satisfaction of both the Courts below, which dismissed the suit on that ground, although the ikrarnama of 1885 appeared to them, in fact, to have been made. Upon the plaintiff's appeal, it was contended that the onus was on the defendant to explain his execution of the ikrarnama. Held, that, inasmuch as it had been found by two Courts concurrently that the release of 1884 was valid, and that it necessarily followed from that finding that the document of 1885, so far as it expressed the agent's willingness to account, was false, the onus was as much upon the principal to explain his reception of the ikrarnama of 1885 as upon the agent to explain its execution. The question as to the burden of proof had therefore been rendered immaterial by the facts proved. On the materials before them the Courts below had rightly decided in favour of the defendant. NILMONI SINGH DEO v. KIRTI CHUNDER CHOWDHRY

1. ——— Suit by recorded co-sharer for profits—Claim for profits not collected in consequence of defendant's negligence or misconduct—Jamabandi—N.-W. P. Rent Act (XII of 1887), ss. 93 (h), 209—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 106. In a suit under s. 93 (h) of the N.-W. P. Rent Act (XII of 1881), by a recorded co-sharer against a lambardar for his recorded share of the profits of a mehal, in which the plaintiff seeks to make the defendant liable under s. 209, not only for the profits which the latter has actually collected, but for those which through gross negligence or misconduct he has omitted to collect, the burden of proving such negligence or misconduct rests in the first instance on the plaintiff. No general rule can be laid down as to the quantum of evidence which the plaintiff in such a case must give in order to shift the burden of proof on to the defendant. The mere production by the plaintiff of the jamabandi or rent-roll is not sufficient to cast upon the defendant the necessity of proving that there was no negligence or misconduct in him. S. 106 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872) does not apply to such a case. So held, by the Full Bench, MAHMOOD, J., dissenting. Held, by MAHMOOD, J., (contra) that the production of the jamabandi by the plaintiff in a case where he claims his share of the profits according to the jamabandi and the lambardar-defendant pleads that the actual collections fell short of the jamabandi, established a prima facie presumption in favour of the plaintiff so as to throw upon the defendant, with reference to s. 106 of the Evidence Act, the necessity of proving circumstances which rendered it impossible for him to collect the profits according to the jamabandi. 4. ——— Auction-purchaser. Certain lands which had been let out in patni were, on default by the patnidar in payment of rent, sold by auction under Bengal Regulation VIII of 1819, and purchased by M, who granted them in patni to the plaintiff. In a suit for resumption on the allegation that the defendants were in possession of a portion of the lands as invalid lakhiraj by withholding payment of the mal rent thereof from after 1793, the defence was that the lands in dispute were valid rent-free lands existing as such from before 1790. Held, that, on the grounds of the decision of the Privy Council in Harihar Mukopadhyaya v. Madhab Chandra Babu, 8 B. L. R. 566, the principle that the onus is on the plaintiff to show that the lands are mal applies to cases where the plaintiff, as

After some years the plaintiff brought the present suit against B, who derived her title through A, to have the rent assessed. B pleaded, by way of bar to the jurisdiction, that the lakhiraj grant, under which A claimed, was made previously to 1790. If the lakhirajdar claims under a grant subsequent to that date, the zamindar is not entitled to a decree until he has shown in the first instance that the land claimed is part of his zamindari and at one time was mal land. And in the latter case, the lakhirajdar is not put to proof of his title until the zamindar has established the fact of the land having once, at some time subsequent to 1st December 1790, been rent-paying land. *MAHOMED AKHIR v. 7. ————— Declaration of lakhiraj title—Assessment of rent. In a suit instituted in 1877, A prayed for a declaration that he had a lakhiraj title to certain lands, the defendant stated that the lands, for a declaration of a title to which A now sued, formed part of certain lands which had been the subject of resumption proceedings, which were terminated in 1863 by a decree declaring that the lands which were the subject of that suit, including the lands now claimed by A, were not lakhiraj. It being found as a fact that A had neither been a party to, nor been represented in, the resumption proceedings; that he had been in quiet and undisturbed possession of the lands which he now claimed for more than twelve years before the institution of his suit; and that proceedings had been taken by the defendant calculated to disturb such possession:—Held, that, although the onus of proof lay on the plaintiff, it was not necessary for him to prove that the lands claimed by him to be held as lakhiraj had been held rent-free from before the date of the permanent settlement; but it was sufficient for him to prove that the defendant was, at the time of the institution of the suit, debarred by lapse of time from instituting a suit for the resumption or assessment of rent upon

The rule which, in cases where the defendant pleads lakhiraj, lays on the plaintiff the onus of proving that the land is mal, is not inflexible, but may be altered according to circumstances, as in this case, where the defendant admitted plaintiff's title as landlord and never set up any plea of lakhiraj until years after the suit was brought, when a second Ameen was deputed to the spot to make a local enquiry. *GOONOMONEE DOSSEE v. Vol. 162, ruling that before a plaintiff can resume lakhiraj lands he must first prove that he has collected mal rents, and defendant need not first prove his lakhiraj title—was held not to be applicable to the present case, in which it was proved the plaintiff collected mal rents from the time the land was capable of bearing any. RAMSOONDUR CHUCKERBUTTY v. RAMESSUR ACHARJEE . . . . . 8 W. R. 454

13. ———— Beng. Regs. XIX of 1793 and XIV of 1825—Evidence of exemption from resumption. Semle: The exclusion of lands as lakhiraj from the decennial and permanent settlements is of no weight, per se, as evidence of exemption from resumption under Regulation XIX of 1793. The general presumption is in favour of the liability to assessment of land, and by Bengal Regulations XIX of 1793 and XIV of 1825 the onus probandi lies on a claimant to lakhiraj to establish his title to exemption,—not by inference, but by positive proof of a grant to hold as lakhiraj, or by a proprietary right, prior to the grant of the Dewanny (12th August 1765); and that the possession was bona fide taken under it, or an enjoyment of lands as such, and descendible to heirs at or since that time. *DHEERAJ RAJA MAHATAB CHUND BAHADOOR v. 18. ———— Lakhiraj land—Beng. Reg. XLI of 1795, s. 10. Where certain land apparently lakhiraj was represented in village papers as part of mal land, and included within the boundary of the revenue-paying mehal:—Held, on the zamindar's suit for assessment of the land, that the onus of showing that the case is within s. 10, Regulation XLI of 1795, lay on the zamindar. The inclusion of the land in the boundary is not conclusive evidence, nor is it binding when the boundary has not been made judicially. The landlord proving it to be so, the plaintiff claiming rent-free possession would be required to prove his rent-free possession (peaceably and not tainted with fraud) for sixty years before he can get a decree. MAHA-BEER PERSHAD v. OOMRAO SINGH . . . . . 1 Agra 167

19. ———— Rent-free land—Benares. In a suit for rent of land in the province of Benares which was rent-free and recorded as such at the revision of settlement in 1840-41 and 1842, the zamindar must show that, if it was lakhiraj in 1197 Fasli, there has been a legal resumption and assessment by judicial award; or if mal in 1197 Fusli, he must prove legal resumption and actual levy of rents. The burden of proving this by direct and specific evidence lies on the zamindar. MOTEE LALL v. JANKI ROY . . . . . 3 Agra 364

20. ———— Suit to have certain lands declared mal. Where it is admitted that the defendants hold certain lands within the plaintiff's zamindari, some at least of which are rent-paying, the defendants, if desirous of proving that any of these lands are rent-free, are bound to give some prima facie evidence of the fact, before they can call upon the plaintiff, the zamindar, to prove that the whole or any part of the lands are mal. *AKBUR ALI v. 22. ——— Suit for land alleged to be lakhiraj—Proof of receipt of rent. In a suit to recover possession of land within plaintiff's estate, in which defendant sets up a rent-free title, all that plaintiff is required to show is that either he or his predecessor had received rent for the land at some time subsequent to the perpetual settlement, in which case the onus of proving title falls on the defendant. RAM NARAIN SINGH DEO v. BISTOO THAKOOR . . . . . 15 W. R. 299

23. ——— Suit for possession of resumed lands—Application for and refusal of settlement. Where, in a suit for possession of resumed lands, the plaintiff contends that the laws under which the lands in dispute were resumed (Bengal Regulations II of 1819 and III of 1828) contemplate assessment and not ejectment, the plaintiff must prove that he had formerly applied for and been refused a settlement of the lands. ABDOOL GUNNY v. COMMISSIONER OF THE SUNDERBUNS . . . . . 2 W. R. 239

24. ——— Suit for land as lakhiraj—Dispute as to land being mal or lakhiraj. In a suit in which plaintiff claimed four plots of land as belonging to his patni, and defendant alleged that they formed part of the resumed land of a jote for which he had obtained a decree in a resumption suit, and of which he had ever since been in possession, the parties went to trial on the issue whether the land was mal as beyond the limits of the decree, or lakhiraj as included in the chittahs, according to which possession was given to the defendant in execution. On a consideration of what the latter had received under the decree, the first Court held that he was not entitled to retain the disputed land. The Appellate Court did not look beyond the plaintiff's chittahs. Held, that the circumstances justified the first Court in deviating somewhat from the usual rule of law as regards the onus probandi, and that the course taken by it was most consonant with justice. *DOSSEE v. 29. ——— Validity of lakhiraj tenure. In a suit to recover the possession land from which the plaintiff claiming to be a lakhirajdar has been forcibly evicted by the land-holder, the plaintiff is not entitled to a decree for possession unless he can show a prima facie case of lakhiraj tenure. Semble : If he show such prima facie case, the Court will give a decree for possession, and leave the zamindar to dispute the existence or validity of the alleged lakhiraj tenure in a resumption suit. *SREENATH LALL v. 30. ——— Long possession of purchaser. In a suit to recover possession of land which plaintiffs alleged to be lakhiraj, and of which they had been dispossessed by the defendant (zamindars):—Held, that, as plaintiff had purchased the lands as lakhiraj, and had been admittedly in possession of them as such for a very long time, it was for the zamindar, who pleaded a right to oust them summarily under s. 10, Bengal Regulation XIX of 1793, to prove that the lakhiraj title was invalid as having been created subsequent to 1790. *MUNSA-RAM DOSS KURMOKAR v. 31. ——— Proof of collection of rents. In a suit for possession of alleged lakhiraj land, if the alleged lakhirajdar proves possession as purchaser of the alleged lakhiraj land, the Court ought not to put upon him the burden of proving a title; but if the zamindar wishes that point to be tried in this or another suit, he must accept the onus of proving that the lakhiraj is held

6. ——— Act XI of 1859, s. 37—Incumbrance, annulment of—Burden of proof—Tenure held since permanent settlement. In a suit for ejectment by a purchaser at a revenue sale, the defence was that the defendants held the land as a subordinate talukh, which had been in existence and in their possession and that of their predecessors since the time of the permanent settlement. It was found as a fact that the tenure was in existence in the year 1798-99. The plaintiff's suit was dismissed, and he now contended that the facts found could not protect the tenure in the absence of proof that the tenure was in existence at the date of the permanent settlement. Held, that, although in the first instance the burden of proof is upon the defendants, the fact that defendants were in possession for such a length of time was sufficient to discharge the onus and establish that the tenure was protected. That in a case like this no hard-and-fast rule can be laid down as to when the burden of proof shifts from one side to the other, and that each case must be governed by its merits. NITYA-NUND ROY v. 2. ——— Fraud, proof of—Irregularity. In a suit to set aside an execution sale on the ground of fraud, the onus probandi rests on the plaintiff to prove his allegation; mere irregularity in the issue of processes will not of itself prove fraud, even where the auction-bids were so small as to excite suspicion. KUBEERUN v. 3. ——— Proof of irregularity—Non-affixing of notices previous to sale. Several years after the purchase by the defendant of immoveable property at a sale in execution of a decree, the judgment-debtor sued this purchaser for the lands on the ground, amongst others, that the notices required by Bengal Regulation XX of 1795, s. 12, had not been affixed previous to the sale. Held, that the onus of proving the default in affixing the notices lay upon the plaintiff, the judgment-debtor. MOHESH NARAIN SINGH v. 5. ——— Bonâ fides. In execution of a decree, the judgment-debtor's right, title, and interest in a certain property were attached. The plaintiff thereupon preferred a claim under conveyances from the judgment-debtor; but it was rejected, and the property was sold. The judgment-creditor purchased the same at the auction and sold it to the defendant, who ousted the plaintiff, who thereupon sued to recover possession under his conveyance. Held, that the onus was not entirely on the plaintiff to prove the bonâ fides of the sale, but that the evidence adduced by the defendant should be examined also. DEBI v. But in a suit for possession of land and for a declaration of plaintiff's title by virtue of purchase, it is not sufficient for him to produce a deed executed by a judgment-debtor: the plaintiff must free his case of such suspicions as may arise from his own position with reference to the vendor, and from any such circumstance as the improbability of such a purchase having been made. *ROOP RAM DASS v. trusts of the dedication-deeds declared. The holders of the property alleged that a subsequent partition-deed had been executed in 1845, and that the dealings of the family had shown an intention to revoke the trusts. Held, that it lay upon the holders to prove the revocation of the trusts, and that, on failure to do so, they could not set up the law of limitation in answer to the plaintiff's suit. *JUGGUTMOHEENEE DOSSEE v. ## 48. WILL.

1. ———— Evidence and proof of will—Suit for declaration that will is not genuine—Omission, by party impeaching will, to give evidence or cross-examine witnesses. The defendants (widow and sister-in-law of a deceased talukdar) set up a will under which they alleged they took all the property of the testator absolutely, whereupon the plaintiffs, the next reversioners, sued for a declaration that the will was not genuine and that the alleged testator died intestate. Held, by the Judicial Committee that the onus was on the defendants, who set it up, to prove that the will was genuine, and not on the plaintiffs, who impeached it, to show that it was a forgery. The fact that the plaintiffs omitted to give any evidence that the will was forged, though they asserted that "they would prove it to be spurious if necessary," raised no presumption of the genuineness of the will. Nor did the omission of the plaintiffs to cross-examine some witnesses called by the Court previously to hearing to explain the alleged loss and consequent non-production of the will give rise to any presumption in favour of its validity. They were not bound to cross-examine the witnesses, which they could not have done without permission of the Court, but were perfectly justified in waiting until evidence in support of the will was produced at the trial. *SUKH DEI v. ## 50. WRONGFUL CONVERSION.

1. ——— Suit for wrongful conversion of timber—Failure to prove actual or constructive possession. In a suit under the Civil Procedure Code, in which the plaintiffs allege that the defendants wrongfully and forcibly took away and were detaining timber which had been in the plaintiffs' constructive possession and to which they are entitled, and the relief asked for is the restitution of the timber with costs of suit, if it be proved that the defendants had forcibly and wrongfully taken property in the plaintiff's actual or constructive possession, it would then be for the defendants to show that they were entitled to the timber. In the present case, the plaintiffs having failed to show their possession of the timber or the forcible or wrongful dispossession or conversion of the goods and the defendants having made good their title to the timber:—Held, that the judgment should have been for the defendants. SNADDEN v. TODD FINDLAY & Co. 7 W. R. 286

51. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

1. ——— Suit by purchaser of tora garas huk—Evidence of alienability. Suit by the purchaser of a certain annual payment by Government, called tora garas huk, sold in satisfaction of a decree. Held, that the onus was on the Government to prove that there was something in the nature of this payment which made it incapable of alienation, and that the Government had failed to give such proof. *SHUMBHOO LALL GIRDHUR LALL v. 2. ——— Suit for closing new road and opening old one—Title—Trespass. In a suit for closing a new road opened by the defendants through the land of the plaintiff, and for opening an old road which had been closed by the defendants:—Held, that the only question which can be tried in the suit is, whether the defendants have trespassed on the land of the plaintiff by opening a road. The onus is upon the plaintiff to prove that the land belongs to him. HIRA CHAND BANERJEE v. SHAMA CHARAN CHATTERJEE

4. ——— Suit for share of income-tax—Manager, possession as. Suit for share of income-tax by a co-sharer who, the lower Court found, was the defendant's manager. Held, that the mere production of a deed showing that the defendant had in it nominated other persons to collect the rents of her share, without proof of cessation of possession, did not shift the onus from the plaintiff of proving that he had ceased to hold possession of the defendant's share as her manager, or that the defendant, and not the plaintiff, had actually collected the rents. RAMNATH GHOSE v. AMRIT MOYEE DOSSEE . . . . . 5 W. R. 168

5. ——— Suit for disturbance of kazi in his office—Proof of legality of his appointment as kazi. Where it was shown that the plaintiffs had acted as kazi of Bombay for more than twenty years, it was held, in an action against the defendant for disturbing the plaintiff in his office and thereby depriving him of his fees, that the onus was on the defendant to show that the plaintiff had been illegally appointed; and on the defendant failing to show that, the plaintiff was entitled to succeed. MUHAMMAD YUSSUB v. SAYAD AHMED

6. ——— Suit for share of joint property under family arrangement—Proof of cause of action. A plaintiff suing for a share of joint property which she claimed under a family arrangement said to have been reduced to writing as an ikarnamah, and upon the happening of the necessary conditions, it was held that the rules with regard to the onus of proof which are applicable to a suit for a share of joint family property were not directly applicable, and the plaintiff was bound to give some prima facie proof of her cause of action. RAM CHUNDER MITTER v. KISTOO KAMINEE DOSSEE

7. ——— Suit for share of zerait land under ticca pottah granted by co-sharers—Effect of decision without jurisdiction. Where, under a ticca pottah granted to him by several shareholders, plaintiff claimed the share of rent said to be due to him by the defendant (another shareholder) in respect of the occupation of a certain quantity of the zerait land which constituted the holding of the combined shareholders, and the defendant objected that the plaintiff's share was less than what he stated it to be:—Held, that the burden of proving the extent of his share lay on the plaintiff. In such a case even a raiyat resisting the claim of a shareholder to rent would be entitled, if he had good reason to do so, to make the plaintiff prove the amount of his share; and the only onus on an intervenor would be to prove bona fide possession. A decision set aside by a superior Court as made without jurisdiction cannot have any probative force whatever between the parties. SOOKRAM MISSEER v. CROWDY . . . . . 19 W. R. 285

Act IV of 1866, ss. 36, 37, 39, 40—Beng. Act II

OPIUM ACT (I OF 1878)—contd.

of 1876—Bengal Excise Act, VII of 1878—Liability of master for servant's breach of license. A, who held a certificate under Act VII of 1878 (the Excise Act) from the Deputy Commissioner of Police that he was entitled to a license from the Collector to sell muddut upon the conditions set forth therein, obtained such a license from the Collector under Act I of 1878 (The Opium Act) upon the conditions mentioned. No license was granted by the Deputy Commissioner of Police, it not being usual for licenses to be granted by the police where a license had been issued by the Collector upon a certificate from the Deputy Commissioner. A was charged under s. 40 of Act IV of 1866 [as amended by Bengal Act II of 1876] with a breach of the conditions, not of the license, but of the certificate, the act complained of having been committed by A's servant. Held, that the sale of muddut is regulated by Act I of 1878, and therefore no license from the Commissioner of Police for the sale of muddut was requisite under ss. 36 and 37 of Act IV of 1866. Held, further, that s. 39 of Act IV of 1866 applied to the case, and that under that section a license from the Deputy Commissioner of Police was necessary for the sale of muddut, and accordingly that A, although he had obtained a certificate from the Deputy Commissioner of Police entitling him to a license under Act I of 1878, was liable to punishment by reason of his not having, under s. 39 of Act IV of 1866, also obtained a certificate from the Deputy Commissioner. — ss. 5 and 9—Licensed vendor, liability of, under s. 9 for keeping incorrect accounts. S. 5 of the Opium Act (I of 1878) declares that the Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, may make rules consistent with the Act regulating the sale of opium. Under this section, rules were issued by the Government of Bengal with the previous sanction of the Governor-General in Council on the 21st February 1898, rule 15 (1) of which declares that a person to whom a license has been granted may sell opium by retail in accordance with the condition specified in the license. The conditions of the license for retail sale of opium are contained in Form No. 1 made under rule 15. Under art. 13 of this form, the holder of the license is to keep a daily correct account showing the quantity of opium received and sold and other details. Art. 18 sets out that on infringement of any of the conditions contained in the form or imposed by the Opium Act the license may be cancelled. The petitioner, a licensed vendor of opium, was convicted of having kept incorrect accounts in contravention of the rules made under s. 5 of the Opium Act, and having thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 9 of that Act. He was sentenced to pay a fine of R200, and in default of payment to undergo rigorous imprisonment for four months. Held, that the conviction and sentence must be set aside, there being nothing in any of the rules made under s. 5 of the Act which would make the preparation of an incorrect account punishable under s. 9. *UMESH CHUNDER GHOSE v. 1. Liability of master for act of servant. Contrary to the conditions of his master's opium license, the servant sold a preparation of opium between sunset and sunrise. 2. Act XIII of 1857—Wrongful entrance and illegal search, liability of police officer for—Code of Criminal Procedure, 1882, ss. 155, 156, and 165—Non-cognizable offence. An offence under s. 9 of the Opium Act (I of 1878), and not coming under s. 14 of that Act, is a non-cognizable offence, and is therefore one for which, by s. 4 of the Criminal Procedure Code, a police officer cannot arrest without warrant; and he has therefore, under s. 155 of the Code, no authority to investigate such an offence without the order of a Magistrate; nor under s. 165 can he make a search in respect of it. The power of arrest without warrant referred to in cl. (g) of s. 4 of the Criminal Procedure Code is an unqualified power, and not a conditional power, as in s. 24 of Act XIII of 1857, which only gives the right to a police officer to arrest without warrant in case the accused does not furnish the security required by that section. Where a police officer therefore, in respect of an offence under s. 9 of the Opium Act not coming under s. 14 of the Act, made a search in the house of the accused without an order of a Magistrate:—Held, that his action could not be justified, either under s. 24 of Act XIII of 1857 or under the Code of Criminal Procedure, and that he was liable in an

Where the provision of an enactment is penal it must be read plainly. There being no reservation in favour of common carriers in s. 10 of the Opium Act, a common carrier is not exempted from the provisions of this section, which is of a character that is exceptional, but by no means uncommon. Where opium exceeding five tolas was found in a boat of which one C was the manjhi and master and the other accused were the crew, and there was nothing to shew how the opium came to be on the boat, or that either C or the crew of the boat knew that it was there. Held, that C being in possession of the boat as manjhi and its master was in possession of the opium and was rightly convicted of an offence under s. 9 of the Opium Act. Held, also, that the crew, who presumably had no right to handle the cargo except by C's orders, were not in possession of the opium and could not be convicted under s. 9 of the Opium Act. As no improper conduct was imputed to the owners of the boat, an order confiscating the boat was set aside. CHEDI MALA v. EMPEROR (1904)

the decision of the Settlement Officer, that, under Act I of 1869, the defendant was protected by his sanad against any claim of the plaintiffs in respect of the talukh. Held, by the Privy Council, on appeal, that as a person who has been registered as a talukhdar under Act I of 1869, and has thereby acquired a talukhdari right in the whole property, may nevertheless have made himself a trustee of a portion of the beneficial interest in lands comprised within the talukh for another and be liable to account accordingly, the suit must be remanded for trial as to whether the defendant had agreed, or become bound, to hold the villages comprised in the summary settlement and sanad, or the rents and profits thereof, in trust for the plaintiffs. HARDEO BUX v. I. L. R. 3 Calc. 522 : L. R. 4 I. A. 178

Held, by the Privy Council after remand that Act I of 1869, which was passed before the suit was decided by the Court of first instance, did not operate so as to change the relative conditions of the parties, and to put an end to the trust upon which the defendant had previously held the estate. The estate in his hands remained thereafter subject to the trust and there can be no difference in this respect between an express trust and a trust implied or presumed from a fair and reasonable interpretation of the acts and declarations of the defendant. HARDEO BUX v. 4. ——— Effect of sanad to confer proprietary right on a talukhdar, not being a trustee—Claim to under-proprietary right against talukhdar, distinguished and not concluded by a decree for the former right in his favour. Unless a talukhdar who holds such a sanad as is referred to in the Oudh Estates Act (I of 1869), has agreed in some way, or has otherwise become legally bound, to hold the estate comprised in the sanad, or some part of it, in trust for another person, the principle on which Sookhraj Koowar v. Government, 14 Moo. I. A. 112, and Haradeo Baksh v. Jawahir Singh, L. R. 6 I. A. 161, were decided, is not applicable to make the talukhdar hold subject to a charge for the benefit of such other person. The talukhdar in whom no such trust is vested is entitled to the proprietary right in the lands forming the talukhdari estate comprised in the sanad. A claim against the talukhdar for the proprietary right included lands in which the claimant alleged himself to have purchased under-proprietary rights which were not claimed. 5. ——— Talukhdars—Title obtained by talukhdar under his sanad—Effect of confiscation of 1858 upon previous gift—Attempt to establish trust for claimants as to part of talukhdari estate—Claim to sub-proprietary right distinguished. The sanad granting a talukhdar's estate confers prima facie an absolute title upon the grantee. A gift of villages by a talukhdar to collateral relations, if effectively made in 1850, and whether absolute or only for the maintenance of the donees out of the rents and profits was rendered by the effect of the confiscation of 1858 inoperative after that event to establish an interest as against the talukhdar holding under a sanad comprising the villages. Where a claim was based upon the principle that the conduct of a sanad-holding talukhdar and of his predecessor had been sufficient to establish against him a liability to make good, out of his talukh, interests, as to which ground was supposed to have been given for his relations to claim :—Held, that such a claim was not established merely by the claimants having been left in possession of villages, and having paid to the talukhdar only the proportion of the revenue assessed upon them, during the whole time of the troubles in Oudh, and afterwards. Held, also, that the question of the claimants having an under-proprietary right in such villages was entirely irrelevant to a claim for a declaration that they had proprietary right therein, on which latter title they sought to found a right to have their names entered in the settlement record ; and held that, although there are cases in which the claimant of a proprietary right may be allowed to maintain on the same facts, that he is an under-proprietor, this claim was not one of them. RAM SINGH v. 6. ——— Estate of a sanad-holding talukhdar—Lineal primogeniture by custom—Award of a body of talukhdar within s. 33 of Oudh Estates' Act—Withdrawal of a voluntary admission. The title to a talukhdari estate devolving upon a single heir by a custom of lineal primogeniture was contested. The plaintiff claimed to succeed his deceased brother as talukhdar. The defendant, who was his paternal uncle, was in possession. Before the annexation of the province, the kabuliati had been taken in the name of the plaintiff's brother as talukhdar, who afterwards had been settled with, at both the summary settlements. By primogeniture, whether lineal or by proximity of degree (of which latter kind there was no evidence as to its being the customary one) he was the heir. To him a sanad had been granted, and the talukhdari had been entered in list II under the Act of 1869. On the other hand, it was urged that the above was consistent with the existence of a trust for the benefit of the titular talukhdar's uncles, of whom the defendant was the survivor, they having assented to the recognition of a nominal title in their nephew. Held, that in intention as well as in form the grant of the talukhdari had been made absolutely to the sanad-holding talukhdar. In regard to the state of things before annexation, it might have been questioned whether or not the property was being held benami at that time. But after the Oudh Estates Act, 1869, had become law, the title shown by the plaintiff must prevail, and he must recover the estate, unless a trust for the defendant should have been established. There had been no consideration given, and there was nothing to create a trust. There had been no transfer, no estoppel, and no bar by time. In 1868 an award had been made by a body of talukhdars as arbitrators within s. 33 of the Act, between members of the family other than the present disputants. This as well as a wajib-ul-uruz of one of the villages of the talukh was admissible as evidence of what was the custom in regard to its devolution. In 1879 the plaintiff had, on his brother's death, while admitting "the custom prevailing in my family of gaddinashini," joined in a petition that the defendant's name should be entered dakhil kharij in the revenue records. Held, that there might be a withdrawal of any gratuitous admission, unless there should be some obligation not to withdraw it; that there was no such obligation here; and that there had been no proof of any title upon which the admission could rest. MUHAMMAD IMAM ALI KHAN v. 7. — A talukhdar settled with, on terms imposing a trust on him—Settlement of estate—Second summary settlement, 1858—Effect of the confiscation—Rights of the Government. A sanad-holding talukhdar, whose name has been entered in lists I and II, made in conformity with the Oudh Estates Act, 1869, holds the talukh subject to such trusts as have been validly created. At annexation, four descendants of a Mahomedan proprietor were entitled in equal shares to the ancestral estate, which in 1858, at the second summary settlement, was settled with the only one of the four who presented himself to the Settlement Officer. The settlement with him, as talukhdar, which was then made, was, however, made upon terms providing that the absent co-sharers on their return should obtain their shares. This accorded with his application expressing his willingness. Held, that the question whether the talukhdar had become a trustee for the plaintiff in respect of his share depended on the terms on which the estate had been granted to the talukhdar by the Government at the second summary settlement, it having been at their absolute disposal as a consequence of the confiscation of March 1858. The trust was not affected by the sanad. No special provision as to the co-sharer's return or admission to share had been deemed necessary by the Chief Commissioner, who authorized the settlement with the talukhdar in reliance on his assurance. The right of the co-sharer, who returned in 1859, was accordingly established. HASAN JAFAR v. MUHAMMAD ASKARI

8. — Title under sanad from Government—Trustee. Although a sanad granted by the Government of India subsequent to the proclamation of March, 1858, of an estate in Oudh, confers an absolute legal title on the grantee, such grantee may nevertheless, by an express declaration of trust, or by an agreement to hold in trust, constitute himself a trustee of the estate for a third party. SHERE BAHADUR SINGH v. 9. — Mortgage—Birt zamindari—Settlement—Under-proprietary rights—Sub-settlement—Malikana—Act XXVI of 1866. An estate in Oudh, which had been confiscated under Lord Canning's proclamation of the 15th March, 1858, was granted to B as talukhdar. G S, who at the date of the proclamation was in possession of the estate as mortgagee "with Birt zamindari rights" under a conditional deed of sale from the former owner, was thereupon dispossessed, and B put into possession. Failing in other attempts to recover possession, G S brought a claim in which he asserted proprietary right as mortgagee, and prayed that the regular settlement might be made with him. The claim was dismissed by the Settlement Officer as being for a direct settlement of a superior proprietary right, and as such barred by the Oudh Estates Act (I of 1869). On appeal to the Commissioner, the claim was modified into one for a sub-settlement of an under-proprietary right, and a decree was made declaring the plaintiff's under-proprietary zamindari title, and awarding him possession under the terms of the deed of conditional sale, till such time as the mortgage should be redeemed or the title perfected by foreclosure. On appeal to the Judicial Commissioner, this decree was reversed and the claim dismissed, on the ground that the effect of the mortgage-deed was to convey to the plaintiff, on the mortgage becoming absolute, the full proprietary title, and not merely a subordinate one. Held, by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council that the "Birt zamindari rights," which the mortgage purported to convey, implied a merely subordinate zamindari interest, and that the claim of the plaintiff to a sub-settlement was valid. Quære: Whether, even if the interest intended to be conveyed by the mortgage was not in strictness sub-proprietary, a sub-settlement might not have been supported. Quære: Whether, under Act XXVI of 1866, B as talukhdar was entitled to malikana. GOUR SUNKER v. 1. — ss. 2, 13, 14 and 22—Transfer to person not in line of succession—Effect of transfer in changing rules of succession—Brother—Half-brother—Marginal notes to sections of Act—Persons acquiring taluks by request taking effect before passing of Act I of 1869—“Legatee,” definition of. The expression “would have succession” in s. 14 of the Oudh Estates Act (I of 1869) must be confined to persons in the special line of succession that would have been applicable to the particular case, if the transferor or testator had died intestate and the death had occurred at the date of the transfer, or (in the case of a gift by will) at the time when the succession opened. In other words, the expression “a person, who would have succeeded according to the provisions of this Act,” is equivalent to “the person or one of the persons to whom the estate would have descended according to the provisions of the special clause of s. 22 applicable to the particular case.” The younger son of a talukhdar, whose name was entered in lists I and II of the lists mentioned in s. 8 of Act I of 1869, acquired the talukhs from his father by transfer or bequest and died intestate. In a suit by his eldest brother’s son, who claimed the estate against the widows as the eldest male lineal descendant of the original talukhdar: Held, that the younger son not being, on the above construction of s. 14, in the prescribed line of succession the estate devolved, on his death under s. 15 of the Act as if it had been acquired “from a person not a talukhdar,” and the rules of succession, by which it had been originally governed, no longer applied to it. Under the changed rules of succession (the ordinary Hindu Law), the widows were the preferable heirs. The word “brother” in cl. 6, s. 22 of Act No. I of 1869 includes a half-brother. Marginal notes to the section of an Indian Act cannot be referred to for the purpose of construing the Act. Where a person acquired a talukh by a bequest which took effect before the passing of Act I of 1869, he was not a “legatee” within the definition of that term in s. 2, and cannot therefore be considered as a person to whom property was bequeathed under the special provisions of the Act. *BALRAJ KUNWAR v. The statement was described by the talukhdar in a letter to the authorities in 1877

as “the will which has been submitted to the Lucknow District through the tahsil of Kursi on 6th April, 1860.” Held, that this showed that he intended the statement of 1862 to be his will, and that the statement, as was held with regard to a similar one in Hurpurshad v. Sheo Dyal, L. R. 3 I. A. 259, was a will within the definition in the above section. The talukhdar declared in a subsequent will, of 19th August, 1879, that no document purporting to be a will, the context whereof was repugnant to the will of the latter year, should be admitted as a will. But the instrument of 1860 was not repugnant to the will of 1879. Also the latter document was not registered in accordance with s. 20 of the Oudh Estates Act, 1869, and being inoperative as to the talukhdari estate, it could not revoke the will of 1860, which also was not rendered inoperative by any of the provisions of the Act. Held, that by the true construction of s. 22, sub-s. 6, brothers take in the same manner as sons are directed to take by the preceding subsections; and that the descendants of a deceased elder brother are preferred as heirs to the younger surviving brother. *HAIDAR ALI v. 3. — Succession to a talukhdari—Effect of declaration by holder as to who should be his heir. The official enquiries made of talukhdars at an early period of British Administration as to who were to be their successors, were not intended to derogate from the rights of talukhdars in their heritable and transferable estates. To such an enquiry an answer in 1862 made by a sanad holding talukhdar, since deceased, who was entered in lists I and II (under the Oudh Estates Act, 1869) stated that she appointed to be her heir the father of the present plaintiff, appellant. The father, however, died before the talukhdar, and the son now claimed that this nomination amount to a gift of the talukhdari estate, subject to a trust for the life of the then talukhdar. Held, that the answer of 1862 did not operate to confer any estate upon the person named. *BALBHADDAR SINGH v. Summary settlements of the said lands were subsequently made with G S (one of the sons of C L) by the Government between the 1st April, 1858, and the 10th October, 1859; a talukhdari sanad was granted to him before the passing of Act I of 1869 ; and he entered into a kabuliati for the same. His name was not entered in the second schedule annexed to the Act, but C L's was. By a document dated 7th February, 1860, relating to property in the district of Oonao, and by other documents similar in effect relating to property in other districts, G S directed as follows : " I have been requested by Government to submit an application on the subject of primogeniture, with a view that the talukh may not be split into pieces as I would wish. Now the custom that has been followed in my family for generations past is this : that the eldest member of the family continues to be the head while the others remain obedient to him ; but every one possesses a share in the talukh. Under the custom of the family, the other brothers are at liberty to have their shares separated should they wish it. The head has no power under the old custom to alienate the estate without consulting every sharer. I therefore wish that the old custom of maintaining the share of each share-holder be preserved, in opposition to the one in accordance with which one member of the family is allowed to succeed." In suits for partition amongst the descendants of C L and of his brother, who together constituted a Hindu joint family governed by the Mitakshara law, all the property the subject of the suits having been found to be the joint property of the said family, it was contended on behalf of the appellants in the first appeal that all the estates included in the sanad to their father G S, and summary settlements, whether previously joint property of the family or not, became the separate self-acquired property of G S ; that he was the sole malguzar thereof ; and that he and his sons were the sole beneficial owners of it, and that he had no power to transfer it by will or by alienation inter vivos. Held, that the sanad and summary settlements were a mere grant by the Government to one member of the family of property which belonged to the family jointly, and were not intended to enure to the sole benefit of the grantee, and did not affect the rights of the family. As regards such property granted to G S (if any) which was not previously part of the family estates, it was granted for services presumably rendered with the use of the joint family funds, and could not therefore be separate self-acquired property within the meaning of the Hindu law. Held, also, that, assuming any portion of such property to have been self-acquired by G S, he must, in consequence of Act I of 1869, be deemed to have acquired therein a permanent heritable and transferable right, and had power by will, or alienation inter vivos, to transfer the same. Held, further, that the document of the 7th February, 1860, and other similar documents, so far as they related to the property in Oudh, amounted to a will within the definition of Act I of 1869, s. 2. Taken in conjunction with other documents, and having regard to the acts of different members of the family under it, the same amounted to evidence

The eldest of three brothers had succeeded to an impartible family estate, and to a talukh, also impartible, which had been, during the lifetime of their father, entered in the first and second but not in the third, of the lists prepared in conformity with s. 8 of the Oudh Estates Act, I of 1869. his death, his eldest brother made an instrument registered as a will, but using the word "tomlik," and stamped as a deed whereby he gave the talukh to the third brother, reserving an interest in the whole for his own life, and in half for any son that might be born to him, with maintenance to his wife on her becoming a widow. Held, with reference to the indicia of a testamentary character, there being provisions for contingencies which might not be ascertained till the death of the maker of the instrument as compared with the technical matters attending it, that this instrument was not a transfer inter vivos, but was a will, and within the above Act. Held, also, on the objection that a will or declaration made by the father had fixed a mode of descent which could not be altered by his successor, that s. 11 of the above Act, giving to every heir and legatee of a talukhdar power to transfer or to bequeath his estate, is not controlled by the proviso in s. 19, declaring that nothing in that section shall affect wills made before the passing of the Act. The impartible family property other than the talukh descending like the latter to a single successor, one of these brothers, the question as to which of them that one should be depended on the custom of the family. On the evidence adduced as to the custom in this respect, the plaintiff, who was out of possession, and on whom, in order to make out his title, was the burden of proving that the rule of primogeniture prevailed, failed to do so. *ISHRI SINGH v. An estate belonging to a talukhdar whose name is entered in the second, and not in the third, of the list of talukhdars in the six specified classes prepared under the Oudh Estates Act (I of 1869), ss. 8-10, is one which, according to the custom of the family, descends to a single heir, but not necessarily by the rule of primogeniture. If, as happened in the present case, where the estate descended to a single heir, the heir according to lineal primogeniture is more remote in degree from the ancestor than other persons, who may be collaterals, coming within the line of heirship, then according to the classification in the Oudh Estates Act, nearness in degree prevails over directness of line. But if two collaterals, or other persons in the line of heirship, are equal in degree, then the person rightly entitled is indicated by the seniority of the line to which he belongs. S. 22, sub-s. 11 of the Act, referring to the law which would govern descent in default of any heirs who would come under the special provisions of the Act, include in that law family custom when established. In an attempt to prove a family custom to the effect that females should not inherit, no proof was afforded by the production of certain wajib-ul-araiz, as to which there was nothing to show that the villages of which they were recorded were the villages in suit, or belonging to the family which was disputing the succession. *BHAI NARINDAR BAHADUR SINGH v. The word "intestate," in s. 13, sub-s. 1, of the Oudh Estates Act, 1869, means intestate as to the talukhdari estate; and the use of the word does not exclude from the exception in that sub-section a son adopted under an authority conferred by a talukhdar's unregistered will. The expression "a person who would have succeeded according to the provisions of the Act" in ss. 13 and 14 of the Oudh Estates Act, 1869, signifies the person or one of the persons to whom the estate would have descended according to the provisions of the special clause of s. 22, applicable to the particular case. This construction gives meaning to every part of the section. The word "brother" in cl. (6) of s. 22 includes a brother born of a different mother. A person, who benefited under a bequest, which came into operation before the Oudh Estates Act was passed, would not be a "legatee" within the definition of the term in the Act. THAKURAIN BALRAJ KUNWAR v. In a suit by the appellant claiming as daughter of a Hindu talukhdar whose name was entered in lists 1 and 4 prepared under the Oudh Estates Act (I of 1869), an estate, the succession to which was therefore regulated, under s. 23 of that Act, by the ordinary Hindu law of the Mitakshara School, the defendants, male collaterals of the appellant's father, set up a custom by which daughters were excluded from inheritance and both Courts in India found on evidence that the custom was proved. Held, by the Judicial Committee, that if and so far as it was a conclusion of fact the concurrent finding was though not absolutely binding on the Committee, entitled to the greatest weight. Technical objections to declarations made by kanungos, to entries in the wajib-ul-arzes by the officer charged by Government with that duty, and to answers given to official inquiries made under Government direction as to the rules of succession prevailing in particular families, were considered by their Lordships to be material rather to the weight than to the admissibility of the particular evidence which was prima facie admissible as purporting to be made by the proper officer in performance of a special duty, and presumably with due regard to the rules laid down for his guidance. Though under s. 17 of the Oudh Land Revenue Act (XVII of 1876), entries duly made and attested in wajib-ul-arzes are presumably correct records of the facts entered, their value as evidence varies according to circumstances. *Muhammad Imam Ali Khan v. moiety by the defendants, and that "there is no other legal heir except the deponents; the mutation in respect of the deceased's share in all the villages should be allowed and nobody has any objection thereto;" and the revenue authorities effected mutation of names in that way. In 1902 partition, which left the parties in the same state as to possession, was effected in accordance with the provisions of the Oudh Land Revenue Act (XVII of 1876). In a suit brought in 1904 to recover possession as heir of the deceased of the half share held by the defendants, the latter pleaded (inter alia) that their possession was the result of a compromise come to between the parties in the mutation proceedings which was evidenced by the document of 1896, and that the plaintiff was estopped by such mutual arrangements from asserting his present claim. Held by the Judicial Committee (affirming the concurrent decisions of both the Courts in India on the evidence), that there was no proof of any compromise. The mutation of names by itself created no proprietary title. The document of 1896 contained no words that could be construed as amounting to an abandonment by the plaintiff of his legal rights. It was merely a statement of the facts as they existed as to the possession of the property, and by its silence as to a compromise tended to support the conclusion that no compromise was ever made. In the partition proceedings the plaintiff made no objection to the defendant's title under s. 74 of Act XVII of 1876; but he filed an application in which he asked that "the share of Mannu Singh (the deceased) should be decided at present according to possession, and a separate suit will be filed in a competent Court as regards the title in respect of the property of Mannu Singh." Both the Courts in India concurred in decreeing to the plaintiff the shares of the deceased in 29 of the villages, but as to one village they differed, the Judicial Commissioner holding that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover the share in it because the partition in regard to that village had dealt with the shares of other persons besides the parties to the present suit and also because the plaintiff have raised the question of the defendant's title in the partition proceedings and was now estopped from recovering the share which had been allotted to the defendants at the partition.

Held, by the Judicial Committee, that the order of the Revenue Officer in the partition proceedings showed that the sharers of no other parties than the parties to this suit were affected by the partition of the shares in the one village as to which the Courts differed. The Revenue Court had clearly given effect to the plaintiff's application as to the question of title, for no inquiry under s. 74 of Act XVII of 1876 was made and the question of title was left to be decided by the Civil Court. The grounds of estoppel therefore failed and the plaintiff was entitled to the shares in all the

The present suit was brought by the superior proprietor, the talukhdar, in whose estate the mehal was comprised, against the whole body of under-proprietors for arrears of rent accrued, while the term of the above transfer was running. Held, that the provision in s. 123 of the Oudh Land Revenue Act, 1876, to the effect that such transfer shall not affect the joint liability of the co-sharers of the mehal, had not the effect of charging the co-sharers other than the three transferees with any liability for rent accrued during the term of the transfer. Interest was also claimed, but as to this it was held, that under-proprietors were not tenants within the meaning of the Oudh Rent Act, 1886, s. 141, providing for payment of interest on rents due from tenants. *MUHAMMAD MEHNDI ALI KHAN v. Where a compromise containing an agreement to pay rent, come to between the predecessors in title of the present litigants, had been followed by a decree, which carried into effect the terms of the agreement. Held, in a suit for arrears of rent, that the agreement was merged in the decree by which, and not by the agreement, was established the status of under-proprietor from which the obligation to pay the rent was derived, and that the suit was therefore not one for breach of contract within the meaning of s. 73 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872), in which interest on the arrears could be given as damages. Nor could such interest be given under the provisions of the Interest Act (XXXII of 1839), it being necessary under those provisions for the plaintiff to show that the rent was payable "by virtue of some written instrument at a certain time," and in this case neither the deed of compromise nor the decree prescribed any time for the payment of the rent, nor contained any terms from which the time could be ascertained. 2. ——— Under-proprietary right in Oudh—Settlement—Circular Order, 29th January 1861—Birt sankalp and khushust sankalp tenure. A provision in the Chief Commissioner's Circular Order of 29th January 1861 in effect declared that, to found a claim to a birt tenure in Oudh, possession must be shown to have existed in 1855, the year before annexation. This was assumed, for the purposes of this decision, to have had the force of law at the time when the Financial Commissioner ruled, in Circular Orders 5 and 6 of 5th June, 1868, that "a claimant who cannot prove possession of his sankalp holding in 1262-63 Fasli (1854-55) has no locus standi in Court." Whether rightly treated by the Oudh Courts as an enactment of limitation, or rather to be considered as a disability affecting title, this provision was repealed by the effect of Acts XVI of 1865, s. 5, and XIII of 1866, s. 1, the suit of a birtiah becoming thereupon cognizable, notwithstanding that he might not have been in possession in 1855. The words of limitation in the Circular Order apply to all birt tenures including those that are termed "sankalp," when the latter are in the nature of birts. Rules I and II in the Schedule of the Oudh Sub-Settlement Act, XXVI of 1866, held not to exclude the plaintiff, he having shown that he, and those through whom he claimed, did not, in the words of those rules, hold the land, "through privilege, or by favour of 'the talukhdar,' but held by an under-proprietary right, under contract 'pucka,' with some degree of continuance, since the village came into the talukh." DRIG BIJAI SING v. Where the relation of talukhdar and tenant at a rent of land within a talukh has been shown to have existed at that date, and since the tenant cannot defeat the talukhdar's right of resumption on due notice, notwithstanding a lengthened duration of tenancy, he is entitled to an under-proprietary right, either on the ground that, by reason of this state of things having brought him within the meaning of paragraph 2 of the Schedule to Act XXVI of 1866, or on the ground that time and undisturbed enjoyment have ripened his holding into a species of ownership. The issues between the parties raising only the question of some form of proprietary right, still if the tenant had shown any right whatever to remain undisturbed by the talukhdar, such right would have been considered on this appeal and would have received effect. The allegation of a grant in perpetuity in 1826 at a rent to be varied according to the amount of revenue payable by the talukhdar, not having been proved but the existence and origin of a tenancy having been shown at a rent, paid down to the commencement of the suit :—Held, that length of enjoyment, coupled with such payment of rent, could give no greater force to the tenant's right than it originally possessed. ROHAN SINGH v. SURAT SINGH.

4. ——— Construction of Rules in Schedule to Act—Rules 2, 3 and 13—Revision of decree granting under-proprietary rights made before passing of Act—Jurisdiction of Financial Commissioner—Construction of lease—Right of talukhdar to ejectment of lessee on expiry of lease—Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1866). The history of the Oudh Sub-Settlement Act (XXVI of 1866) together with its provisions and the rules in the Schedule attached to it show that the object and purpose with which it was passed were to revise and correct what had been hastily and imperfectly or loosely done and to secure that no person should enjoy under proprietary rights who could not establish his claim in the manner prescribed by those rules. "Claims which have been disposed of otherwise than in accordance with these rules," in rule 13, mean claims which have not been supported by the proofs prescribed by, amongst other provisions, rules 2 and 3, that is, proof that the claimant possesses an under-proprietary right in the lands of which sub-settlement is claimed; that such right has been kept alive over the whole area claimed within the period of limitation; and that he has by virtue only of his under-proprietary right held the land under contract with some degree of continuance since they came into the talukh. In 1864 the predecessor in title of the appellants brought a suit for under-proprietary settlement of a village within the respondent's taluq. On 15th March of that year a judgment was given in his favour for a "permanant lease" of the village with payment of a sum for malikana to the talukhdar, which was affirmed by the Settlement Commissioner, the Chief Commissioner and the Financial Commissioner. After the passing of Act XXVI of 1866 the talukhdar applied for a review of that judgment and the case was remanded to the Settlement Court for reinvestigation under the new rules, and eventually the Financial Commissioner, on 6th January 1869, decreed as follows :—"The provisions of the Sub-Settlement Act have not been complied with. . . . . As the original proprietary title has not been proved, the plaintiff is in no way entitled to sub-settlement, which actually restores him under our rules to proprietary possession, and makes the talukhdar who has been half a century in possession, the mere recipient of malikana. I decree a farming lease to plaintiff, he paying the Government demand plus 25 per cent. to the talukhdar for a period of 30 years." Held, that the Financial Commissioner had jurisdiction under s. 13 of the rules under Act XXVI of 1866 to make the decree of 6th January 1869, and that it was a valid and binding decree. Held, also, that on the construction of the decree the lease was one for a term of 31 years from the date of the decree, and on the expiration of that period the lessee was liable to ejectment in a suit in the Revenue Court under the Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886). MAHESHAH PARSHAD v. It appeared that the appellant in the Court below was a minor and incapable of exercising his right to appeal except through the manager, who himself made the order appealed from, and that the respondents (present appellants) had, after the expiration of the said six weeks, themselves prayed for a judicial determination of substantially the same questions as were raised by the present appeal. RAMJISDAS v. 1. ——— Ownership of tanks—Possession sufficient to bring suit. In a suit to recover possession of the beds of tanks which, though gradually reclaimed and made fit for cultivation by defendants, were situate within plaintiff's māl estate, and had been measured and recorded in the zamindari chittahs as the khas khamar and unfit for cultivation :—Held, that, plaintiffs being unable from the nature of the ground to show any direct acts of ownership, the presumption was that until the act of defendant dispossessing them they were sufficiently in possession to enable them to maintain their right of suit. RUFATOOLLAH CHOWDHRY v. SHUSHEE SHIKHUR BANARJEE . . . 14 W. R. 57

2. ——— Enjoyment of fruit on trees—Disputed right to possession. Where the question as to possession was doubtful, a Civil Court was held to have committed no error of law in presuming ownership from the fact of enjoyment of the fruits of trees growing on the disputed land. *DOLE GOBIND GOOPTO v. 3. ——— Uncultivated lands—Possession—Title. Lands which have never been occupied for cultivation, and which are of such a nature and description as that no one can be said to be in possession, may be presumed rightfully to belong to the parties with whom the title rests. *MOOCHEE RAM MAJHEE v. OWNERSHIP—contd.

5. ——— Measurement and mapping by Ameen. Where an Ameen measured and mapped land, and altered his map on objection made, the proceedings, as being merely upon paper, and not interrupting the actual possession or occupation of the land, were held not to amount to an act of ownership by either of the parties concerned, or to affect the question of possession. JANOKEE NATH CHOWDHRY v. BROJENDRO COOMAR ROY CHOWDHRY . . . 25 W. R. 65

6. ——— Adjoining buildings—Walls of adjoining building on same foundation. Where the external walls of two adjoining houses which now belong to different owners, but which at one time were the property of the same person, have been erected wholly or partly on the same foundation wall, and there is an entire absence of evidence on either side as to the dates of the several purchases, or of the terms on which they were made, the presumption is that the line of demarcation of the two properties is that indicated by the superincumbent walls. RADHA MOHUN ROY v. RAJ CHUNDER DASS . . . 2 C. L. R. 377

7. ——— Diversion of road—Right of owners of land adjoining old road—Public road. There is a presumption that a highway, or waste land adjoining thereto belongs to the owners of the soil of the adjoining land. NIHAL CHAND v. AZMAT ALI KHAN . . . I. L. R. 7 All. 362

8. ——— Forest lands in Malabar—Hindu law—Property in the soil—Right of Sovereign. In the district of Malabar and the tracts administered as part of it, there is no presumption that forest lands are the property of the Crown. According to the Hindu law, a right to the possession of land is acquired by the first person who makes a beneficial use of the soil, the right of the Sovereign being to assess the occupier to revenue. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v. VIRA RAYAN . . . I. L. R. 9 Mad. 175

9. ——— Forest lands—Acts of ownership—Property in the soil—Construction of istemrari sanad of 1803 as to lands granted—Evidence of possession—Questions of fact—Proof of zamindari title. A zamindar claimed from the Government the proprietary possession of a tract of hill and forest, in virtue of an istemrari sanad of the year 1803, conferring upon the grantee, his heirs and successors a permanent property in the zamindari as then possessed. To the sanad, which was aptly worded to include the subject of this claim, the acts of the zamindar had been ascribed. But it did not contain any description of the lands which it was intended to carry, a marginal note only specifying three villages then comprising the zamindari. The plaintiff having proved that he and his ancestors had cut wood, pastured cattle, and gathered forest produce in certain forests for fifty years, the lower Court held that such acts of enjoyment were only evidence of an easement and not of adverse possession. Held, by the High Court, that these acts, as they had been done under the belief

and assertion that the said tracts formed portion of the zamindari, and that the plaintiff and his ancestors were owners of the said tracts, were evidence of adverse possession. In principle, an act done is one of ownership or evidence of an easement according as the person doing it asserts general ownership or a particular right in another property. The enjoyment of any right of ownership over the soil is prima facie proof of ownership of the soil. Where, therefore, the lower Court found such an enjoyment of a forest as proved title to the profits thereof, and such enjoyment was accompanied with an assertion of ownership of the soil:—Held, that the Court was bound to find a title to the soil established. SIVASUBRAMANAYA v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA. I. L. R. 9 Mad. 285

Held by the Privy Council on appeal (affirming the decision of the High Court), that the grant was not confined to the villages so named, and to an area in their immediate vicinity, but that the whole tract of hill and forest was claimable on its being shown by direct evidence or reasonable inference, that it was in the possession of the zamindar when he obtained a permanent title from the Government. As to part of the tract, the zamindar's acts of possession, such as grazing cattle, cutting timber, and collecting forest produce, had been exclusive of the exercise of such rights by any other person; but as to another part of the tract, his acts of that character had been concurrent with a similar user of hill and forest by raiyats of neighbouring villages, not part of the zamindari and belonging to the Government. Held, as to both parts, that the acts of possession, which had been found by both the Courts below to have been done by the zamindar, did not fall short of proving his proprietary possession, and that the user by the villagers, not having taken place in the assertion of conflicting proprietary right and, whether or not they were sufficient to establish rights of easement, were neither in amount nor quality sufficient to displace the zamindar's proprietary title. The decision of the first Court that the exercise of the above-mentioned rights by the zamindar was evidence only of the right on his part to use the land of another for the purposes indicated had been rightly reversed by the High Court. Where the proprietary right in a tract of land had been constantly asserted all questions between the disputants as to the amount of the use of the tract by the claimant, and as to the sufficiency of such use to establish his possession over the whole extent, were held to be questions of fact. *SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v. 1. ———— Contract—Incidents of the custom—Employment for reward. The plaintiffs in Bombay bought and sold in Bombay cotton and other products on the orders of the defendant, who traded at Shahada in Khandesh. In respect of the transactions sued on the plaintiffs before due date had entered into cross contracts of purchase with the merchants to whom they had originally sold goods on the defendant's account. The transactions were entered into on pakki adat terms.

PAKKI ADAT SYSTEM—concl'd.

The contract of a pakka adatia in the circumstances of this case is one whereby he undertakes or guarantees that delivery should, on due date, be given or taken at the price at which the order was accepted or differences paid; in effect he undertakes or guarantees to find goods for cash or cash for goods or to pay the difference. The evidence in the case establishes the following propositions in connection with pakki adat dealings. (i). That the pakka adatia has no authority to pledge the credit of the up-country constituent to the Bombay merchant and that no contractual privity is established between the up-country constituent and the Bombay merchant. (ii). That the up-country constituent has no indefeasible right to the contract (if any) made by the pakka adatia on receipt of the order, but the pakka adatia may enter into cross contracts with the Bombay merchant either on his own account or on account of another constituent, and thereby for practical purposes cancel the same. (iii). The pakka adatia is under no obligation to substitute a fresh contract to meet the order of his first constituent. Held, that the defendant knew of the custom, which was not unreasonable, as it did not involve a conflict between the pakka adatia's interest and duty. *BHAGWANDAS v. A Collector cannot order a reference to a district panchayat under Regulation XII of 1816 unless there has been (i) an inquiry as to whether the parties will submit to the jurisdiction of a village panchayat; (ii) an objection from either party to such reference and a request in writing by one of the parties that the matter be referred to a district panchayat. *CHIKATI ZAMINDAR v. When a district panchayat, appointed under that Regulation, has come to a decision, that decision is final and conclusive between the parties and cannot be impeached or set aside, except in the manner prescribed by the Regulation. Such decision is not invalid, because only one party consented to the reference of the matter in dispute to a panchayat, or because the other party, who protested against the proceedings, had not notice of the time when the nomination of the panchayatdars was to take place. *NARAYANA v. 1. Dealings with parda women

—Onus of proof—Evidence of bona fides. A Hindu parda woman is entitled to receive in the Courts of this country that protection which the Court of Chancery in England always extends to the weak, ignorant and infirm, and to those who for any other reason are specially likely to be imposed upon by the exertion of undue influence which is presumed to have been exerted unless the contrary be shown. In all dealings, therefore, with persons so situated, it is incumbent on the party interested in upholding the transaction to show that its terms are fair and equitable, the most usual mode of discharging such onus being to show that the lady had good independent advice in the matter, and acted therein altogether at arm's-length from the other contracting party. RAKHUN v. AHMED HOSSEIN

2. Execution of deed by par-

danashin—Registration of deed—Evidence of execution. In cases of transactions by parda woman mere registration does not go far to corroborate the proof of their validity unless a mutation of names takes place, which, if done under a mooktearnama has not the same effect as against a parda woman as it has against a person capable of transacting his own business and acting for himself. Where the conveyance by a parda woman is impeached, there ought to be clear evidence, not of the mere signature by the party, but that the secluded woman had the means of knowing what she was about. FUZZUL HOSSEIN v. AMJUD ALI KHAN

17 W. R. 523

3. Registration—

Evidence of genuineness. The mere registration of a lease is no proof of its genuineness, especially in the case of a lease which was first produced as a valid instrument nearly nine years after its execution, and which was alleged to have been granted by a pardanashin lady, but no satisfactory evidence was given that she had put her signature and seal to it, and that she did so with a knowledge of the nature and contents of the instrument. *DOOLEE CHAND v. Held, in the same case on appeal to the Privy Council, who affirmed the judgment of the High Court: a Court, when dealing with the disposition of her property by a parda woman, ought to be satisfied that the transaction was explained to her and that she knew what she was doing, specially in a case where, without legal assistance, no consideration, and without any equivalent, she has executed a document, written in a language she does not understand, which deprives her of all her property. In the case of a pardanashin woman who has no legal assistance, the ordinary presumption that if a person of competent capacity signs a deed, he understands the instrument to which he has affixed his name, does not arise. *ASHGAR Ali v. 11. ———— Conditions necessary to the valid execution of a document by pardanashin—Suit to set aside deed—Onus probandi. Where a deed executed by a pardanashin woman is sought to be set aside, it is for the party wishing to uphold the deed to show affirmatively that the transaction intended to be carried out by the deed was a reasonable one; that the executant was fully cognizant of the meaning and legal and practical effect thereof, and that she executed the same with her full and free consent, that is to say, that she had independent advice on the subject and was not otherwise as, e.g., by reason of bodily or mental infirmity or by reason of fraud or coercion practised upon her, incapable of giving a rational consent to the transaction. One M, a pardanashin lady of some 70 years of age, and more or less illiterate, executed on the 11th September 1883 a deed which purported to divest her immediately of all her property in favour of her son H who was dumb and imbecile, her daughter S who was named in the deed as guardian of H, and that daughter's son Y. Y was betrothed to a daughter of one F and one of S's daughters was married to one S H. Those two persons, viz., F and S H, were mainly instrumental in procuring the execution of the deed in question. The deed was drafted in very artificial language, and it was not shown that the executant ever understood its contents or effect. The executant was, moreover, at the time of execution in ill-health and great mental distress, owing to the death of her son, H, which had happened some months previously. The deed was also executed in the absence of the person who was at that time the executant's chief adviser and the manager of her property. Lastly, it appeared that, as soon as the executant came to know what the true nature of the deed was, and that proceedings had been initiated in the Revenue Department for mutation of names, she took immediate measures to show her dissent from the provisions of the deed and her disapproval of what had been done thereunder. Held, that under the circumstances above set forth the deed in question could not be considered as having been executed under the conditions necessary in such cases, and must be set aside. *Ashgar Ali v. 18. ————— Proof of execution—Evidence of knowledge of contents and of free agency. A suit was brought upon a bond purporting to have been executed on behalf of two Mahomedan pardanashin ladies by their husbands, and to charge their immoveable property. The bond was compulsorily registerable, and it was presented for registration by a person who professed to be authorised by a power-of-attorney in that behalf. The only proof given by the plaintiff that this power-of-attorney was executed by the ladies, or with their knowledge and consent, was the evidence of a witness who deposed that he was not personally acquainted with them, nor did he know their voices; that he went to their residence; that there were two women behind a parda who the executants of the bond said were their respective wives, and that these women acknowledged they had made the power-of-attorney. There was nothing to show that the ladies had ever benefited in any way from the money advanced under the bond. Held, that, even if the ladies behind the parda were in fact the two defendants, this evidence would not be enough to bind them, and that it was for the plaintiff, who sought to bring their property to sale on the strength of a transaction with them, to show that they were free agents in the matter, and, having a clear knowledge of what they were doing, accorded their consent to it. *Buzloor Raheem v. The property sold was the vendor's share as heiress of her father, brother, and sister, who died in 1856, 1866, and 1871, respectively; but it appeared that the property of the family had been in the possession of one managing member since 1856. Held, that the plaintiff having discharged the burden of proving that the conveyance to him was voluntarily executed, and that the transaction evidenced by it was real and bona fide, the conveyance was operative. KHATIJA v. ISMAIL.

I. L. R. 12 Mad. 380

20. . . . . Sale of villages by a wife to her husband—Proof of execution of deed of sale. The purchase-money had not been paid on what purported to be a deed of sale of villages by a Mahomedan wife to her husband for a price which, however, the deed acknowledged to have been paid. After her death, two of her relations, disputing the due execution of the sale-deed, sued the husband, who had obtained possession, claiming in the alternative either that they should obtain their shares in the property of the deceased, or, if the sale of the villages should be maintained, that they should receive their proportion of the price as due to the estate left by her. The two Courts below concurred in finding that the wife, a pardanashin, was capable of managing her own affairs, and that she had not received the price. The first Court inferred from the state of things that the wife had in a manner made a gift of the villages to the husband. The High Court reversed that judgment, and decided that, with regard to the probability of influence on the part of the husband, the absence of any independent advice for the wife and other circumstances, the transaction was without effect. The Judicial Committee found that there not being a case of undue influence exercised, either made by the plaintiff or raised by the issues, they found no evidence that the price stated was inadequate, or the sale an improvident one, or that the husband had been released from having to pay the price. From the findings on the evidence the presumption was that the wife intended to pass the property for some purpose, and that the suggestion of a gift being excluded, the deed operated as a sale according to what it purported to be. They did not throw any doubt on the sound doctrine, laid down in numerous cases, as to the obligations upon persons taking benefits from pardanashin ladies. To the one surviving plaintiff was awarded a moiety of the price payable by the husband, who himself inherited the balance. MUHAMMAD IKRAM-UD-DIN v. NAJIBAN . . . I. L. R. 20 All. 447

Even if the executrix was rightly held liable, there must nevertheless be clear evidence of a separate explanation of the deed to the donee of the villages, and a clear understanding by her that she was assuming liability for debts not her own, and was charging her villages therewith. *ANNODA MOHUN ROY CHOWDHARI v. The presumptions as to the knowledge of the executant of the contents of the document she is executing do not equally apply in the case of a pardanashin lady as in the case of other persons. As to what constitutes undue influence in this country, a useful guide is afforded by s. 48 of the Indian Succession Act. 10. Criminal Procedure Code, ss. 337, 389—Accomplice—Tender of pardon, Effect of—Subsequent trial of accomplice for connected offences. A prisoner charged before a Magistrate at Benares with offences punishable under ss. 471, 472, and 474 of the Penal Code, made a confession to the Magistrate in respect of those offences. He was then sent in custody to Calcutta, and was there, together with other persons, charged before a Magistrate with offences punishable under ss. 467, 473, and 475. The conduct to which these charges related was closely connected and mixed up with that to which the charges first-mentioned had reference. Under s. 337 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the Magistrate at Calcutta tendered a pardon to the prisoner upon the condition specified in that section, and the prisoner accepted the pardon and gave evidence for the prosecution. The Magistrate held that this evidence was not sufficiently corroborated, and accordingly discharged all the accused, but the pardon was not withdrawn, and there was nothing to show that the Magistrate was dissatisfied with the prisoner's statements or considered that he had not complied with the conditions on which the pardon was tendered. Subsequently the prisoner was committed by the Magistrate of Benares for trial before the Court of Session upon the charges under ss. 471, 472 and 474 of the

Penal Code. He pleaded not guilty, but did not in terms plead the pardon as a bar to the trial, though he made some reference to the subject; and the Sessions Judge, having made a brief inquiry as to the proceedings at Calcutta, came to the conclusion that there was no sufficient proof of any conditional pardon, and convicted and sentenced the accused. Held, that, by the terms of the conditional pardon granted to the accused by the Calcutta Magistrate, the conditions of which were satisfied as was shown by its never having been withdrawn, the accused was protected from trial at Benares in respect of the offences under ss. 471, 472, and 474, and was not liable to be proceeded against in respect of them, and that the trial and conviction were therefore illegal. Although s. 337 of the Criminal Procedure Code does not in terms cover a case where a Magistrate holding a preliminary inquiry for committal against several persons, tenders a conditional pardon to one of them, examines him as a witness, and subsequently discharges all the accused for want of a prima facie case against them, the words "every person accepting a tender under this section shall be examined as a witness in the case" mean that for all purposes (subject to failure to satisfy the conditions of the pardon as provided for by s. 339) such a person ceases to be triable for the offence or offences under inquiry or (with reference to s. 339) for "any other offence of which he appears to have been guilty in connection with the same matter" while making "a full and true disclosure of the whole of the circumstances within his knowledge relative to the offences" directly under inquiry. The words last quoted refer to the importance, when a pardon is tendered, of encouraging the approver to give the fullest details, so that points may be found in his evidence which may be capable of corroboration. The question of how far the pardon protects him, and what portion of it should not protect him, ought not to be treated in a narrow spirit. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. GANGA CHARAN. I. L. R. 11 All. 79

drawal of the pardon at that stage. A Magistrate inquiring into a charge of dacoity tendered a pardon to one of the accused persons. The pardon was accepted, and the person to whom it was tendered was examined as a witness for the prosecution. Subsequently, and after certain other witnesses for the prosecution had been examined, the Magistrate, being of opinion that the person to whom pardon had been tendered had not made a full disclosure of the facts of the case, withdrew the pardon, put the person to whom it had been tendered back in the dock, and ultimately committed him along with the other accused to the Court of Session. Held, that the commitment of the person whose pardon had been withdrawn must be quashed, inasmuch as he had had no opportunity of cross-examining the witnesses for the prosecution who were examined before his pardon was withdrawn, but that it was not necessary that, if a fresh commitment could be made in time, his trial before the Court of Session should be postponed until the trial of his co-accused had completed. *Queen-Empress v. Pending such inquiry, one P appeared before the Magistrate of the neighbouring district of Etah and obtained from him a tender of pardon in respect of the said dacoity, on the strength of which pardon he was examined as a witness by the Magistrate of the Etah district and made a statement implicating himself and others in the dacoity. Subsequently, on the case being committed to the Court of the Sessions Judge of Agra, the tender of pardon made by the District Magistrate of Etah was ignored and P was tried and sentenced for the dacoity. Held, on appeal to the High Court, that the Magistrate of the Etah district had no jurisdiction under the circumstances to make the tender of pardon which he did and that his action in that respect was not covered by s. 529 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. tendered to him by the stationary Sub-Magistrate, under the District Magistrate's order. R was subsequently examined as a witness for the prosecution at a preliminary inquiry into the dacoity held by the Magistrate under Ch. XVIII of the Code of Criminal Procedure, but he retracted his former statement (which he said had been made in consequence of police torture), and asserted that he knew nothing about the dacoity. The dacoity case came on for trial in the Sessions Court, but R was not called as a witness, and, in the end, the persons charged were acquitted. Upon the subsequent application of the police, the District Magistrate withdrew the pardon which had been tendered to R, on the ground that the latter had withdrawn and contradicted his first statement. R was in due course charged before the same Sub-Magistrate with having been one of the dacoits, and was committed for trial. Held, that the commitment was legal. The words "in the case," which occur in s. 337 (2) of the Code of Criminal Procedure include a preliminary inquiry, and do not refer to the trial alone. If there is reason to believe that a person to whom pardon has been tendered will give false evidence, there is no duty on the prosecution to put him forward as a witness. Pardon conditionally granted may be at once withdrawn as soon as good faith has been broken, and good faith is broken if the witness does not disclose the truth to the Magistrate. The proper authority to withdraw a pardon is the authority which granted it. Queen-Empress v. Manick Chundra Sarkar, I. L. 16. — Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 337 and 339—Criminal Procedure—Pardon tendered and accepted—Evidence given and pardon withdrawn by Magistrate—Forfeiture of pardon must be proved—When forfeiture may be declared and pardon withdrawn—Practice. A committing Magistrate, having under s. 337 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898) tendered a pardon to one of three accused persons, examined him as a witness. Subsequently, however, the Magistrate, under s. 339 of the Code, withdrew the pardon on the ground that the accused had wilfully concealed a certain fact connected with the offence; and he committed him, along with the other accused, for trial at the Court of Session where he was found guilty. In giving judgment the Sessions Judge expressed his opinion that the withdrawal of the pardon by the Magistrate was illegal, (i) because such withdrawal could not be made until the close of the trial, and should be made by the Court of Session, and (ii) because the fact, the alleged concealment of which was the ground of the withdrawal, had not been proved. The accused, however, was found guilty and sentenced. On appeal to the High Court:—Held, that the conviction and sentence should be set aside, on the ground that it had not been proved that the pardon had been forfeited under s. 339 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898). The alleged fact, the concealment of which was the ground for withdrawing the pardon had not been proved. If the pardon which had been granted had not been forfeited under s. 339, it was still in force, and the accused should be discharged. As the law stands, the question in such cases is whether the accused has forfeited his pardon by some act of his own. The question is one of fact, in which the Magistrate may hold one opinion and the Sessions Judge another, as may happen in the case of any other question of fact in issue in the case. The Sessions Court has to determine for itself on the evidence whether the pardon has been forfeited; for, if not, the accused, who has accepted such pardon, cannot be tried. Quære: Whether the examination, at the committal proceedings before the Magistrate, of a person who has accepted a pardon satisfies cl. 2 of s. 337 of the Code, which provides that every such person shall be examined as a witness "in the case," or whether such person must be examined as a witness at the "trial." *Queen-Empress v. 18. ————— Power of Local Government to tender conditional pardon—Withdrawal of prosecution—Accomplice's evidence—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 30, 494. A Local Government in India has no power to tender a conditional pardon to an accomplice for the purpose of his being examined as a competent witness against others accused with him. An accomplice, if he is not an accused under trial in the same case, is a competent witness and may be examined on oath; the prosecution must be withdrawn and the accused discharged under s. 494 of the Criminal Procedure Code, before he would become a competent witness. But if the Court purporting to act under s. 494, Criminal Procedure Code, sanctions the withdrawal of the prosecution but omits to record an order of discharge and the accused continues to be kept in custody, his position is in no way changed from that of an accused. The utmost caution is necessary in admitting or using the evidence of an approver. It not only requires corroboration in material particulars for its use but its evidentiary value depends considerably upon the circumstances under which its evidence is tendered. Reg. v. Hanumanta, I. L. ————— Law governing Parsis in the mofussil before the introduction of the Act—Rules of equity and good conscience—Practice of English Equity Courts. Before the passing of the Parsi Intestate Succession Act, 1865, the law governing Parsis in the mofussil was the ascertained usage of the community modified by the rules of equity and good conscience. It is true that in such cases the practice of the English Equity Courts would also be followed with necessary modifications, but the reference to these Courts would be not for the purposes of introducing special or peculiar doctrines of English law, but rather with the purpose of elucidating the principles of equity and good conscience and of giving uniform effect to them. Before the passing of the Succession Act a Parsi husband did not acquire that particular right which in English Law accrued to a husband over his wife's personality. SHAPURJI v. DOSSABHOY (1905)

4. ——— Parsis in mofussil of Bombay Presidency—English law—Rule against perpetuities—Equity and good conscience—Gift to heirs of A from generation to generation. The law applicable to Parsis in the mofussil of the Presidency of Bombay is, in the absence of evidence of any specific law or usage applicable to the particular case, "justice, equity, and good conscience alone." In applying "justice, equity, and good conscience" to the facts of any particular case, the Courts will be guided by the general principles of English law applicable to a similar state of circumstances, and so as, if possible, to give effect to the intentions of the parties concerned, where such intentions are clearly expressed, and are not repugnant to any general principle of English law. The Courts will not, in such a case, apply rules of English law which, though well established and binding on English Courts, are yet so special in their nature and origin as to be inapplicable to the different circumstances of this country. The members of a Parsi family, the heirs of one Framji Cowasji Banaji, deceased, entered into an agreement with one another, bearing date the 24th May 1851, by which they agreed that the remaining income, after paying the deceased's debts, of a certain estate which had belonged to the deceased, called the Poway estate, an estate situated in the Island of Salsette, and therefore in the mofussil of the Presidency of Bombay—should be apportioned "to the heirs mentioned in cl. 7 (of the agreement)"—i.e., among the various heirs of Framji Cowasji Banaji, deceased, the parties to the agreement—"but after their death, their shares are to be enjoyed and received by their heirs and children from generation to generation for ever." It was contended that Parsis being subject to English law, these words conferred an absolute estate in their respective shares upon the various parties to the agreement under the rule in Shelley's Case. Held per BAYLEY J., that the plain intention of the parties to the agreement, appearing on the face of the agreement, was that they themselves should take only a life-estate to the extent of their respective shares in the remaining income of the Poway estate; and that the rule in Shelley's Case should not be applied so as to defeat that plain intention. Held, on appeal (affirming the order of BAYLEY, J.), that, even assuming English law to be applicable, the English law so to be applied could not include the rule in Shelley's Case which is a law of property or tenure based on feudal considerations, and unsuited to the circumstances of India; that the rule of construction to be applied to the agreement must in any case be to give effect to the intention of the parties according to the plain meaning of the language; and that to construe the agreement as given more than a life-interest to the parties thereto would be to defeat their obvious intention. *MITHIBAI v. 5. ————— The same agreement came before the Court for its construction in a suit brought by the parties interested for the administration of the estate of Framji Cowasji Banaji. In that suit it was contended, and was held by the Division Court that the subsequent gift to the "heirs and children (of the signatories) from generation to generation for ever" was void as infringing the rule against perpetuities. On appeal:—Held, that the settlement in favour of the heirs and children of each signatory was in law a valid settlement and not void as creating a perpetuity. In the absence of words in the context showing that they were intended to take less, the respective heirs and children of the signatories took an absolute estate. A gift to the heirs of A from generation to generation confers on them, when ascertained, the same estate as if the gift were to X and Y, the heirs of A nominatim. FERDUNJI MERWANJI BANAJI v. Alimony was granted to her by an order dated 11th July 1891, which directed the defendant to pay alimony to her from the 15th April 1891, "until the final decree herein be passed." On the 18th July 1891 the suit was dismissed, and after that date the defendant ceased to pay alimony. The plaintiff obtained a rule for review of judgment, which was discharged on the 27th January 1892, and on the 18th March 1892 she filed an appeal against the decree dismissing the suit and against the order refusing a review. She now applied for an order directing the defendant to pay her all the arrears of alimony pendente lite from the date of filing the suit, or so much as had not been paid, and that he should pay her further alimony until the final disposal of the appeal. Held, (i) dismissing the application, that the words "final decree herein," contained in the order of the 11th July 1891 by which alimony was granted, meant the decree in the suit, and not in the appeal; (ii) that the Parsi Matrimonial Court, constituted under Act XV of 1865, had no power to award alimony pendente lite after decree and pending appeal; (iii) an unsuccessful wife is not entitled to claim alimony after final decree and pending appeal, nor for the period during which she is seeking review of judgment. Quære: Whether the Court where a petition for review is pending before it has a discretion to allot or continue alimony pendente lite. The formal consent on behalf of the plaintiff was not given by his father but by his uncle, with whom he was living and by whom he had been adopted. Nineteen years afterwards the plaintiff filed this suit praying for a declaration that the pretended marriage was null and void, and did not create the status of husband and wife between the plaintiff and defendant. The defendant resisted the suit, and claimed to be the lawful wife of the plaintiff. The plaintiff and defendant never lived together as man and wife, nor was the marriage ever consummated. Held, that, under the circumstances, the formal consent of the uncle and the tacit consent of the father were enough to satisfy the requirements of s. 8 of Act XV of 1865, which requires the previous consent of the father or guardian to the marriage. Held, further, that, such a suit not being in the category of suits relegated to a special Court by Act XV of 1865, the jurisdiction to try it remained in the High Court, to which it had been given by s. 12 of the Letters Patent. Held, also, that the law to be applied was the English law (subject, however, to any well-established usage); that by the English law such a marriage would be an inchoate and imperfect marriage capable of repudiation by either party after arriving at years of discretion, but capable also of being made a valid and binding marriage by the consent of the parties thereto after they had arrived at such age. Held, further, that the circumstances of the case showed that there had been such acquiescence in, and acceptance of, the marriage by the plaintiff after arriving at years of discretion as to render the marriage valid and binding on him, and incapable of subsequent repudiation. Consummation is the best proof of consent to a marriage, but is not the only proof. And Semble: That, although the practice of infant marriages is one which finds no warrant in their own religious system, the Parsis in Western India, have in the course of centuries so generally adopted such practice from their Hindu neighbours as to give such marriages amongst themselves all the validity they possess amongst Hindus, making them independent of any question of subsequent consent or non-consent by the parties thereto. PESHOTAM HORMASJI DUSTOOR v. MEHERBAI. I. L. R. 13 Bom. 302

11. ———— Infant marriage among Parsis—Custom—Suit for declaration of nullity of infant marriage—Age of majority applicable in case of such suit—Indian Majority Act (IX of 1875), ss. 2 and 3—Parsi Marriage and Divorce Act (XV of 1865), s. 3—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Art. 120. A Parsi female within three years after she had attained the age of twenty-one, brought a suit in the Court of the Subordinate Judge at Broach for a declaration that a marriage ceremony performed in 1869, when she was not three years old, did not create the status of husband and wife between her and the defendant. She had never lived with the defendant as his wife. The Subordinate Judge held that the marriage was valid and binding, being of opinion that the custom of infant marriage among the Parsis was well established and recognized. On appeal the Judge confirmed the decree, holding that at all events in 1869, when the marriage took place, the custom was common and recognized as binding.

PARSIS—contd.

On second appeal the High Court concurred with the opinion expressed in Peshotam v. Meherbai, I. L. R. 13 Bom. 302, that the Zoroastrian system did not contemplate marriage in infancy, but the lower Courts having found a custom had grown up among Parsis in India validating such marriages, and that the custom was in force in 1869, did not consider it open on second appeal to arrive at an independent finding as to whether the evidence established the existence of such a custom. Held, that a Parsi suing to have a marriage declared void is "acting in the matter of marriage," and therefore the Indian Majority Act (IX of 1875), which makes the age of eighteen the age of majority, does not apply to a question of limitation with regard to such suit. The age of majority in such a case is that prescribed by the Parsi Marriage and Divorce Act (XV of 1865), viz. twenty-one years. Held, also that Art. 120 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877) was applicable to the above suit, and that the plaintiff having, for the purpose of bringing the suit attained her majority at twenty-one, the suit was not barred. Act XV of 1865 contains no provision as to the age at which a Parsi marriage can be validly contracted, the matter being left to the general law which governs Parsis in that particular, just as the English Marriage Act (4 Geo. IV. c. 76) leaves it to be dealt with by the common law of England. BAI SHIRINBAI v. KHARSHEDJI NASARVANJI MASALAVALA. I. L. R. 22 Bom. 430

12. ———— Widower—Parsi Succession Act (XXI of 1865), s. 5—"Widower," meaning of word—A widower on second marriage is still a widower relatively to deceased wife. In s. 5 of the Parsi Succession Act (XXI of 1865) the word "widower" means a widower relatively to the deceased wife only, and without consideration of the fact or possibility of the widower re-marrying. D, a Parsi, died intestate on the 19th September 1885, leaving a widow (the defendant) and two daughters and the heirs of a pre-deceased daughter J him surviving. J had been the wife of the plaintiff, and had died thirty-four years before the date of this suit, leaving, as her heirs her husband (the plaintiff) and one daughter, who was still living. After J's death the plaintiff married again, and his second wife was living at the date of this suit. Letters of administration to D's estate were granted to his widow, the defendant. The plaintiff claimed a share in D's estate, contending that he was the widower of J, one of the daughters of the intestate, and entitled as such under s. 5 of the Parsi Intestate Succession Act (XXI of 1865). Held, that he was the widower of J within the meaning of the section, and as such was entitled to a share in D's estate. JEHANGIR DHANJIBHAI SURTI v. PEROZBAI.

13. ———— Intestate succession among Parsis—Parsi Succession Act (XXI of 1865), s. 7, Sch. II, cl. 2—Next-of-kin. One Jerbai, a Parsi widow, died intestate and without issue, her father, mother, three brothers and two sisters having predeceased her. Two of her brothers and one sister had left children. Some of these children had also predeceased her, leaving children (grand nephews and nieces of Jerbai). Two of this last mentioned class had also predeceased her, leaving children (great-grand-nephews and nieces of Jerbai). Held, that Jerbai's property should, in the first instance, be divided into three shares, i.e., one for each of the two predeceased brothers who left children, and one for the predeceased sister who left a child. Each brother's share to be two-fifths and the sister's one-fifth. These shares to be subdivided among the descendants of the two brothers and the sister, respectively, no descendant being entitled to share concurrently with his or her ancestor, and, on each division and sub-division, each male taking double the share of each female standing in the same degree of propinquity. In Art. 2 of the second Schedule of the Parsi Succession Act (XXI of 1865) the gift to lineal descendants is substitutional in the sense that they take nothing if the head of their branch of the family is living, whereas if he is dead they stand in his place and take the share which he would have taken. In distributing an estate, therefore, "among brothers and sisters and the lineal descendants of such of them as have predeceased the intestate," the primary division must be per stirpes. If there are surviving brothers and lineal descendants of a predeceased brother, then each surviving brother will take equal shares with the lineal descendants collectively. If all the brothers are dead, then the share which each would have taken, had he survived, will be taken by his lineal descendants. If in either case the predeceased was a sister, her lineal descendants will take her half-share only. In both ss. 6 and 7 of the Parsi Succession Act the words "next-of-kin" and "relatives" are synonymous, and are collective names for the persons mentioned in the first and second Schedules respectively. HIRJIBHAI CURSETJI BHANDUPWALA v. BARJORJI SARABJI ASHBURNER.

14. ————— Act XXI of 1865, s. 8—Succession Act, s. 42—Advancement—Statute of distribution. In excluding, by s. 8 of the Parsi Succession Act, from application to Parsis, s. 42 of the Succession Act, which repeals the English rule as to advancement contained in the Statute of Distribution, s. 5, it was not the intention of the Legislature to preserve the last-mentioned rule in force for the Parsi community. *DHANJIBHAI BOMANJI GUGRAT v. I. L. R. 2 Bom. 75

15. ————— Act XXI of 1865—Effect of wards excluding from inheritance. Heir-at-law. A, a Parsi inhabitant of Surat, died there on the 13th February 1879, leaving him surviving the following relations, viz., a daughter J (the respondent) by his first wife, who had predeceased him; his second wife, Dhanbai, who lived apart from him; his third wife, who had been divorced by him, and whose son A did not recognize as his own; and his three sisters, D, S, and G, the first-named of whom had been married to K, and whose son E was the appellant. By his will A expressly directed that neither his daughter J nor his widow Dhanbai should take any share of his property, the whole of which he bequeathed to his brother R, who, however, predeceased him. On the 6th September 1879 J applied to the District Court of Surat that letters of administration to A's estate might be granted to her husband as her attorney, alleging that A died intestate. Her application was opposed by E, D, and S (the nephew and two sisters of A), on the ground that J was expressly excluded by A from inheriting his property, and that neither she nor her husband resided permanently within the Presidency of Bombay. The District Judge granted limited letters of administration to J's husband as her attorney, under s. 214 of Act X of 1865. On an appeal to the High Court by E alone:—Held, that A had died intestate, not having made any bequest or devise of his property which could take effect, inasmuch as his sole devisee (R) had predeceased him, and that the estate must therefore go in accordance with the law of succession. The use of mere negative words, unaccompanied by any effective disposition of his property, could not exclude his daughter J or his widow Dhanbai from succeeding to their share of the estate. Under the Parsi Succession Act (XXI of 1865) widows and children rank before brothers and sisters. S. 7, Sch. II, Art. 2, of the Parsi Succession Act, is applicable only where the deceased leaves neither lineal descendants, nor a widow or widower. ERASHA KAIKHUSRU v. JERBAI.

I. L. R. 4 Bom. 537

16. ————— Act XXI of 1865—Childless widow of intestate son of Parsi. It is not a condition precedent to the application of s. 5 of Act XXI of 1865 that the predeceased son of an intestate Parsi shall have left a widow and issue. Where an intestate Parsi left him surviving a widow, sons, daughters, children of a predeceased son, and the widow of another predeceased son, who had died without issue and a posthumous daughter was afterwards born to the intestate:—Held, that such last-mentioned widow was entitled to one moiety of the share in the intestate's estate which her husband would have taken had he survived the intestate, and that the other moiety of such share devolved on the surviving issue of the intestate, including the posthumous daughter, and the children of his other predeceased son. *MANCHERJI KAWASJI DAVUR v. 18. ————— Usage among Parsis. The will of a Parsi in favour of his wife and daughter upheld, notwithstanding a rule or usage set up by a brother of the testator to the effect that among Parsis no disposition could be made by will to the total disinheritance of the heir, such rule or usage

19. — Atash Behram (Parsi fire-temple)—Parsi community of Udwada—Trust—Suit—Capacity to hold property—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 539—Mandatory injunction—Trespasser. In this country a fluctuating body of persons, such as a village community, is capable of owning property. It is opposed to the notions of the Parsi community that the Iran Shah (sacred fire) should be regarded as capable of, or the subject of, ownership but even if there be difficulty or doubt as to its ownership, it is obvious that there must be some one entitled to protect from improper invasion the temple property; and those, who can predicate of themselves that they have exercised the management, authority and supervision as alleged in the plaint, are so entitled. The Parsi inhabitants of Udwada, as the Anjuman (that is a constituted council or assembly to which all questions regarding their peculiar customs are referred) of that town, are vested with the control, management and supervision of the Atash Behram at that place and all that appertain to it. A suit for the vindication of the right of management which is vested in, and actually being exercised by, the plaintiffs and those they represent at the date of the obstruction does not fall within s. 539 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), merely because those who cause the obstruction, happen to have been nominated trustees. A mandatory injunction should not be granted against a trespasser compelling him to come on the land, on which he had trespassed to remove an encroachment made thereon by him. NAVROJI MANEKJI WADIA v. DASTUR KHARSEDJI MANCHERJI (1904).

1. PARTIES TO SUITS.

1. ——— Advocate General—Suit for account of endowed property on death of last surviving trustee. Quære: Whether the Advocate-General must not be made a party in all cases where an account is sued for of property left by will to a charitable institution of which the last surviving trustee has died. Notice of the decree directed to be given to the Advocate General in case he should think fit, on behalf of the Crown, to propose a scheme for the management of the charity. Powers of the Advocate General. THAKOOR DOSS SETT v. HOGG Cor. 68

2. ——— Suit to administer funds of Hindu charity. A suit to administer the funds of a Hindu charity is properly brought in the name of the Advocate General, who should, however, only exercise a general control over such suit, and not interfere in the minute details of the religious charity to be administered. ADVOCATE GENERAL v. VISHVANATH ATMARAM 1 Bom. Ap. 9

PARTIES—contd.*I. PARTIES TO SUITS—contd.

3. ——— Agents—Suit by agents brought in their own names. All suits should be brought by the person or persons in whom the legal right of suit is vested, and not by agents in their own names. The objection that a suit is not so brought is an important one materially affecting the regularity of procedure. LALA MANOHUR DASS v. KISHEN DYAL 3 N. W. 175

5. ——— Suit as agent—Act X of 1859, s. 69.—Held (by MARKBY, J.), that no one can be plaintiff in a suit for rent except the person who has the right to recover, the only effect of s. 69, Act X of 1859, being to enable the person who is employed in the collection of rents to sue as agent. MODHOOSOODUN SINGH v. MORAN & Co. . 11 W. R. 43

See MEAJAN KHAN v. AKALLY
Marsh. 384 : 2 Hay 426

6. ——— Suit against agent—Liability of firm for act of gomashtha. A gomashtha of a firm should not be sued in respect of a debt due from the firm even if he contracted it with authority. PHOOL CHUND v. SHIVA PERSHAD. 2 Agra Mis. 4

7. ——— Gomashtha—Recognized agent—Beng. Act VIII of 1869, s. 13. A gomashtha holding a written authority from his employer, and suing for rent in the name and on behalf of the latter, should be admitted as the recognised agent of such employer within the meaning of s. 13, Beng. Act VIII of 1869. RAM LALL KURFURMA v. RAM TARUN KOONDoo . 16 W. R. 254

8. ——— Bengal Rent Act, 1869, s. 32—Principal and agent—Plaintiff—Gomashtha. Under s. 32 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869, a gomashtha has no right to bring a suit in his own name. He can only sue in the name of his employer, and conduct the suit for him like any other agent. KOONJO BEHARY ROY v. POORNO CHUNDER CHATTERJEE.

I. L. R. 9 Calc. 450 : 12 C. L. R. 55

appointed for such of them as were minors. GOBIND DASS v. JAYKISHEN DASS . 2 Agra 101

10. ——— Suit by manager of indigo concern—Right to sue. In an action brought by the manager of an indigo concern, on the basis of a contract executed by defendant and addressed to a previous manager, now deceased, it was held that, as the plaintiff did not disclose that the plaintiff had any interest of his own in the suit, and as the contract was not in terms with him personally, he could not maintain the action in his own name. GLASCOTT v. GOPAL SHEIKH. 9 W. R. 254

11. ——— Suit by Official Assignee—Agent of assignee. In a suit by the Official Assignee of an Insolvent Court, such Official Assignee should be made the plaintiff, and the law then allows him to sue by his recognized agent; but the law does not allow the recognized agent to sue as plaintiff. In a suit so incorrectly instituted the plaint should be returned for amendment. CARTER v. MISREE LAL . 2 N. W. 179

12. ——— Agent suing instead of corporate body. Where a corporate body—e.g., the East Indian Railway Company—is sued not in its corporate capacity, but through an agent, the suit is brought in a wrong form. NUBEEN CHUNDER PAUL v. STEPHENSON. . 15 W. R. 534

13. ——— Benamidars—Suit by benamidar—Acquiescence in, or waiver of, objection. The real owner of property is the person who should institute a suit for it. A benami holder may sue as trustee on behalf of the beneficial owner, without disclosing the name of the real owner; and if the defendant does not object to the suit proceeding in that form, and raises no issue upon the real title of the plaintiff, the suit may proceed and be decided. PROSUNNO COOMAR ROY CHOWDHRY v. GOOROO CHURN SEIN. GOOROO CHURN SEIN v. OOOJULMONEE CHOWDHRAIN . 3 W. R. 159

14. ——— Right of suit—Suit for declaration of title to, and for possession of, immoveable property—Disclaimer of real owner. In a suit for a declaration of the plaintiff's right by purchase to, and for possession of, certain immoveable property, it was found on the evidence that the plaintiff was merely a benamidar for one of the defendants, and had no right to the property. That defendant, in his evidence disclaimed any title to the property. Held, that the plaintiff had no right to sue, being a mere benamidar, and neither the disclaimer of the real owner, nor the fact that he was a party to the suit, was sufficient to enable the plaintiff to maintain the suit when instituted, or to entitle him to have the real owner added as a co-plaintiff. Prosunno Coomar Roy Chowdhry v. Gooroo Churn Sein, 3 W. R. 159, followed. HARI GOBIND ADHIKARI v. AKHOY KUMAR MOZUMDAR. I. L. R. 16 Calc. 364

25. ———— Suit by benami purchaser—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 260. A purchased at a Sheriff's sale, in the name of his son, the interest of a mortgagee in certain property, and, before Act VIII of 1859 came into operation, instituted a suit in his own name to recover the possession of the mortgaged property. Held, that the suit was rightly brought, if the son's consent could be shown. Quere: What is the effect of s. 260 of Act VIII of 1859 on suits of this character? BHAISHANKAR NARBHERAM v. HARIVALLABH 1 Bom. 20

26. ———— Bonds, suits on—Suit by assignee of bond, after death of obligee—Representative of obligee. In a suit by A on a bond in favour of B, the plaintiff may show by oral evidence that the money secured by the bond was his own; but where B has died A must either entitle himself as B's personal representative, or make B's personal representative a party to the suit. DEVA RAU v. VENTESA ACHARIYAR . . . . . 1 Mad. 452

27. ———— Indemnity bond. A bond of indemnity was given to five persons to secure the fidelity of a naib. The naib was afterwards employed by three only out of the five obligees in the bond. Held, that, on the naib misconducting himself, the three obligees could not sue alone on the bond. Semle: Neither in such case could the five obligees have sued, as the faithful service intended to be secured by the bond was service to five persons, and not to three only. PARBUTTINATH ROY v. TEJOMOY BANERJI.

28. ———— Suit by assignee on bond—Liability of obligee. The obligee of a common money-bond, of which a bona fide valid assignment has been made, is not liable to be made a defendant in a suit by his assignee to enforce payment of the bond, and to a decree against himself jointly with the obligor. ANONYMOUS v. MUTTUSAMIYA PILLAI . . . . . 1 Mad. 140

29. ———— Contracts, suits on—Suit for specific performance—Stranger to contract—Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), ss. 28 and 45. A stranger to a contract of which specific performance is sought, cannot be a party to the suit. Where, therefore, the plaintiff sued as against one defendant for specific performance of a contract to sell land and as against another for a declaration that he was not entitled to any charge upon the said lands:—Held, that the latter defendant was improperly made a party to the suit. LUCKUMSEY OOKERDA v. GANGADHAR SIKKAR . 6 B. L. R. 486

31. ———— Suit for specific performance. In a suit for specific performance of a contract:—Held, that the principle laid down in the cases of De Houghton v. Money, L. R. 2 Ch. App. 166, and Luckumsey Ookerda v. Fazulla Cassumbhoy, I. L. R. 5 Bom. 177,—viz., that a stranger to the contract cannot be a party to the suit,—is only applicable where from the plaintiff's case it appears that a third party, not a party to the contract, has a distinct interest from that of the other parties to the contract, which interest is sought to be declared null and void. MOKUND LALL v. CHOTAY LALL.

32. ———— Suit by mortgagee without co-sharers. Where a mortgage-bond was executed in favour of the plaintiff alone, the fact that there were other persons members of the joint family co-sharers with the plaintiff did not render it necessary to make them parties to a suit on the mortgage, as the plaintiff might be regarded as contracting on behalf of himself and the other members of the family as undisclosed principals. *BUNGSEE SINGH v. 10 C. L. R. 263

33. ———— Agreement to share profits of trade—Suit for share under agreement. Four persons each of whom owned a ginning factory, entered into an agreement, which (inter alia) provided that they should charge a uniform rate of R4-8-0 per palla for ginning cotton; that of this sum, R2-8-0 should be treated as the actual cost of ginning; and that the remaining R2 should be carried to a common fund, to be divided each year between the parties to the agreement in proportion to the number of ginning machines which each of them possessed. The agreement was to be in force for four years. The other parties had carried out the agreement but the defendant, although he had carried the R2 to a separate account, refused to pay the plaintiff his share of the amount. He also refused to pay the other two parties their share. The accounts had been duly made up, showing the sums which the defendant under the agreement had to pay both to the plaintiff and the two other parties to the agreement. The plaintiff sued the defendant for his share. The defendant contended that the plaintiff ought to have made the other parties to the agreement parties to the suit. Held, that the other parties to the agreement were not necessary parties to the suit. The accounts had been made up and were admittedly correct, and they showed that the defendant had nothing to receive from any of the parties to the agreement,

Right of co-sharer to sue alone. Unless there is a special provision of the law, co-owners are not permitted to sue through some or one of their members, but all co-owners must join in a suit to recover their property. The defendant cannot be deprived of his right to insist on the other co-owners being joined on the record by the fact that they approve of the suit being brought by the plaintiff alone. BALKRISHNA MORESHVAR KUNTE v. MUNICIPALITY OF MAHAD . . . . . I. L. R. 10 Bom. 32 of rent—Appeal, amendment on. In a suit for arrears of rent of the plaintiff's share of a talukh, it appeared that in the year 1279 a batwara was effected of the zamindari in which the talukh was situated, and that the talukh ceased to be held exclusively by the plaintiff, but was divided between him and certain other persons, who were not made parties to the suit. Held, that all the co-sharers should have been joined as parties, and that, as this had not been done, the suit was bad. *OBHOY GOVIND CHOWDHRY v. several proprietors. A lease granted by all the proprietors cannot be varied or terminated at the suit of one. BOLLYE SATEE v. AKRAM ALLI

36. Suit for arrears

39. Suit for possession—Lessors.

Plaintiff sued to recover possession of certain land said to have been included in a talukh pottah given him by the zamindars, alleging that defendants were obstructing his possession. For the defence it was averred that these lands fell within a 9-anna share which belonged to one D, and that by process of sale they became the right of other parties under whom defendants held as lessees. Held, that it was unnecessary to make the lessors on either side parties in the case. NAGUR CHAND v. DOORGA DOSS CHOWDHRY 11 W. R. 137

40. Suit by co-sharer against mortgagee for share of profits—Act XIV of 1863, s. 1. A co-sharer can only sue such persons in the Revenue Court, under cl. 2, s. 1, Act XIV of 1863, as are appointed or entitled by custom to make the collections of rent on behalf of the proprietary body of the estate or any part thereof and who are bound to pay the revenue and village expenses, and to account to co-parceners for receipts and expenditure as their representatives. *SREE KISHEN v. 41. Debtor and creditor, suits between—Bond—Suit for a share of a debt. A, B, and C were uterine brothers, Mahomedans, to whom jointly a sum of money was due on a bond. A, the elder brother, sued the debtor for recovery of the debt, and, after successfully resisting the claim of B's widow to be made a party to the suit obtained a decree for the principal and interest to the date of decree, together with subsequent interests and costs. A realized the decree for the principal and interest to the date of decree only. B's widow, on behalf of herself and two minor sons, sued A for the share of the decretal moneys which belonged to her husband's estate. She refused to join her daughters as parties. Held, that she was entitled to recover a third share of the amount realized under A's decree, minus the share of her two daughters. NURUNNISSA v. II of 1819. Chur land was held by the proprietors of the adjoining estate. The chur was resumed by Government in 1835, and declared to be liable to assessment under Regulation II of 1819. The recorded proprietors of the adjoining permanently-settled estate, to which the chur was a contiguous accretion, refused to make a permanent settlement with Government at the rent demanded. The chur was then held khas by Government for some time, and subsequently leased out for temporary periods to strangers. In these temporary leases Government reserved the proprietor's rights to come in and take a permanent settlement on the expiry of the temporary settlements, and also reserved an allowance of 10 per cent. on the rent as malikanah on their account, which sum had been kept in deposit in the Collectorate treasury. In 1867 the Government made a permanent settlement with the defendant, one of the recorded proprietors of the contiguous estate, of the entire chur, and refused the application of other shareholders in the estate to be joined in the settlement. The Collector, at the request of the defendant, applied the deposit in his treasury in satisfaction of the Government revenue. An unsuccessful shareholder brought a civil suit against the defendant for possession, and a declaration of his right to participate in the settlement. Held, that it was not necessary to make the Government a party. Neither H N, nor any one representing him, had been made a party to the suit. 82. — Manager of joint family—Suit by manager alone—Co-parceners whether necessary parties—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 30—Amendment of pleading—Plaint amended in second appeal by adding parties. The plaintiff as manager of an undivided Hindu family sued to recover possession of certain lands from the defendant. The defendant contended that the plaintiff's minor brother and uncle who were his undivided co-parceners should be made parties to the suit. The Court of first instance held that the plaintiff as manager could sue alone and passed a decree for the plaintiff. The first Appellate Court reversed the decree, holding that the plaintiff could not sue alone, except under the provisions of s. 30 of the Civil Procedure Code, which had not been complied with. On second appeal to the High Court:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to have the plaintiff's uncle and minor brother placed on the record either as co-plaintiffs or as defendants. The right of a plaintiff to assume the character of manager and to sue in that character raises a question of fact and law which varies as the other members of the family are minors or adults and therefore the defendant is always entitled in such suits, when the objection is taken at an early stage, to have the other members of the family, when they are known, placed on the records to ensure him against the possibility of the plaintiff's acting without authority. The plaintiff was allowed on second appeal to amend his plaint by making the other members of the family parties to the suit. HARI GOPAL v. GOKALDAS KUSHABASHET I. L. R. 12 Bom. 158

83. ————— Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 85—Suit for sale on mortgage by father without joining sons—Non-joinder of parties—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 85—Notice of interest in mortgaged property—Liability of son to pay father's debt incurred during son's minority—Representative capacity of father—Antecedent debt—Mortgage—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 28, 42. In the case of a joint Mitakshara family consisting of a father and a minor son where the father executed a mortgage-bond hypothecating ancestral family property during the minority of his son and the mortgagee with notice of the interest of the son in the mortgaged property brought a suit against the father alone to enforce the mortgage, without making the son a party to the suit, and obtained a decree declaring that the mortgaged property was liable to be sold in execution thereof, and where the debt was not proved to have been incurred for illegal or immoral purposes:—Held per GHOSE, J., that the share of the son in the ancestral property was liable for the satisfaction of such decree notwithstanding the provisions of s. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), the father having incurred the debt in his representative capacity and as managing member of the family and the son having been substantially a party to the suit in which the said decree was passed through the representation of his father. S. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act lays down only a rule of procedure; and the words "all person" in the section could have hardly been intended to include a Mitakshara son—much less a minor son—in a suit where the father is sued in his representative capacity. *Suraj Bansi Koer v. 87. ————— Contract made by member of joint family in individual capacity—Right to sue alone. The firm of S & Co., the partners of which were W S and F E, took a contract from Government on 12th November 1877 to construct a barrel-house at the Gunpowder Manufactory at Kirkee; and on the 28th November 1877 the plaintiff agreed to advance money "up to R15,000" for the purpose of enabling the firm to carry out the contract. Under the agreement, the plaintiff was to receive all sums to become due from the Government on the contractor's bills, and to pay the balance to the firm after repaying himself all advances with interest. On the same day the firm executed a power-of-attorney to the plaintiff authorizing him to receive from the Government Engineer all such sums to become due to the firm under the contract, which power-of-attorney was deposited by plaintiff in the office of the Executive Engineer at Poona. In March or April 1878, W S left for England up to which time R34,900 had been advanced by the plaintiff, and a balance of R14,942-5-10 still remained due to him after giving credit for the sums received on the bills passed by the Executive Engineer. On 24th July 1878 the plaintiff entered into a fresh agreement with F E similar to the former one, to make further advances to the firm up to R16,000 in addition to R15,000 on the same terms as those mentioned in the previous agreement; and by means of these advances the contract was completed at the end of 1879. In 1878 the defendant obtained a decree against W S and attached the right, title, and interest of W S in a sum of R5,034-11-9 in the hands of the Executive Engineer, which was then due to the firm on the contract. The plaintiff, who alleged that R13,700-1-11 were due to him from the firm, applied to have the attachment removed, which application was refused on 30th September 1879, and the sum attached was paid to the defendant. The plaintiff sued the defendant to recover from him R5,034-11-9. Held, that, although the plaintiff might be a member of an undivided Hindu family, still, as the contract was entered into with the plaintiff in his individual capacity, and as there was nothing on the face of the contract to show that the plaintiff was acting on behalf of the family, the plaintiff was entitled to sue alone. *JAGABHAI LALLUBHAI v. of the firm:—Held, that a Hindu infant, who by birth or inheritance becomes entitled to an interest in a joint family business, does not necessarily become a member of the trading partnership carrying on the business. There must be some consent act to that effect on the part of the infant and his partners. Even, therefore, where parties are governed by the Mitakshara law, an infant need not be joined as a co-plaintiff in a suit by the father to recover a trade debt. Decrees obtained in such suits by or against the managers of the business are presumed to have been obtained by or against them in their representative capacity and will be binding on the whole joint family. *Bissessur Lall Sahoo v. The mortgagee sued the father alone on the mortgage-bond, without making the minor son a party, although he (the mortgagee) had notice of the son's interest in the mortgaged property at the time. The mortgage-debt was not found to have been contracted for illegal or immoral purposes. Held [dissenting from the judgment of GHOSE, J., and affirming that of HARRINGTON, J., in Lala Surja Prosad v. Golab Chand, I. L. R. 27 Calc. 724], that, the provisions of s. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act being compulsory, the minor son ought to have been made a party to the mortgage suit; and for the purposes of that suit he was not represented by his father, the mortgagor. Held further, that the issue whether the debt was incurred for illegal or immoral purposes having been decided on its merits between the plaintiff and the defendant in the present suit adversely to the minor plaintiff, it must now be taken as between him (the plaintiff) and the mortgagee to have been finally determined; and, under the circumstances, the validity of the mortgage ought not to be allowed to be contested in another suit, the plaintiff being in the same position in which he would have been had he been made a party to the mortgage suit. M brought a suit against the executors of K's will, which was compromised on the payment by them to her of a certain sum. This sum she deposited with N, one of the members of a firm, to be invested in N's own name, he paying her such interest as it yielded him. On the dissolution of the firm, the sum deposited by M was made over to N alone, and on the death of N, his estate, and with it the sum deposited by M, came into the hands of the sons of N. On the death of M, the plaintiff and two others were the heirs of K. In a suit brought by the plaintiff against the sons of N for a third share of the sum deposited by M. Held, that such a suit was not a "suit for a distributive share under an intestacy, or of a legacy under a will," within s. 32, Act IX of 1850. s. 23. A legatee is entitled to sue an executor for a legacy bequeathed to him by a Hindu testator in the mofussil. In case such a suit is brought by one legatee, the executor may apply, for his own protection, that other legatees shall be made parties, so that if any rateable abatement is requisite the extent of such abatement may be ascertained in a manner binding on all parties interested. But any such application must be made at the earliest possible opportunity, having regard to the provisions of s. 34 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882); and in any case it is within the discretion of the Court to decide whether the addition of such parties is necessary "in order to enable the Court effectually and completely to adjudicate upon and settle all the questions involved in the suit" (s. 32). If an executor commits a breach of trust in respect of trust property that has come to his hands, he is liable, under s. 23 of the Indian Trusts Act (II of 1882), to make good the loss to the beneficiaries or legatees. 111. ————— Suit for redemption—Parties to such suit—Equity of redemption, Interest in, of person related to the mortgagor. The plaintiff sued the defendant to redeem certain khoti lands mortgaged by the plaintiff's father to the defendant's uncle. The defendant objected that the separated uncle and cousins of the plaintiff should be made co-plaintiffs in the suit. These relations of the plaintiff were not joint members of the plaintiff's family at the time of the mortgage nor did they claim any interest in the equity of redemption. Held, that the plaintiffs uncle and cousins were not necessary parties. In the absence of evidence to the contrary, it must be presumed that the mortgage was made by the plaintiff's father in his individual capacity. If the defendant had shown that, at the date of the mortgage, the plaintiff's father and uncles were undivided, it might have been presumed that the mortgage was on their behalf as well as on his own. But this the defendant had failed to do. The mortgage did not purport to have been made by the plaintiff's father as manager of the family, nor did it appear that the plaintiff's uncle and cousins claimed any interest in the equity of redemption. The mere fact of their relationship gave them no interest in it. RAGHO VINAYAK v. DAUD . I. L. R. 13 Bom. 51 were Mahomedans, and the plaintiff had a brother and three sisters, only one of whom (defendant No. 2) was a party to the suit. Defendant No. 1 contended that the suit was defective for want of parties, and that it was time-barred. The Subordinate Judge awarded the plaintiff's claim. The Assistant Judge on appeal held that the plaintiff's brothers and sisters were necessary parties, but that it was too late to join them, the suit with regard to them having become barred by limitation. He therefore dismissed the suit. On second appeal :—Held, by the High Court, that all persons interested in a property, which it is sought to redeem or recover on payment of a charge are necessary parties, as otherwise the possessor may be exposed to many suits upon the same cause of action. Held, also, that the plaintiff's brothers and sisters ought to have been joined as co-plaintiffs, the defendant No. 1's possession after redemption not being adverse to them. If it was adverse at all, it was adverse to the whole of the plaintiff's branch of the family, so as to bar the right of the group altogether. Cases bearing on the above question collected and considered. Where it was uncertain who was the heir and legal representative of the deceased mortgagor, and the circumstances attending the execution of the second mortgage were not free from doubt, the cause was allowed to stand over, for the purpose of enabling the plaintiff to apply for an order to the Administrator General (under s. 17 of Act XXIV of 1867) directing him to apply for letters of administration to the estate and effects of the mortgagor; and the plaintiff was allowed (in the event of letters of administration being granted to the Administrator General) to amend his plaint by making the Administrator General a party to represent the deceased mortgagor. 121. Right to sale—Death of sole mortgagee leaving several heirs—Sale of mortgagee's rights by one of such heirs—Suit by purchaser for sale of mortgaged property—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 67. Upon the death of a sole mortgagee of zamindari property, his estate was divided among his heirs, one of whom a son, was entitled to fourteen out of thirty-two shares. The son executed a sale-deed whereby he conveyed the mortgagee's rights under the mortgage to another person. In a suit for sale brought against the mortgagor by the representative of the purchaser, it was found that the plaintiff acquired, under the deed of sale, only the rights in the mortgage of the son of the mortgagee, though the deed purported to be an assignment of the whole mortgage:—Held, by the Full Bench, that the plaintiff was not entitled, in respect of his own share, to maintain the suit for sale against the whole property, the other parties interested not having been joined. PARSOTAM SARAN v. 122. First and second mortgages—Second mortgagee not made party to suit by first mortgagee for sale of mortgaged property—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 85—Notice. Certain immoveable property was mortgaged in 1865 to H, in 1871 to G, and in 1873 again to H. In 1883 the property was purchased by M, the representative of G, in execution of a decree obtained in 1877 by G in a suit for sale brought by him upon the mortgage of 1871. To this suit and decree the mortgagee under the deeds of 1865 and 1873 was not a party. In 1885 M sued the representatives of H for redemption of the mortgage of 1865. One of the defendants pleaded that, as he was a puisne incumbrancer in the property in suit at the time of the plaintiff's suit against the mortgagors in 1877, he ought to have been made a party to that suit, and thus afforded an "opportunity of protecting his rights by payment of the mortgage-money." He did not in the Court below ask in express terms to be allowed to redeem the plaintiff's mortgage, but he did so in appeal to the High Court. Held, with reference to the terms of s. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act, that, inasmuch as the defendant was in possession of the mortgaged property at the time of the suit of 1877, and his mortgage was a registered instrument, it must be presumed that the plaintiff had notice of its existence and should therefore have made him a party, and that, under the circumstances, he should be placed in the same position as he would have held if the decree of 1877 had never been passed. MUHAMMAD SAMI UDDIN v. It appeared that the third mortgagor, as a witness, renounced interest in the greater part of the mortgaged premises. On second appeal:—Held, that the third mortgagor and the subsequent incumbrancers should have been made parties as having an "interest" within the meaning of s. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act. SUBBAN v. When the validity of the prior mortgage is in question, the offer to redeem should be made conditionally upon the establishment of such mortgage; (ii) that the question of the validity of the prior mortgages can be determined in this suit, between the co-defendants. RAJ COOMARY DASSEE v. certain immoveable property to X by a simple mortgage-deed on the 10th September 1882. They again mortgaged the same property to X on the 23rd February 1884. On the 6th August 1885, A mortgaged a portion of the said property to Y. On the 12th August 1885 B mortgaged a portion of the same property to X. On the 21st August 1885, A mortgaged a portion of the same property to Z, and Z's mortgage was registered. On the 20th September 1886, A and B sold to X the property mortgaged to him, and with the proceeds of that sale X's three mortgages were paid off. On the 8th January 1887, Y sued A, B, and X for cancellation of the deed of sale of the 20th September 1886, and for sale of the property mortgaged to him under his deed of the 6th August 1885. Y did not make Z a party to this suit. He did not ask for redemption of X's mortgages nor for foreclosure of Z's mortgage. Held, that Z's mortgage of the 21st August 1885 having been registered, Y must be taken to have had notice of it, and, having had notice thereof, was bound to make Z a party to the suit for sale under his (Y's) mortgage. *Damodar Dev Chand v. Registration of a subsequent mortgage is not necessarily any notice to a prior mortgagee of the existence of such subsequent mortgage; it being no part of a mortgagee's duty to be on the watch for incumbrances subsequent to his own. *MATA DIN KASODHAN v. On 7th January 1872, whilst it was so under mortgage, the same mortgagor D executed bonds whereby he mortgaged K to the defendants, and in suits brought on the basis of those bonds came to an amicable settlement with the defendants by which on 25th February 1879 he settled K in patni with them; the bonus for the patni going to satisfy the mortgage-debts. In 1885 a suit, to which the present defendants were not made parties, was brought by the mortgagees of the bond of 5th January 1879, and, in execution of the decree in that suit, K was put up for sale and purchased by the plaintiff on 21st June 1886. In a suit brought in 1890 against the defendants to set aside the patni and for khas possession of K, it was found that the plaintiff had notice of the patni. Held, that the defendants as patnidars had

So held by EDGE, C.J., KNOX, BLAIR, BURKITT, and AIKMAN, J.J. (BANERJI, J., dissenting). Held by BANERJI, J., that where, under the circumstances above described, a decree has been obtained against the father alone without joining the sons, the sons cannot in the suit brought by them plead against the operation of the decree on their interests any pleas other than those which they could have urged against the claim of the mortgagee in order to relieve them from liability for their father's debt had they been made parties to the mortgagee's suit. *BHAWANI PRASAD v. It did not appear whether the plaintiffs in that suit were aware of the interest of the third son, who now sued to recover his one-quarter share of the mortgage premises claiming that the previous proceedings were not binding on him and alleging that the mortgage was unsupported by consideration. Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to have the question tried whether there was really a debt owing by the father to support the mortgage. *Querre: Whether Bhawani Prasad v. in s. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act means not the physical object, but the interest therein which the mortgagor is competent to transfer by way of mortgage at the date of the transaction. The ordinary rule is that a plaintiff mortgagee cannot be allowed so to frame his suit as to draw into controversy the title of a third party, who is in no way connected with the mortgage and who has set up a title paramount to that of the mortgagor and mortgagee. Under ss. 44, 45 of the Civil Procedure Code causes of action of this description cannot be joined in a suit to enforce a mortgage. The rule is not one of convenience merely and the fact of the question of such title being determined by the Court of first instance in breach of the rule does not preclude a Court of appeal from reversing the decree. The question, however, is not one of jurisdiction, and where in a mortgage suit a question of paramount title raised by a defendant is tried without objection, neither party can ask for a reversal on the ground that the issue was not properly triable in the action. *JAGGESWAR DUTT v. vested in the Official Assignee:—Held, that the Official Assignee was not a necessary party to the suit. The Official Assignee is not a necessary party to any suit to recover a money debt from a person who is either an insolvent at the time the suit is instituted or becomes insolvent pending the suit. 162. ———— Suit for partition and to set aside order disallowing objection to attachment—Purchaser or mortgagee of a co-parcener's share. In a partition suit all persons interested in the property to be divided must be brought before the Court. A purchaser or mortgagee of a co-parcener's share in the joint property is a proper, and even necessary, party to a suit for partition. A, B and C were members of a joint Hindu family. In execution of a decree against B, a portion of the family property was attached. Thereupon A intervened and objected to the attachment so far as his own share was concerned. The objection was disallowed, and the property was brought to sale and purchased by D. A then filed a suit (i) to set aside the order in the miscellaneous proceedings disallowing his objection to the attachment; and (ii) for a partition of the whole family property. In this suit he impleaded not only his co-sharers B and C, but also D, the auction-purchaser, and E, a mortgagee of B's share in the joint property. The Subordinate Judge, holding that the suit was bad for misjoinder of parties as well as of causes of action, returned the plaint for amendment by striking out the prayer for partition. On appeal, this order was confirmed by the District Judge. On A's application to the High Court under s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure:—Held, that the suit was not bad either for misjoinder of parties or for misjoinder of causes of action. Treating the suit as one for partition, the auction-purchaser D and the mortgagee E were proper, and even necessary, parties. If A established his right to partition, he would be entitled to have the order in the miscellaneous proceedings set aside in the same suit. SADU BIN RAGHU v. RAM BIN GOVIND possession of certain land which, they alleged, had been in their possession since 1856. They alleged that, while retaining possession of the said land through care-takers appointed by them, they had been in the habit of yearly selling the grass of the land to purchasers who themselves cut the grass so purchased; that in 1878 the grass of the land for the ensuing year was sold to T; that in the month of August 1879 the defendants forcibly dispossessed the plaintiffs of the said land, and prevented them and their servants and T from entering the same. Defendant No. 2 denied the dispossession, and disclaimed any interest in the land. Defendants Nos. 1 and 3 denied that the land in question belonged to the plaintiffs, and alleged that it was the property of A, of whom defendant No. 1 was manager, and No. 3 the lessee of the said land. They also alleged that the plaintiffs had tried to take forcible possession of the said land, and that defendant No. 1, acting on A's behalf, prevented them. They submitted that A was a necessary party to the suit. Held, that the three defendants were properly made parties to the suit, and that A was not a necessary party. Defendant No. 1 (the lessee) had the physical occupation of the land sued for; but all three defendants, not having made any declaration, in taking possession, that it was taken for one or two of their number acquired it jointly, and handed on a derivative possession to the actual occupant, which as against third parties ranked as their own. If it was properly assumed, they all had a right to defend it; if not, they might all be called on for restitution. As to A, he was not actually in possession, and had taken no personal part in the dispossession. He was said to be owner, but that did not imply that he committed the alleged acts of defendants, or insisted on his ownership. As he had not the physical possession of the land, it could not be assumed that he had the jural possession merely on the assertion of the defendants. He, therefore, having done no palpable wrong, was not a necessary party. Held, also, that defendant No. 2 was properly made a defendant, and that, in case the dispossession should be established, he should be retained as a defendant notwithstanding his disclaimer. It was possible that No. 3 held the land on terms beneficial to No. 2, and the disclaimer in the present suit would not estop No. 2 from enforcing these terms in a subsequent suit against No. 3. Where under a contract between A and B an exclusive occupation of immovable property is given to A he is the proper plaintiff in a suit for possession brought under s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877). If B desires to sue immediately on the possessory right, he should sue in A's name, though for an injury to the reversion he (B) may properly sue in his own name. The intention of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 9, is not to be frustrated by any private arrangement under which the ejector has acted, or by which he may consent to hold on behalf of some other person. As between him and that person, his possession may be that of an agent, but to the former holder he is the dispossessor: possession derived from him cannot be superior to his and (the right of suit being given in general terms) is equally subject as his, to the result of proceedings taken within the prescribed six months. A person who has been ejected from his property, in suing to recover it under s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), may sue the actual ejector, or the person under whose orders or by whose authority the actual ejector has acted, or he may sue both; but the wrong-doer who has taken possession is the one from whom primarily it is to be reclaimed. If a third party desire to maintain the expulsion as an act done on his behalf, it is for him to come forward and avow it. He may claim to be admitted as a defendant; but if he had himself a right to do what his agent had done, his right and his authority may be pleaded by the agent, and will be an effectual answer. The alleged owner or principal therefore is not a necessary party for the protection of the agent. The suit against the latter will fail if he acted on due authority where that authority is shown. VIRJIVANDAS MADHAVDAS v. MAHOMED ALI KHAN . . . . . I. L. R. 5 Bom. 208

190. — Suit by auction-purchaser at sale for arrears of revenue to annul incumbrance—Act XI of 1859, s. 37. When an estate sold for arrears of revenue is recorded in a separate number in the Collector's rent-roll with a separate revenue assessed upon it and the specification in the sale certificate shows that the estate sold was an entire estate, the mere fact of a portion of the lands of that estate being joint with those of certain other estates cannot stand in the way of its having an entire estate within the meaning of s. 37 of Act XI of 1859. In a suit by a purchaser of such an estate at a sale for arrears of revenue to avoid an under-tenure:—Held, that the proprietors of the other estates to which the land in dispute partly appertained were not necessary parties, inasmuch as what the plaintiffs really asked for was not direct or actual possession of the land, but indirect or constructive possession by receipt of rent to the extent of their share from the cultivating tenants, upon a declaration that the intermediate tenure was cancelled by the sale for arrears of revenue. *KAMAL KUMARI CHOWDHURANI v. party alleged by defendant—Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), s. 28. Per FIELD, J.—Where a person sued for rent sets up the title of a third party, and alleges that he holds under and pays rent to him, such third party ought not to be made a party to the suit, so as to convert a simple suit for arrears of rent into one for the determination of the title to the property in respect of which the rent is claimed. Such a suit raises only two issues, viz.,—(i) Does the relation of landlord and tenant exist between the plaintiff and defendant? (ii) Are the alleged arrears of rent due and unpaid? And these are questions in which the plaintiff and defendant are alone concerned, and no third party claiming a title adverse to the plaintiff can properly be made a party to the trial of these issues. S. 28 of the Civil

Procedure Code is not imperative, but allows a discretion to be exercised; and in such a suit it is better, both in the interests of Government and for the proper adjudication of the question of title, that it should be tried by a competent Court in a suit directly framed and brought for that purpose. LODAI MOLLAR v. Whatever be the class of suit, the party added cannot raise an issue which would entirely change the nature and scope of the suit; the Court being bound to limit its inquiry to the issues necessary in order to try the plaintiff's right to the special relief sought:—e.g., where the relief sought is the recovery of arrears of rent, the intervenor is competent to raise all questions, whether of title or otherwise, which bear upon the issue, is the plaintiff entitled to recover the rent claimed? TLESUREE KOORER v. Rent Act (XII of 1881), s. 148—Landholder and tenant—Suit for rent where the right to receive it is disputed—Third person who has received rent made party—Jurisdiction of Rent Court to pass decree for rent against such party—Question of title.* In a suit by a landholder for recovery of rent, the defendants pleaded that they had paid the rent to a co-sharer of the plaintiff. The co-sharer made a deposition in which he alleged that he was entitled to the rent not only as a co-sharer, but also as the appointed agent of the plaintiff. The Court thereupon made him a party to the suit under s. 148 of the Rent Act, and passed a joint decree against him and the tenants for rent. Held, that the Court was justified in making him a party under s. 148 of the Rent Act, but was not competent to pass a decree for rent against him. A party, who is brought in under s. 148 of the Rent Act, cannot be made subject to the decree for rent so as to allow execution to be taken out against him, whether his bona fide receipt and enjoyment of the rent is proved or not. to the suit may possibly have been that, by bringing him in, he may be bound by a declaration in the suit that he had, in fact, received the rent so as to prevent him in the civil suit from denying the fact that he had received it. In a suit by a landholder for recovery of rent in which a third person alleged to have received such rent is made a party under s. 148 of the N.-W. P. Rent Act (XII of 1881), the question of title to receive the rent cannot be determined between the plaintiff and such person, but can only be litigated and determined in a subsequent suit in the Civil Court. The only question between the plaintiff and the person so made a party which can be determined in the Rent Court under s. 148 is the actual receipt and enjoyment of the rent. GOBIND RAM v. Whilst this was pending, certain parties intervened and asked to be made parties under s. 73, Code of Civil Procedure, on the ground that plaintiff's vendors were not entitled to the full share claimed, as they themselves had purchased a portion thereof. Held, that the Court exercised a wise and proper discretion in allowing the intervenors to be made parties, for a decree in plaintiffs' favour, though not legally binding on them, would nevertheless have caused them great difficulty in all matters of rent. SALIGRAM SINGH v. N C A, who claimed under a mokurari title and alleged that he was in the receipt of the rents from the raiyat, was made a party under s. 73, Act VIII of 1859. The Munsif passed a decree in favour of the plaintiff. On appeal by N C A, which was heard and decided by the Subordinate Judge, on reference by the District Judge, the decree of the first Court was reversed, and the suit dismissed. On appeal to the High Court:—Held, that the only issue to be tried was whether the relationship of landlord and tenant subsisted between D C S and B, and that N C A was properly made a party defendant to the suit. DOYAL CHAND SAHOY v. 228. — Tenants in common—Non-joinder of parties—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 31—Benami mortgage—Suit by some of the heirs of the real mortgagee—Joinder of causes of action. In 1880 A and B jointly advanced moneys on the security of a usufructuary mortgage which was taken in the name of B. In 1884, A alone advanced moneys on the security of usufructuary mortgages which were likewise taken in the name of B. A died leaving three sons, of whom the plaintiffs were two. The plaintiffs, having become divided from their brother, now brought suits in 1894 against B and the mortgagors for a declaration of their rights to the mortgages and for possession of the documents and for rent of the land which had been collected by B. It appeared that there had been no denial of the plaintiff's rights before 1889 that no rent had been collected for several years before suit, the mortgagors who had remained in possession as lessees after the execution of the mortgages having refused to attorn to B. Held, that the suits were not bad for the non-joinder of the plaintiffs' brother. *MAHABALA BHATTA v. 231. ————— Trusts Act (II of 1882), s. 56—Suit by two out of eleven beneficiaries for possession of trust property—Maintainability of suit—Succession Act (X of 1865), s. 271. Two daughters of a testator sued defendants Nos. 1 and 2, the testator's sons and his administrators with the will annexed, and other defendants, for a declaration that certain properties devised by the testator to be held in trust and the rents divided among his eleven children were trust properties, and to recover possession thereof. A decree had been obtained against plaintiff No. 2 and her right, title, and interest in the trust property brought to sale. Defendants Nos. 1 and 2 had filed a suit to set aside the sale, but afterwards compromised it on the terms that the sale should be cancelled on payment of a certain sum by defendant No. 1, but that, in default of such payment, the decree should take effect. Default having been made, the property was sold. Held (by the whole Court), that the decree of the Court below awarding the plaintiff's possession of the whole property on behalf of themselves and the other beneficiaries must be reversed. Per BODDAM, J.—That the alienations made in pursuance of the compromise entered into by the administrators were binding upon the plaintiffs, and that therefore neither of them had any cause of action. Per O'FARRELL, J.—That under all the circumstances the suit could not be treated as a suit to recover the plaintiffs' shares of the trust property. Per SUBRAHMANYA AYYAR, J. (dissentiente)—The fact that the plaintiffs had asked for a larger relief than they were entitled to did not warrant the dismissal of the suit altogether; and that the suit fell within the class of cases in which relief against a third party is such as a Court of equity will administer and a cestui qui trust may be entitled to sue the trustees and the third party jointly, but in which he will be bound to confine his suit to that specific matter in respect of which alone the third party is liable, and not to make it part of a suit for the general administration of the trust and that plaintiff No. 1 was not precluded from recovering her eleventh share. *PADMANABHA CHETTIAR v. trust deed, the trustee, who was made a party, did not appear. The suit was afterwards withdrawn as against the trustee and a consent decree obtained, which, amongst other things, declared the trust deed to be not binding on any party. Subsequently an application was made to set aside the consent decree and notice of motion was given to the trustee. She appeared on the motion, but on some of the parties objecting, the lower Court refused to hear her. Held, that the trustee was entitled to appear and be heard on the motion as a necessary party. *NUNDA LAL BOSE v. They prayed for a declaration of their right and an injunction restraining the defendants from interfering with it. Held, that the plaintiffs could maintain the suit for the personal injury alleged to have been suffered by themselves by the pollution of their sanctuary, whether under the Civil Procedure Code of 1859 or that of 1877, s. 30 of the latter being merely regulative, not constitutive. Whether or not it could be contended that they and the defendants so represented their respective castes that the decree in this suit should bind all members of the two castes, would be open to argument in any future case; but it might well be consistent with general principles to hold that certain judicial proceedings taken by or against a select number as representing a large class might, if fairly and honestly conducted, bind or benefit the whole class. The last part of the prayer was withdrawn. The mortgages were executed to secure a decree-debt, the decree having been passed ex parte against the late karnavan of the tarwad. No fraud was alleged, but the lower Courts found that the karnavan had been guilty of fraud in allowing the decree to be passed ex parte. The plaintiffs had not been parties to the decree, and the other junior members of the tarwad, who had been joined, were exempted from liability. Held, per Curiam, that all the members of the plaintiff's tarwad should have been joined actually or constructively under s. 30 of the Civil Procedure Code. MOIDIN KUTTI v. KRISHNAN

11. ———— Irregularity in civil case. The plaintiffs were fishermen belonging to the village of N. They claimed in this suit for themselves and the other fishermen of their village the exclusive right of fishing in the Negothna creek, between high and low water mark, within certain limits set forth in the plaint, and under s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act they sought to recover possession of that right from the defendants, who, they contended, had dispossessed them within six months before suit. It was contended by the defendants that the plaintiffs, who claimed on behalf of other fishermen of the village, should have proceeded under s. 30 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Held, that the objection was a good one; but, inasmuch as it was still open to the defendants to establish their right by a regular suit, the irregularity in the present suit was not such as to call for the exercise of the powers of

14. ————— Joint suit by persons who have a common cause of action—Declaratory decree—Denial of right—Perpetual injunction—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), ss. 42 and 54. The plaintiffs were the hereditary gors or priests, residing at Dakor, who ordinarily conducted their yajmans or patrons to the temple of Shri Ranchhod Raiji, performed worship there on their behalf, and received remuneration for their services. The defendants were the shevaks or ministers of the idol; it was their duty to remain in constant attendance on the idol, perform the daily services at the temple, collect the offerings, and apply the same to the purposes of the foundation. On 12th October 1883 the shevaks issued rules prohibiting people from entering the Nij Mandir and Saja Mandir, which were particularly sacred chambers in the temple, except on payment of certain fees. Every visitor was required to purchase a ticket of admission to the interior parts of the temple. The plaintiffs thereupon sued for a declaration of their right of free access to the Nij Mandir and

Saja Mandir at all times and on all occasions when the temple was open for purposes of public worship. They alleged that the new rules framed by the shevaks constituted an infringement of their immemorial rights of going into the said mandirs without any let or hindrance, of worshipping the idol there for themselves and their patrons, and of receiving whatever their patrons gave them. They therefore sought for a perpetual injunction restraining the shevaks from interfering with their rights. The plaintiffs were 208 in number. Thirteen of them obtained leave to bring the suit on behalf of themselves and the rest under s. 30 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). The defendants contended, inter alia, that the plaintiffs had each a separate cause of action; that they had no right to sue jointly; that they were not entitled to a declaratory decree under s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act; and that the plaintiffs, never having been obstructed in the exercise of their rights, had no cause of action. Held, that the suit was rightly constituted under s. 30 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The rules made by the shevak in 1883 interfered with the immemorial rights of the gors, and gave a common cause of action to all the plaintiffs. They were therefore entitled to sue jointly. Held, also, that the plaintiffs were entitled to a declaratory decree under s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), as their title to free access with their patrons to the sacred shrines and to receive presents from their patrons unfettered by the rules of 1883 was denied by those rules. Held, also, that the plaintiffs were entitled to further relief by way of perpetual injunction under s. 54 of 1877, as the defendants had threatened to invade their enjoyment of property, and the invasion was such that pecuniary compensation would not afford adequate relief. Held, also, that the shevaks had no authority to issue the rules of the 12th October 1883, or to levy fees from worshippers in respect of any public religious services held in the temple. *KALIDAS JIVRAM v. 15. ————— Suit to remove a mohunt—"Numerous parties." The "numerous parties" mentioned in s. 30 of the Code of Civil Procedure mean parties capable of being ascertained. Two plaintiffs instituted a suit, on behalf of themselves and 42 other persons named in a schedule to the plaint, against a mohunt of an akhra to have certain alienations of property belonging to the idol set aside, and the mohunt removed on the ground that he was wasting the idol's property and setting up an adverse title to it, and to have another mohunt and trustee of the property appointed in his place. The plaintiffs alleged that they and the 42 others named in the schedule were in the habit of worshipping the idol or of contributing to the worship and expenses of it, but it was clearly established by the evidence that any Hindu who chose was at liberty to give puja or render service and worship, and that others than the plaintiffs and the 42 persons named in fact did so, and that the plaintiffs and the persons named were therefore not only persons interested in the suit. The plaintiffs applied for and obtained leave to institute the suit under the provisions of s. 30 of the Code. A decree having been made in their favour, on appeal:—Held, that the suit was not one to which the provisions of s. 30 were applicable, as the persons interested therein, not being the whole Hindu community, were incapable of ascertainment. *SAJEDUR RAJA v. On second appeal:—Held, reversing the decree, that s. 30 of the Civil Procedure Code was not applicable to the suit, which must be regarded as one in which the plaintiffs claimed to restrain the defendants from violating the common interest they all had in the land. *TANUDIN v. and also in their individual capacity. It was found by the Court that the plaintiffs did not constitute the panch, and that they did not in that character represent the community. Held, that s. 26 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, was only an enabling section, it allowed the plaintiffs to bring a joint action, and should not be read as though all persons of the community must be joined as plaintiffs. Held, also, that s. 30 of the Code is an enabling section, and did not debar the plaintiffs from suing in their own right in this case. *BAIJU LAL PARBATIA v. Religious endowment, suit relating to—Leave to sue—Non-joinder of Advocate-General—Maintainability of suit. Four worshippers at a temple, who were also entitled to vote at the election of dharmakartas, filed a suit for a declaration that the election of certain persons to that office was void. Notice had not been given to the other worshippers, nor had leave of the Court been obtained prior to the institution of that suit. Held, that the suit was maintainable notwithstanding that the Advocate-General had not been joined as a party; that s. 30 of the Code of Civil Procedure being permissive and not prohibitive and dealing with procedure only, and not affecting substantive rights, the omission to state in the plaint that the suit was instituted on behalf of other worshippers having similar rights to sue as the plaintiffs was not fatal to the maintainability of the suit; that the Court was competent, with a view of adjudicating completely and definitively on the matter in dispute, to require an amendment of the plaint, and that the suit need not necessarily be dismissed; that the omission to apply for leave under s. 30 of the Code of Civil Procedure is not in itself ground for dismissing a suit, but, on objection being taken, the suit should not be allowed to proceed except on the terms of the plaint being amended and the requisite leave being obtained; and that the granting of leave under s. 30 is not a condition precedent, and may take place after the institution of the suit. *Jan Ali v. The three brothers at the hearing expressed their willingness that A should sue alone. Held, that such assent did not obviate the necessity of joining all the proper parties as co-plaintiffs, and that the suit therefore, as framed, would not lie. Held, further, that A would have been in no better position had he joined his three brothers as co-plaintiffs after the suit was, as regards them, time-barred; since such a suit would have been virtually a suit by himself alone and therefore bad. *Boydonth Bag v. 21. ———— Suit by members of joint Hindu family carrying on business in partnership—Joint co-contractors. Two of the sons out of a joint Mitakshara family, consisting of a father and three sons and the widow and sons of a deceased son, and carrying on business in partnership, sued to recover money due on a hathchitta, dated the 11th December 1876; the last payment made and entered by the defendant being on the 20th July 1877. No time was fixed for payment of the money, so that it became payable on the date of the hathchitta. The suit was instituted on the 19th July 1880, and came on for hearing on the 26th July, when an objection was taken that all the parties who ought to sue were not on the record. On the application of the original plaintiffs, the names of the father and the third son were then added, and the plaintiffs were described as surviving partners of the deceased son. At the time the additional plaintiffs were made parties, the suit was, as regards them, barred by limitation. Held, that the additional plaintiffs were rightly made parties to the suit, notwithstanding that the suit was, as far as they were concerned, barred. In actions of contract it is the right of the defendant, if he takes the objection in proper time, to insist upon all the persons with whom he contracted being joined as plaintiffs; and if, after the objection has been raised, the plaintiff proceeds with the suit without taking steps to add the person or persons whose non-joinder has been objected to, and the Court finds that the objection is well founded, the suit must be dismissed. Held, that, inasmuch as the original plaintiffs could only enforce their claim in conjunction with the added plaintiffs, and the added plaintiffs were barred by s. 22 of Act XV of 1877, the claim of the original plaintiffs was also barred. Boydonth Bag v. Grish Chunder Roy, I. L. R. 3 Calc. 26, dissented from. There is no equity, but often much injustice, in allowing one joint contractor out of many to sue a defendant, notwithstanding an objection duly made by the latter; and the Court has no right to allow one contractor to recover under such circumstances, though he may, no doubt, afterwards adjust the sum which he recovers with his co-contractors. *RAM-SHEBUT v. 23. ———— Non-joinder of parties—Application to join necessary parties refused by Court of first instance—Application granted by Court of Appeal—Order to add parties operating nunc pro tunc—Delay the act of the Court—Limitation. The plaintiffs, as sharers in certain rent alleged to be due by the defendants, sued to recover their share. The defendants contended that all the co-sharers were necessary parties. At the hearing on the 24th January 1889, the plaintiffs' co-sharers applied to be made co-plaintiffs and to be allowed to adopt what the plaintiffs had done in the suit. The application was rejected, and the suit was dismissed for want of parties. On appeal, the District Court in July 1890, holding that the lower Court ought to have joined the co-sharers, passed an order making them co-plaintiffs, and then confirmed the lower Court's decree on the ground that at the time (3rd July 1890) the co-sharers were made plaintiffs the suit was barred by limitation. On appeal to the High Court:—Held, remanding the case, that the order of the lower Appeal Court of the 3rd July 1890, allowing the co-sharers' application, which had been made on the 24th January 1889, but had been refused by the Court of first instance, should be treated as operating nunc pro tunc, and that the co-sharers should be regarded as having been made parties to the suit when their application was made. The plaintiff was described as "the firm of K S by its manager S N." The defendants objected that one M was a partner in the firm and should be a party to the suit; he was joined as a co-plaintiff on the 27th January 1888. The defendants then contended that the suit was time-barred under s. 22 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). Held, that the case was one of misdescription and not of non-joinder, for the action was brought in the name of the firm by its manager. The order of the words in the vernacular plaint showed that S, the manager, did not sue in his own name. The defendants were entitled to have

32. Suit to cancel under-tenures—Act XI of 1859, s. 37. On the 13th January 1871, A and B purchased an estate sold for arrears of Government revenue. The original proprietors asserted their right to collect the rents of a portion of the property by virtue of holding two shikmi talukhs and a howla tenure. This right was affirmed by the High Court in April 1875. B had previously sold his interest to C. On the 29th May 1876, A created a patni of his eight annas in favour of D and E, and on the 4th July 1876, C purchased all the rights of the original proprietors. On the 18th January 1877, A sued under Act XI of 1859, s. 37, to cancel or vary the tenures, making the original proprietors C and various tenants, defendants. C objected that A had no right of suit or cause of action, as he had parted with all his rights to D and E, and that, as his entire interest in the estate was only 8 annas, he could not sue to cancel a part only of the sub-tenures. D and E then applied to be added as parties, and were made plaintiffs. Held, that A had no cause of action, as he had previously parted with all his rights as zamindar to cancel these tenures in favour of D and E; nor could D and E sue, as they were not "purchasers of an entire estate." That A having no cause of action, it was not competent to the lower Court to add D and E as plaintiffs, and so introduce a right of action which did not previously exist. DWARAKANATH PAL v. 42. ———— Property vested in three sabhas—Suit by members representing two—Maintainability of suit. A temple was managed by three sabhas, and members representing two only of such sabhas brought a suit to recover land belonging to it, without alleging that the members of the third sabha had been consulted with reference to the suit, or that they had repudiated the right of the plaintiff to sue in conjunction with that sabha. Permission to sue as representing the whole of the members of the three sabhas had been refused. Held, that the suit was not maintainable. PURAMATHAN SOMAYAJIPAD v. SANKARA MENON. I. L. 43. ———— Malabar law—Suit by one of two uralans to recover property demised on kanom—Non-joinder of the only other uralan as co-plaintiff—Joinder as defendant—Evidence of adverse acts—Maintainability of suit. One of two uralans sued to redeem property which had been demised to the defendants on kanom. He did not join the other uralan as a co-plaintiff, but impleaded him as a defendant. The other uralan had granted a renewal of the kanom, and plaintiff in his suit ignored that renewal and contended that it was invalid. On objection being raised that the suit was not maintainable by reason of the non-joinder of the other uralan as a co-plaintiff:—Held, that the suit was maintainable. In the circumstances, the plaintiff could not have joined the other uralan, nor could it be held that he was bound to have consulted him before the suit was filed, or asked him to join in bringing it. *Savitri Antaranam v. title should be joined as defendants in a suit.

GOVERNMENT v. FERGUSON . 9 W. R. 158

45. ——— Prevention of unnecessary litigation—Discretion of Judge. The object of s. 73, Act VIII of 1859, is to prevent needless litigation; and there are cases—e.g., as when it is necessary to make plaintiff's co-parceners defendants—when a Judge should exercise the discretion vested in him by that section, even if the plaintiff omits to ask him to do so. MOTEE CHUND DOSS v. MURLEE DHUR DOSS . 15 W. R. 432

46. ——— Likelihood of being affected by result of suit—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 73—Raising unnecessary issues. S. 73 of the Civil Procedure Code enables the Court to bring in as parties to the suit any person whose rights appear to be involved, and who may be affected by the result of the suit. It does not enable parties who are not liable to be affected by the result to come in and raise altogether new issues which do not properly arise. Where the parties, however, all acquiesced in the irregularity, and the suit went to trial on the issues raised by the added defendant, the High Court did not think it necessary to quash the proceedings. PADMALOHAN SEN v. 47. ——— Likelihood of being affected by result of suit—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 73—Discretion of Court—Suit for possession—Form of decree. In a suit to recover possession of a certain mouzah claimed by the plaintiff as a portion of his dar-patni talukh, which was brought against several defendants, four other persons applied to be made defendants, on the ground that they were co-sharers with the defendants on the record in the property in dispute. The application was granted; the added defendants were found to be possessed of the share which they claimed, and on the proofs which they adduced the plaintiff's claim was dismissed. The plaintiff's claim as against the original defendants, who made no opposition was decreed. In special appeal, on the ground that they should not have been made defendants, and that the plaintiff was not bound to prove his case against anybody else but the person against whom he had brought the suit:—Held that the s. 73, Act VIII of 1859, leaves to the Courts of original jurisdiction a discretion in such cases; that the section is not limited entirely to cases where the suit as framed cannot proceed; that the words "persons who may be likely to be affected by the result" do not mean persons on whom the result would be legally binding. KALIPRASHAD SING v. brought a suit against the two widows of M, to whom a certificate had been granted under Act XXVII of 1860, to set aside the certificate, and for possession of the estate with mesne profits from the death of M, to the institution of this suit. N and others, who claimed to be entitled to a portion of the property specified in the plaint, intervened, and asked to be made defendants under s. 73 of Act VIII of 1859. Held, that they were not parties likely to be affected by the result within s. 73 of the suit, and should not have been made parties to the suit. AHMED HOSSEIN v. 49. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1859, ss. 73, 350—Act XXVII of 1860, s. 4—Certificate of administration—Suit by co-heir against holder of certificate. In a suit against a co-heir, who had obtained a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, for an account of the estate of the deceased proprietor, a third party was added as a defendant under s. 73 of Act VIII of 1859, "it appearing from the accounts put in that a large portion of the assets had been disposed of by him as agent" of the holder of the certificate. On appeal:—Held, that a co-heir is entitled to follow property of the deceased into the hands of any person who has misappropriated it, and such right is not taken away by the certificate. Therefore any person who, with the consent of the holder of the certificate, has improperly possessed himself of property belonging to the deceased and, misappropriated it, may be joined as a co-defendant. The third party was rightly so joined in this case. NGA THA YA v. MI KHAN MHAW . 5 B. L. R. 371 : 13 W. R. 443

50. ——— Corporate body, suit by an agent—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 73. Where a corporate body—e.g., the East Indian Railway Company—is sued, not in its corporate capacity but through an agent, the corporate body is not likely to be affected by the result of the suit. A Court is justified in refusing an application to make such corporate body a party in the suit under s. 73, Act VIII of 1859. NUBEEN CHUNDER PAUL v. STEPHENSON.

Where an intervenor claimed a portion of the subject-matter of the suit, it was held that it would be most inconvenient and contrary to all principle if every person claiming a title adverse to those set up by the plaintiff and defendant in the suit should intervene and be introduced into the suit, so that, as soon as the plaintiff's title was determined against him, the intervenor might take up the case as a fresh claimant. Subsequently certain persons prayed to be made defendants, as they held a dar-mokurari, and were not liable to be turned out. They were accordingly added as defendants under s. 73, Civil Procedure Code. It then appeared that the possession sought by plaintiff was khas possession. Held, that, although it was prima facie necessary for these intervenors to be made defendants, yet, after the intention of the plaintiff became apparent, nothing would be gained by removing them from the record, even if the Court had power to do so in special appeal. Mortgage before suit of defendant's interest. A sued V and S to establish his right to attach a certain house in execution of a decree obtained by him in a previous suit. In their written statement the defendants alleged that A had obtained the decree in question by fraud. Shortly before the present suit, V had mortgaged the house to H for R33,000. About three weeks after the suit had been filed, H advanced a further sum of R5,000 to V on the same security, and on the same day (12th December 1881) entered into an agreement with V, by which he agreed to buy the house for R45,000, the sale to be completed immediately after the decision of the present suit. The agreement provided that V should defend the suit; but if the result of the suit should be to establish the plaintiff's right to seize the house in execution, then that H should be at liberty to cancel the contract of sale. Subsequently V wrote to H declaring his intention of abandoning his defence. H thereupon applied to be made a defendant to the suit, in order to protect the house from the plaintiff. Held, that H was entitled to be made a party under ss. 32 and 372 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). *AHMEDBHOY HUBIBHOY v. This decree was confirmed on appeal, and K made liable for the costs of those defendants in respect of whom his claim had been dismissed. Meantime B, an old judgment-creditor of K's father, took out execution against R, and applied for sale of K's rights in the estate, which were accordingly sold, the purchaser being K himself. Subsequently one of M's daughters, a successful defendant in the suit brought by K, took out execution of her decree for costs, and put up K's rights for sale. The sale was opposed, under s. 246, Civil Procedure Code, 1859, by R, a son of B, whose claim was summarily rejected, and K's rights were bought by one A. R then brought a suit within one year to set aside the sale, and to have his own title declared. The suit was against the purchaser and against the representatives of the zur-i-peshgidars; but on the petition of L, one of M's heirs, her name was added to the list of defendants. The first Court gave R a decree, but the lower Appellate Court found that his claim was barred by limitation against L, on the ground of non-possession within twelve years, and in respect of the zur-i-peshgidar, because K's decree had lapsed by delay in execution. Held, that L was interested in the result of the suit, and the lower Courts committed no error in law in admitting her to be a defendant under s. 73, Civil Procedure Code, 1859. *RAM SURUN SINGH v. (XV of 1877), s. 22—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 32—Sebit, right of, to be indemnified. Where relief is originally claimed against a party, who had to be represented by some person, the proper representation of that party subsequently made has not the effect of adding a new "defendant" to the suit. Plaintiffs instituted a suit praying inter alia for a decree for a sum of money against a debutter estate, the defendants to the suit being, among other persons, P, who was impleaded as Receiver of the debutter estate and also in his personal capacity; no one of the defendants was impleaded as representing the debutter estate. Subsequently and after the expiry of the period of limitation prescribed for the suit, the plaint was amended and P was impleaded also as sebit and representing the debutter estate. Held, that this was not adding a new defendant to the suit, and that the claim against the debutter estate was not barred by limitation. *Khem Karan v. the appeal, under s. 559 of the Civil Procedure Code, and, exempting B, gave the plaintiff a decree against A. Held, that, inasmuch as s. 559 does not empower an Appellate Court virtually to make an appeal for an appellant, who has refrained from availing himself of his privileges under the law, by introducing for him other respondents than those he has included in his petition of appeal, and it could not be said that A was "interested in the result of the appeal," as, having the unappealed decree of the Court of first instance behind him, his position was secure, the Appellate Court had improperly made A a respondent to the appeal and given a decree against him. *ATMA RAM v. 92. ———— Practice—Parties to cross-appeals. Suit by the adoptive son of the obligee (deceased) of a hypothecation-bond to recover principal and interest due on the bond against the land comprised in the hypothecation. Defendant No. 1, the obligor of the bond, had executed it as manager of a joint Hindu family, of which defendant No. 2 was a member, and for the rightful purposes of the family. The family subsequently became divided, and the hypothecated property was divided between defendants Nos. 1 and 2. Defendant No. 1 afterwards hypothecated part of his share for a private debt to defendant No. 3, who, having sued on his hypothecation and brought the land to sale in execution, became the purchaser. The District Munsif passed a decree for the plaintiff, against which defendants Nos. 2 and 3 preferred separate appeals, the plaintiff being the sole respondent to each appeal. The District Judge on appeal passed a decree directing that the plaintiff should first proceed against all the property which was not subject to the hypothecation to defendant No. 3, including the share of defendant No. 2. Defendant No. 2 preferred a second appeal joining all the other parties. Held, that, though both defendants Nos. 2 and 3 preferred separate appeals from the original decree, they only made the plaintiff respondent, and defendant No. 3 omitted to make the appellant (defendant No. 2) a party to his appeal, but the relief prayed for in each appeal was that the original decree might be set aside so far as it was in plaintiff's favour and against each appellant. Having regard to the relief claimed, there was no reason to hold that the appellant (defendant No. 2) was a necessary party to the appeal preferred by defendant No. 3. GOPALA v. SAMINATHAYAN. I. and it was arranged that the secured debt should be paid off by the vendees. They failed to do this, but in 1882 they executed a mortgage for the amount due in favour of the other of the two partners, and he thereupon gave a written discharge to the plaintiff, who was found to have been acting in collusion with him to the disadvantage of his partner, the holder of the hypothecation-bond. The latter brought a suit in 1885 upon the hypothecation-bond, and obtained a personal decree against the present plaintiff, who did not appear and defend this suit, the amount of the decree being declared to be charged on the land in the possession of defendants 2 to 4. Meanwhile defendant 1, who was the assignee of the mortgage of 1832, had obtained a decree upon it against defendant 4. This decree not having been executed, he subsequently sued upon the mortgage again, and obtained a decree against defendants 2 to 4. The plaintiff now sued to have the last-mentioned decree set aside and recover the balance of the purchase-money from defendants 2 to 4. The Court of first instance passed a decree for the amount claimed, and declared it to be charged on the land. Defendant 1 preferred an appeal in which defendants 2 to 4 were joined by the Court of First Appeal which dismissed the suit. Held, that defendants 2 to 4 were rightly joined as respondents by the Court under the Civil Procedure Code, s. 559. KANAGAPPA v. On an appeal by the defendant against whom the decree was passed, the Appellate Court directed the defendants exonerated by the first Court to be added as respondents, set aside the decree against the appealing defendant, and passed a decree against the defendants who were added as respondents, as representatives of one S, and ordered the amount so decreed to be recovered from the estate of her (S's) husband. On appeal to the High Court by the defendants, who were thus made liable, on the ground that they were wrongly made parties and no decrees could be passed against them:—Held, that there was nothing wrong in the course adopted by the lower Appellate Court, and by s. 559 of the Code of Civil Procedure the defendants, were rightly made parties. Atma Ram v. 101. Persons interested in the result of the appeal—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 559. In a suit for possession of land the Court of first instance decreed the plaintiff's suit in part against the defendants. Some of the defendants appealed to the High Court without making the other defendants party-respondents. The plaintiffs preferred a cross-objection under s. 561 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The non-appealing defendants were added as respondents by an order of the High Court to the effect that they might be made parties without prejudice to any objection that might be urged on their behalf at the hearing of the appeal. The non-appealing defendants at the hearing of the appeal contended that they were wrongly made parties. Held, that the non-appealing defendants were persons who were interested in the result of the appeal, within the meaning of s. 559 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and that therefore they were rightly made parties. BISHUN CHURN ROY CHOWDHRY v. Where, therefore, such a decree is assigned before any order absolute is made, the assignee takes subject to all the liabilities resulting from the application of the doctrine of lis pendens. Such an assignee, for example, may properly be made a party, under s. 372 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to an appeal from the decree preferred against his assignors, and it is not competent to him to raise any defence, such as a plea of limitation, to the appeal which could not be raised by his assignors. CHUNNI LAL v. There is no express provision for it in the sections relating to execution. Ss. 361 to 372 relate to changes during suit, and speak only of "plaintiffs" and "defendants"—terms which seem to show that they were only intended to apply to proceedings up to final determination by the appellate decree and not to proceedings in execution between the judgment-creditor and judgment-debtor. HIRACHAND HARJIVANDAS v. In a suit brought by the mother of these minors on their behalf against the Collector to set aside the sale, the plaintiffs impleaded also the other previous owners, of whom one was the purchaser at the sale. Two others, in their written statement, pleaded that the purchase had been made in fraud of their rights, and claimed to be still entitled to their shares in the mitta on the ground that the purchaser must be held to have purchased for their benefit (Indian Trusts Act, 1882, s. 90). They further claimed that, should the sale be set aside so far as the plaintiff's interests were concerned, the sale of their interests also should be held to be null and void. Before the suit came on for hearing, the District Judge suo motu ordered that these two defendants should be made plaintiffs in the suit under s. 32 of the Code of Civil Procedure. At the date when this order was made, the claim of these defendants, had they sued to set aside the sale in their own interest, was barred by limitation. Held, that the order was illegal. *KRISHNA v. Thereupon A, claiming as the adopted son, and B, as the daughter of the deceased, made separate applications under s. 355 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882) to be placed on the record. The Subordinate Judge ordered both claimants to be entered on the record as legal representatives of the deceased plaintiff, and proceeded with the suit. At the hearing he found that A's adoption was proved, and that B was not the legal heir of the deceased. He therefore passed a decree for redemption in A's favour. Against this decree B appealed, making A alone the respondent in the appeal. The Appellate Court held that B, and not A, was the heir of the deceased. It therefore passed a decree in B's favour and against A. On second appeal to the High Court:—Held, that the Subordinate Judge could not, under s. 377 of the Code of Civil Procedure, admit on the record both the rival claimants as legal representatives of the deceased plaintiff, or adjudicate by his decree between their rival claims. Held, also, that the Appellate Court ought not to have allowed one plaintiff to appeal against the other, or to have decided the rights of different plaintiffs inter se. *VITHU v. On receipt of the agreement, the Subordinate Judge issued notices to the parties to show cause why the agreement should not be filed, and was, on the day of hearing, informed that the agreement could not be filed owing to plaintiff's death. The agreement was then returned to the conciliator, who entered therein the name of the deceased plaintiff's heir and forwarded it to the Subordinate

Judge. A question having thereupon arisen as to whether the conciliator could enter on the record the name of the heir of the deceased plaintiff:—Held, that, although there is no provision in the Dekkan Agriculturists' Relief Act empowering a conciliator to enter the name of the heir of a party, and Government have not apparently under s. 49 (a) of the Act made any rules regulating the procedure before conciliators in this respect, yet when a Subordinate Judge is seized of a conciliation agreement, there is a proceeding before him under the Act. He should therefore, under s. 74 of the Act, follow the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) in regard to placing on the record the heirs of the deceased parties. *NARAYANDAS SAKHARAM v. died in December 1891, leaving the petitioners, who now applied to have the suit revived in their name. He also alleged that he was an infant at the time the suit was instituted, and was not aware of any of the proceedings till notice of this application. Held, that the application was made in a pending suit, and, though falling within s. 372, Civil Procedure Code, was not time-barred, the right to apply being one which accrues from day to day. *Kedar Nath Dutt v. It is open in such a case to persons, alleging themselves to be owners of the estate, to apply to be made plaintiffs in the place of the Manager, under s. 372 of the Civil Procedure Code. On an application for substitution made under s. 372 of the Civil Procedure Code, it was objected that the application could not be granted, but the Court overruled the objection and ordered the substitution applied for. Held, that the order for substitution was practically the same as an order disallowing objections, and that there was nothing in the terms of s. 588, cl. (21), of the Civil Procedure Code to prevent an appeal from that order. SOURINDRA MOHUN TAGORE v. SIROMONI DEBI (1900).

was placed on the record, under s. 365 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). In July, 1899, Balabai applied to be allowed to prosecute the suit as a pauper. The defendants opposed this, but took no objection to her right to appear as Mahadev's representative. In August, 1899, the first defendant filed his written statement, in which for the first time he raised the question as to Balabai's right to represent the deceased plaintiff Mahadev. The case subsequently came on for hearing, and issues were raised on the pleadings, the first issue being whether Balabai was Mahadev's legal representative. Evidence was taken on all the issues, and the Court found all of them in Balabai's favour, and passed a decree accordingly. The defendant appealed, and the Appellate Court, being of opinion that other issues were unnecessary until the issue as to Balabai's right to represent Mahadev was decided, raised only one issue upon that point. It found that Balabai was not the nearest heir and legal representative of the deceased plaintiff Mahadev, and thereupon it reversed the lower Court's decree and dismissed the suit. On second appeal: Held by CHANDAVARKAR and BATTY, JJ. (ASTON, J., dissenting), reversing the decree and remanding the case for a decision on the merits, that the lower Appellate Court was wrong in going into the question as to Balabai's right to represent the deceased plaintiff Mahadev, and in dismissing the suit on finding that she had no such right. Per CHANDAVARKAR, J.—The Subordinate Judge acted rightly under s. 355 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) in placing Balabai on the record. It was doubtful whether he could afterwards re-open the question and consider it at the hearing under s. 377. But, assuming that he could, he decided it with the other issues. His decision on that point was an order appealable under cl. (18) of s. 588. But the defendant did not appeal against that order. He appealed against the whole decree, and in his appeal he objected to the order. Under s. 591, however, he could, in such case, only object to the order if it affected the decision of the case. It was not shown that the order made by the Subordinate Judge under s. 367 had affected the decision of the case. There is no provision in the Code that, if a person claiming as legal representative of a deceased plaintiff fails to prove that he holds that position, the suit must be dismissed. Inasmuch as the defendant had failed to show that the order under s. 377 had affected the decision, the lower Appellate Court ought not to have reversed the decree of the Court of first instance, *BALABAI v. to recover a debt, and died while the suit was pending, leaving no issue. Within two and-a-half months of his decease, his widow applied, under s. 355 of the Code of Civil Procedure, as the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff, to have her name entered on the record in his place. She was brought on the record accordingly, and adjournments took place, and during several weeks thereafter the suit was partially heard. A defendant then, after a number of witnesses had been examined, presented a petition, purporting to be under ss. 365 and 367 of the Code, stating that it had become evident from the deposition of plaintiff's second witness that plaintiff's husband had left an undivided brother. The petitioner asked the Court to decide the question, under s. 367, as to who was the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff. The District Munsif heard the parties, and (without making an elaborate inquiry) held that the widow was the proper heir (and should produce a succession certificate before judgment should be delivered), but he also directed, in order to prevent future disputes, that the alleged undivided brother should be joined as a party. A petition signifying his consent to be so joined was filed by the last mentioned person. Held, that the order was right. Under s. 365 of the Code, the Court was bound to proceed with the suit after the name of the applicant had been entered on the record in place of the deceased. The right, if any, of the defendant, to object to the widow being added as legal representative in place of her deceased husband, arose on the death of the plaintiff, and the defendant was bound to have used all reasonable diligence in acquainting himself with the state of the family of the deceased, with a view to ascertaining whether his widow was entitled to prosecute the suit as his legal representative. Objection, if raised at all, should have been raised at the earliest opportunity, and failure to object then precluded the defendant from raising it, as he had done, at a late stage of the suit. *Oula v. During the pendency of the suit, and before the decree in it was passed, the mortgagor died. Plaintiff thereupon brought the first defendant on the record, as legal representative, under s. 368 of the Code of Civil Procedure. In December, 1894, a decree for sale was passed, which was never impeached as being fraudulent or collusive. As a fact, first defendant was not the sole legal representative of the mortgagor, who left two other sons and three daughters. The second son was, at a date subsequent to the decree, assessed to pay income-tax, for arrears of which the mortgaged property was sold (under the Revenue Recovery Act) and purchased by second defendant in 1896. In 1897 the mortgaged property was sold in execution of the decree in plaintiff's suit on the mortgage, and plaintiff became the purchaser, the sale being confirmed soon after, and plaintiff obtaining a sale certificate which purported to convey the whole of the mortgaged property to him, and obtaining delivery of the property, under s. 318 of the Code of Civil Procedure, in 1898. Plaintiff was subsequently dispossessed by defendants Nos. 2 to 5, and brought the present suit to recover possession of the property. Held, that the sale of the property for arrears of income-tax affected only the share of the second son, and not the shares of the other co-heirs; and that, in consequence, the whole of the mortgaged property had not passed to the second defendant under that sale. Held, also, that the second defendant, by his purchase, had acquired only the equity of redemption in respect of the second son's share in the mortgaged property. The effect of s. 30 of the Income Tax Act is not to convert income-tax into an arrear of land-revenue, due in respect of the land which may be brought to sale for the realization of the income-tax, but merely to extend the procedure prescribed by the Revenue Recovery Act to the recovery of arrears of income-tax. Held, further, that the share of the second son was bound by the decree in the mortgage suit, notwithstanding that the second son was not joined in that suit as one of the legal representatives of the deceased mortgagor. Where a defendant in a suit dies, and the plaintiff, under s. 368 of the Code of Civil Procedure, brings a person on the record, whom he alleges to be the legal representative of the deceased defendant, such person sufficiently represents the estate of the deceased for the purposes of the suit, and, in the absence of fraud or collusion, the decree passed in the suit will bind the estate. Held, lastly, that the sale in execution of plaintiff's decree subsequently to the second defendant's purchase in the revenue sale extinguished second defendant's equity of redemption. *KADIR MOHIDEEN MARAKKAYAR v. In the meantime, in a suit instituted by the beneficiaries against the trustees, a decree had been passed on the 5th April 1898, declaring that the beneficiaries were entitled to possession of the trust estate from the 13th April and directing the trustees to make over possession to them. This decree further directed that proper conveyances should be executed by the trustees when required. On the 5th July 1898, the beneficiaries applied for substitution of their names in the place of the trustees in the appeal filed on the 18th April. Held, that, though the trustees were directed to execute proper conveyances when required, yet, having regard to the direction as to delivery of possession, the decree of the 5th April must be taken to have divested the property out of the trustees and vested it in the beneficiaries. The trustees therefore had not any estate left in them on the 18th April sufficient to justify their being appellants. The Court heard and decided the appeal. Subsequently, the deceased appellant's son applied that his name should be placed on the record, and that the appeal should be re-heard. The lower Appellate Court rejected this application. Held, that, under the circumstances, and having regard to s. 571 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882), the decree of the lower Appellate Court was a nullity, and that, as the legal representative of the appellant applied within the prescribed period to have his name entered on the record, the Court was bound, under s. 365 of the Civil Procedure Code, to enter his name. In not doing so, the lower Court had failed to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it by law. —Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), ss. 368, 582. Procedure analogous to that laid down in s. 368 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X) of 1877 in respect of the death of a defendant must be applied in the case of the death of a respondent. Where therefore a respondent dies during the pendency of an appeal, it is for the appellant to take the initiative, and he is at liberty to select one or more persons to defend the appeal; and no person other than the person so selected has a right to force himself into the proceedings and to claim to have his name entered as representative of the deceased respondent against the appellant's consent. Persons so introduced on the record may or may not be the real representatives of the deceased respondent; but the merits of their claim to be such, on the ground of any right or status, such as that of adoption, is immaterial to the determination of the appeal. *LAJSMIBAI v. 38. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 365, 368, and 582—Deceased sole respondent—Practice. Under s. 388 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882), a plaintiff may have the representatives of a deceased sole defendant placed on the record so that he may continue his suit against them, but there is no section which allows the representatives of a sole defendant who has died to be placed on the record at their own request. Consequently s. 582 gives no authority to a Civil Court to place on the record at their own request the representatives of a deceased sole respondent. Such an application cannot be entertained. BAI JAVER v. HATHISING.

had purchased at execution sales the rights and interests of the plaintiff in portions of the landed estate of the family. Held, that such persons not being affected by that decree, the Court could not make any order respecting their claims, and they had been unnecessarily made parties to the appeal. RADHA KISHEN MAN v. BACHAMAN I. L. R. 3 All. 118

41. ——— Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 368, 369, and 372—Death of a respondent pending appeal—Right of assignee of his interest to be substituted in his place. At an auction-sale held in execution of a decree passed against one G A, certain property put up for sale was purchased by one K M, the husband of the opponent. Subsequently K A, the brother of G A, brought a suit against the opponent to establish his right to the property purchased by the opponent's husband. On the 17th February 1882, he obtained a decree declaring that he (K A) was entitled to a half share of the property in dispute, and an order was made that he should have joint possession with the opponent of one moiety of the property. On the termination of the above suit, which had been brought by K A, in forma pauperis, he was required to pay the Court fees. For that purpose he procured an advance of Rs 200 from the applicant on the security of the moiety of the property which was awarded to him by the decree. He passed a deed of sale to the applicant, on the understanding that the property should be reconveyed to him by the applicant on the repayment of the advance with interest. In the meantime cross appeals were filed against the above-mentioned decree passed in favour of K A, and at the hearing of the appeal the lower Appellate Court varied the decree of the Subordinate Judge, holding that K A was entitled to the possession of the property as sought for. From this decree the opponent preferred a second appeal to the High Court, which, at the time of this application, was still pending. Before the hearing of the appeal, K A died and the applicant thereupon applied to have his name placed on the record as respondent. Held, that the applicant was entitled to be made a party. The analogy of s. 368 is to be extended generally to appeals, and the party appealing may choose his own respondent as representative of deceased. The more specific rule prescribed in that section must prevail in the cases to which it is exactly applicable, over the more general rule in s. 372. But the rule in s. 368 may well be intended for the case in which the death, and death only, of the defendant constitutes the change of circumstances for which it was thought necessary to provide; but where there has been not only the death of the respondent but an alleged prior conveyance to him of the property awarded by the decree appealed against, there is a fact in addition to the fact contemplated by s. 368, and the rule in s. 372, being alone sufficiently inclusive, must apply. An appellant may determine—who shall be respondent, but not that any particular person shall not be a respondent. The choice of respondents made by the appellant may be defective through ignorance or fraud, and the real representative of the decree-holder cannot justly be refused an opportunity of maintaining the decision which it is sought to upset. *RAJARAM BHAGVAT v. Subsequently K applied to be substituted as respondent, alleging that he and not H was the legal representative of the plaintiff. The Court passed an order making K a joint respondent with H. To this H objected, but he did not appeal from the order. Ultimately the Court dismissed the appeal, and passed a decree that the money claimed in the suit was payable to the two respondents. Held, that s. 32 of the Civil Procedure Code did not apply to the case so as to authorize the Court below to add K as a respondent; that the only other section under which he might possibly have been brought in was s. 365; that even assuming s. 365 to apply to such a case, the Court had no power to make K a respondent jointly with H, but should have taken one or the other of the courses specified in s. 367, so as to determine who was the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff; and that the course adopted by the Court was an exceedingly inconvenient one, which ought not to have been taken, even if the Court had power under the Code to take it. The "questions involved in the suit," referred to in the second paragraph of s. 32 of the Civil Procedure Code, are questions between the plaintiff and the defendant, and not questions which may arise between co-defendants or co-plaintiffs inter se. The section does not apply to questions which are not involved in the suit, but crop up incidentally during the pendency of an appeal, such as the question whether one person or another is the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff-respondent. *HAR NARAIN SINGH v. 45. ———— Civil Procedure Code, ss. 365, 366, 367, 368, 582, 587—Death of plaintiff-respondent pending appeal—Substitution of alleged legal representative on her own application—Application by defendants-appellants to substitute another person as true legal representative—Power of Court to determine which of such persons is the true legal representative. In a suit for declaration of title to, and for possession of, a share in alleged ancestral property, with mesne profits, the plaintiff obtained a decree in the lower Appellate Court from which the defendants appealed to the High Court. Pending the appeal, the plaintiff died childless, and, on her application, his widow was substituted for him as respondent. Subsequently the defendants-appellants applied to the High Court to have the deceased's father brought upon the record as respondent alleging that he, and not the widow, was the deceased's legal representative and solely entitled to be placed on the record as such. The father made no objection to the proposed substitution. It was common ground that either the father alone or the widow alone was the deceased plaintiff-respondent's true legal representative. Held, by the Full Bench (MAHOMED, J., dissenting), that, having regard to the words, "as nearly as may be" and "as far as may be" in s. 582 of the Civil Procedure Code, ss. 365, 366, and 367 might be applied, at all events analogically, to the case, so as to enable the real legal representative of the deceased plaintiff-respondent to be ascertained and brought upon the record; that the latter portion of s. 582 did not limit the earlier words of the section so as to make s. 368 the only provision applicable to the case; that a Court of record must have an inherent power to ascertain whether or not it has before it the proper parties to an appeal if the question be substantially raised; and that therefore the Court could and should, either before or at the hearing of the appeal, ascertain and determine, for the purposes of the prosecution of the appeal, the preliminary question whether the father or the widow was the legal representative of the deceased, and should act accordingly. Held, also, by the Full Bench (MAHMOOD, J., dissenting), that s. 32 of the Code did not apply to the case, and that, if it did apply, it would be the duty of the Court to decide whether the father or the widow was the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff-respondent. Held, by MAHMOOD, J. (contra), that the effect of s. 582 read with s. 587 was to place the defendants-appellants in the position of plaintiffs and the deceased respondent in that of a defendant for the purposes of array of parties; that consequently the provisions of ss. 363, 364, 365, 366, and 367 had no application; that, applying s. 368, the Court was bound to implead the person named by the defendants-appellants as a respondent to the appeal; that, applying s. 32, the widow occupied a position which gave her a sufficient prima facie status to be impleaded as respondent; and that, as there existed no authority in the Court allowing the Court to hold an enquiry whether the father or the widow was the true legal representative of the deceased plaintiff-respondent, the Court should bring both upon the record as respondents and proceed to decide the appeal after hearing both. *Narain Dass v. In some cases s. 34 would not prevent even a defendant from objecting to the want of a proper party after the first hearing,—e.g., where, after the first hearing and before decree, a co-parcener or remainder-man or reversioner is born, or where a woman (who is a party) is married to a man who is not a party to the suit. The objection did not exist at or before the first hearing, and therefore could not have been made or waived by the defendant; and if he made it at the earliest opportunity after it came into existence, he would have satisfied the spirit of s. 34. MODHE v. 1. FORM OF PARTITION.

1. ———— Imperfect partition—Sanction to partition—Act XIX of 1853—Partition depending on consent of parties. Courts in their judgments should bear in mind the very distinct character of the several kinds of partition, and until it has been ascertained with what description of partition they have to deal, the question of the sufficiency of the sanction or confirmation given to it cannot be determined. In certain cases the Commissioner's sanction is required, in others that of the Collector. There are partitions known as imperfect partitions depending upon the conduct of the parties, and effected from first to last only with their consent. MUHUMDEE BEG v. HOSSEIN ALI.

2 N. W. 26

2. ———— Informal partition—Partition by finding of Court in suit. Where plaintiff sued for certain land in dispute as his own, and the lower Court found that it was his share, and that defendant held his separately, no further formal partition was held to be necessary. MODHOOSOODUN CHATTERJEE v. JUDDOOPUTTY CHUCKERBUTTY.

9 W. R. 115

3. ———— Declaration of title to continue to enjoy separate possession of land—Suit for partition. The plaintiffs, having obtained a declaration of title to continue to enjoy separate possession of certain lands, sued the former defendants again for partition of the same lands. Held, that the suit was unnecessary, and should be dismissed. ANDI v. THATHA. I. L. R. 10 Mad. 347

2. PRIVATE PARTITION.

1. ———— Effect of private partition—Effect of, on right of pre-emption. A private partition, though not sanctioned by official authority will, if full and final as among the parties to it, have the same effect as the most formal partition on the right of pre-emption. GOPAL SAHI v. OJODHEA PERSHAD . . . 2 W. R. 47

2. ———— Effect of, on survey proceedings. A private partition of a joint estate is not inconsistent with subsequent survey proceedings, and does not take away their legal effect. HUNOONMAN CHOWBAY v. BINDHOO TORABA.
10 W. R. 336

3. ———— Effect of, on parties—Government and purchasers at revenue sale. A private butwarra, though not binding against the Government or against a purchaser at a sale for arrears of Government revenue, who derives his title directly from Government, is binding as between the parties to the butwarra and persons claiming title under them. TRIPOORAH SOONDAREE CHOWDHRAINEE v. KALI CHUNDRA ROY CHOWDHRY
18 W. R. 327

4. ———— Right to subsequent partition under Act XIX of 1814. Where an estate was divided by private agreement more than fifty years ago, and the division was subsequently maintained in a judicial decision, since which the co-sharers had for many years exercised rights of ownership independently of each other, a butwarra of the whole estate cannot afterwards be demanded, even though a regular separation of one share has been intermediately obtained by a suit in a Civil Court. PERMESSUR DUTT SAHEE v. AUDH SAHAJEE . . . 5 W. R. 40

5. ———— Beng. Reg. XIX of 1814, s. 30. A private partition is no bar to proceedings in the Revenue Courts under s. 30 of Regulation XIX of 1814. JOYNATH ROY v. LALL BAHADUR SINGH

I. L. R. 8 Calc. 126; 10 C. L. R. 146

6. ———— Beng. Reg. XIX of 1814, s. 30—Power of Collector—Jurisdiction of Civil Court. It is not correct to say that, under s. 30 of Regulation XIX of 1814, the Collector is not at liberty to make any partition where the owners have already partitioned the lands amongst themselves. The true meaning of the section is that the Collector must be guided by the nature of the estate in applying the rules contained in the preceding sections of the Regulation; and that, where estates are not held in common tenancy, only a portion of those rules will apply. If the parties have divided the lands without agreeing as to the shares of the Government revenue to be paid by them, respectively, all the Collector has to do, when a partition has been applied for, is to make an assignment of the revenue in proportion to the interest of each shareholder. If they have divided the lands and arranged amongst themselves as to the portion of the Government revenue which each is to pay, it is open to the

Collector to accept or reject that arrangement. The Civil Court has nothing to do with the matter. AJOODHIA LALL v. GUMANI LALL 2 C. L. R. 134

7. _____ N.-W. Provinces Land Revenue Act (XIX of 1873), s. 125. S. 125 of Act XIX of 1873 does not apply to a partition by private agreement. Gaya Singh v. Udit Singh, I. L. R. 13 All. 396, referred to. Ram Prasad v. Dina Kuar, I. L. R. 2 All. 515, dissented from by KNOX AND BANERJI, JJ. KASHI PRASAD v. KEDAR NATH SAHU . I. L. R. 20 All. 219

8. _____ Family arrangement among co-sharers—Partition among shareholders in zamindari villages—Construction of agreement—Custom. On a dispute among proprietors of shares in zamindari villages as to the respective amounts of the holdings till then undivided to which they were entitled, a compromise made by their common ancestor's five sons, of whom the plaintiff's father was the eldest, had been filed in proceedings prior to this suit. This was construed to have assigned to the plaintiff's father an additional share, according to a custom recorded in the khewat at settlement, in virtue of which the eldest brother was entitled to a share greater than that allotted to the others,—a right termed "hak hetharnsi." MANICK CHAND v. HIRA LAL. I. L. R. 20 Calc. 45

9. _____ Patni of separate share—Subsequent partition under Beng. Act VIII of 1876, s. 128. The plaintiffs were co-sharers in a certain estate, T being another co-sharer. In 1818 a private partition took place between the co-sharers in the course of which certain specific lands were allotted to T in severalty, the rest remaining undivided. T granted a patni lease of her share to third parties who were thenceforth in possession; and subsequently there was a partition of the whole estate by the Collector under Bengal Act VIII of 1876, in the course of which the specific lands allotted to T in the private partition were allotted to the plaintiffs, who brought against the tenants of the land suits for rent to which they made the patnidars defendants. Held, that the patnidars were properly made parties to the suits in order to try the question of the right to receive the rent as between the plaintiffs and the patnidars. Kashee Ram Dass v. Sham Mohinee, 23 W. R. 227; Ahameddeen v. Girish Chunder Shamunt, I. L. R. 4 Calc. 350; and Madan Mohan Lal v. Holloway, I. L. R. 12 Calc. 555, referred to. Held, also, that, assuming that the patnidars were not parties to the partition-proceedings by the Collector, they were entitled to retain possession of the lands allotted to their lessor T in the private partition, by which partition the plaintiffs were bound, notwithstanding the subsequent partition by the Collector. Ahmedoolah v. Ashruff Hossein, 13 W. R. 447; Obhoy Churn Sircar v. Huri Nath Roy, I. L. R. 8 Calc. 72; and Juggessur Doyal Singh v. Bissessur Pershad, 12 C. L. R. 281, approved. Byjnath Lal v. Ramodeen

PARTITION—contd.*2. PRIVATE PARTITION—concl'd.

Chowdhry, L. R. 1 I. A. 106, distinguished. S. 128 of Bengal Act XIII of 1876 does not apply to a case in which there has been a prior private partition, the estate in such a case not being "held in common tenancy" within the meaning of that section. HRIDOY NATH SHAHA v. MOHOBUTNESSA BIBEE. I. L. R. Calc. 285

10. _____ Stamp Act (II of 1899), s. 2, cl. 15—Undivided brothers—Documents purporting to be lists of properties—Each document signed by the brothers excepting the one retaining it—Each document formed the title of the brother retaining it with respect to his share—Instrument of partition—Stamp. Four undivided brothers made four lists of the family property. Each list was signed by three brothers and not by the fourth, who retained it. A question having arisen whether the list constituted a partition between the brothers and required to be stamped as such under the Stamp Act (II of 1899):—Held, that the four documents formed, when read together, an instrument of partition within the meaning of s. 2, clause 15 of the Stamp Act (II of 1899). Each document formed the title of the brother retaining it against the other three brothers with regard to the property, which came to his share, when the partition was effected. GANPAT v. SUPDU (1908) . I. L. R. 32 Bom. 509

3. RIGHT TO PARTITION.*(a) GENERAL CASES.

1. _____ Co-sharers—Effect of partition. In cases of joint ownership each party has a right to demand and enforce partition. A shareholder of a patni talukh can claim and enforce a partition of such patni talukh as against his co-sharers, but such partition would not affect the liabilities of the parties under their contract with the zamindar. SHAMASUNDARI DEBI v. JARDINE, SKINNER & CO. 3 B. L. R. Ap. 120 : 12 W. R. 160

2. _____ Joint owners in right of worship of idol—Performance of worship by turns. The reasons for which one of several joint owners is entitled to a partition of the joint property apply also to the case of a joint right of performing the worship of an idol. The joint owners of such a right are entitled to perform their worship by turns. MITTA KUNTH AUDHICARRY v. NEERUNJEN AUDHICARRY . 14 B. L. R. 166 : 22 W. R. 437

MANCHARAM v. PRANSHANKAR.

I. L. R. 6 Bom. 298

3. _____ Patnidars—Right to enforce partition—Patnidar of undivided share. One patnidar of an undivided share of a zamindari held by joint proprietors has no right to sue to enforce partition against another patnidar where there is no contract between the two, or between the patnidar and his zamindar, to divide. RIDAI NATH SANDYAL v. ISWAR CHANDRA SAHA.

4 B. L. R. Ap. 57 note

4. ——— Co-parceners—Joint possession—Suit by subordinate tenure-holder for partition against superior landlord. Joint possession alone is not a sufficient ground for compelling a partition. In order that persons may be co-parceners, and so have a right to partition, not only must they be in joint possession, but that joint possession must be founded on the same title. A subordinate tenure-holder therefore has no right of partition as against his superior landlord. Ridai Nath Sandyal v. Iswar Chandra Saha, 4 B. L. R. App. 57 note, and Parbati Churn Deb v. Ainuddeen, I. L. R. 7 Calc. 577; 9 C. L. R. 170, referred to. The plaintiffs were proprietors of a 12-anna share and dar-talukdars of the other 4-anna share of talukh A, which consisted of a 7½-anna share of so much of the lands of three villages D, B and T as appertained to an estate in the Collectorate No. 23. Estate No. 23 with three other estates represented fractional shares in three parganas comprising about 500 villages. No partition had been made of these parganas, but by private arrangement certain lands in the village had been assigned to one estate, and certain other lands to another, some lands being kept joint and common to all four estates. In estate No. 23 there was another permanent tenure S, a talukh consisting of lands not only in the three villages D, B and T, but in nine others: of this talukh a 2-anna share belonged to L, one of the zamindars of estate No. 23, and a 7½-anna share of the remaining 14-anna share was held under the plaintiff. In a suit against L for partition of such of the lands of talukh A as appertained to estate No. 23 and were separate from the other estates, to which the other zamindars of estate No. 23 were made parties:—Held, assuming the plaintiffs were entitled to partition at all, that the suit would lie as regards the lands specified as belonging to estate No. 23 without reference to the lands held in common as belonging to all the four estates. Hari Das Sanyal v. Pran Nath Sanyal, I. L. R. 12 Calc. 565, and Padmamani Dasi v. Jagadamba Dasi, 6 B. L. R. 134, referred to. MAKUNDA LAL PAL CHOWDHRY v. LEHURAUX.

5. ——— Estate held in separate possession—Suit by one of several shareholders—Beng. Reg. XIX of 1814, s. 39. When an estate is held in separate possession, a batwara of the whole for the purpose of apportioning land according to the jummas of the shareholders, who had severally entered into engagements with the Government, cannot be insisted upon by one of the proprietors under s. 30, Regulation XIX of 1814. BUJRUNGEE LALL v. VELAET HOSSEIN KHAN. 5 W. R. 186

6. ——— Separate holders under private partition—Right to have partition by Collector after private arrangement and disagreement. Parties holding separate portions of an estate according to a private arrangement previously made are not in a condition to apply to the Collector for a

7. ——— Joint proprietors—Joint lands, each proprietor getting rent separately. Lands held in joint possession, each proprietor receiving his proportion of the rent according to his interest in the land, cannot be divided under the batwara laws. DOORGA KANT LAHOORY v. RADHA MOHUN GOOHO NEOGY. 7 W. R. 51

8. ——— Division between zamindars—Beng. Reg. XIX of 1814. One of the co-sharers of a joint estate suing conjointly with the others would, under Regulation XIX of 1814, be entitled to a separation of a mouzah from the rest of the zamindari, and an assessment upon it of a proper proportion of the total jumma, and having done this he would alone be entitled to have an order for partition of that mouzah as between himself and his co-sharers therein. If the zamindari which the plaintiff seeks to have divided is so intermixed with the neighbouring zamindaris that the line of boundary cannot be reasonably identified, he cannot call upon the Collector to make a new line. But if the Collector has the means of ascertaining where the boundary lies, he is bound to carry out a partition. BHURRUT THAKOOR v. MURTAZA. 21 W. R. 225

9. ——— Zamindars—Separate liability for payment of revenue—Arrangement for separate payment—Assent to, by maafidar. A partition was made by the zamindars of their respective holdings and of their joint liability for the Government revenue, and though this partition was not carried out by the Revenue Court, but was acted upon by the zamindars, and the assignee of Government revenue also consented to such partition by accepting revenue from individual zamindars, and by holding them to be individually responsible for the amount due in respect of their several holdings:—Held, that there was nothing to prevent the maafidar, who is the assignee of Government revenue, from assenting to any arrangement which the zamindars may make for the conversion of their joint into separate liability. SURNOMOYEE v. RAMCHURN SINGH. 3 Agra 251

10. ——— Purchaser of specific portion of estate—Right to partition of whole estate. The purchaser of a specific portion of the land of an estate separately registered with a separate jumma under s. 11, Act XI of 1859, is not entitled to claim a batwara of the whole estate, and to obtain a share of the whole land proportioned to the amount of the sudder jumma paid by him. *FUKEER CHUNDER SHAHA v. 14. ——— Lakhiraj tenure—Beng. Reg. 19. ——— Partition between owners of separate shares in permanently-settled estate—Effect of, as against Government. In the year 1226 F. (1819) a fourteen-anna eight-gunda share of a certain mouzah was permanently settled. The remaining one-anna twelve-gunda share was permanently settled in 1861. This share was sold for arrears of Government revenue in 1873, and purchased by the plaintiff, who subsequently applied to the Collector for partition under the Batwarra Act. The Collector refused to partition, upon the ground that the Act was not applicable to the partition of a mouzah held jointly by the proprietors of two separate estates. The plaintiff then brought the present suit, to which he made the Collector a party, to obtain a declaration that he was entitled to have his share separated from the 14-anna 8-gunda share by metes and bounds, and also for a decree directing a partition of the whole mouzah into two parts. Held, that, so far as the plaintiff on the one hand and the owners of the fourteen-anna eight-gunda share on the other were concerned, the mouzah could be partitioned, but that such partition would not be binding upon the Government unless by consent. AJOODHYA PERSAD v. to enable him the more easily to recover his share of the rent, although he cannot, without the consent of Government, put an end to his joint liability for the entire quit-rent. It is not necessary for the plaintiff in such suit to implead any raiyat whose rights are unquestioned. The partition in such a case must be carried out by the Collector after a preliminary decree, and, when partition is carried out by the Collector, a final decree should be passed *RAMANUJA AYYANGAR v. 21. ———— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 265—Revenue-paying estate—Beng. Act VIII of 1876, Part II, and s. 4, cls. (8) and (9)—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 265. In 1851 an estate was brought under butwarra under the provisions of Regulation XIX of 1814. At such butwarra a portion of the estate being covered with water and unfit for cultivation was not divided, but left joint amongst all the co-sharers, the land-revenue payable on account of the whole estate being apportioned amongst the several estates into which the portion divided was split up. Subsequently, on the portion remaining joint becoming dry and fit for cultivation, an application was made by one of the co-sharers to the Collector to partition the same under the provisions of Bengal Act VIII of 1876, but that officer refused to do so, on the ground that the land "did not bear an assessed revenue and was not shown in the towzi." In a suit brought under the above circumstances to compel the Collector to make the partition and in the alternative to have it made by the Civil Court:—Held, that, though the reason given by the Collector for refusing was an erroneous one, he was not bound to make the partition under the provisions of Bengal Act VIII of 1876, as the land in suit was not liable for the payment of one and the same demand of land revenue and was therefore not a joint undivided estate within the terms of s. 4, cl. (9), of that Act. Held, also, that the word "estate," as used in s. 265 of the Civil Procedure Code, must not be construed in the same limited and defective sense in which it is used in Act VIII of 1876, but must be taken to be there used in its ordinary signification, and that consequently the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for partition under the provisions of that section. *Chundernath Nundy v. R bought the interest of H in the land at a Court-sale, and let to H and V, who, failing to pay rent, were sued by R, who got a decree for possession. This decree was transferred for execution to the Collector, who sold the land and rateably distributed the proceeds except to V, who declined to take the amount tendered as his share. The plaintiff sued V and the purchasers under R's decree to recover his mortgage-debt by a sale of the property mortgaged to him. Held, that R's decree, not being for partition of the family property or for the separate possession of a share, was not one contemplated by s. 265 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The proceedings of the Collector were without jurisdiction, and the plaintiff was entitled to ignore them and assert his claim under the mortgage. NARAYAN NAGARKAR v. VITHU JAKHOJI . . . I. L. This ruling having always been acted on in the Madras Presidency:—Held, by the Full Bench, that a different construction should not, under these circumstances, be placed on s. 265 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882. *Mutu v. 25. ———— Suit for partition by person in possession making a false claim. B, a childless Hindu and a Brahman, adopted X, his sister's son, and subsequently, apprehending that the adoption was invalid, executed a will by which he left his estate to X. After B's death, X obtained possession, and remained in possession of the estate till his death, which occurred before he had attained majority. After this, joint possession of the estate was obtained by P and S, two widows of B, who set up a right of inheritance from X as being in the position of mothers to him, in consequence of his adoption by their deceased husband. In a suit brought by S against P for partition of the estate:—Held, that, inasmuch as the parties had set up a false claim to the estate, and had no estate in law which they could divide, the suit for partition was not maintainable merely by reason of the fact that they were in possession. *Armory v. The plaintiffs alleged that the land being held ijmali, although he and the defendants collected separately from the tenants their respective shares of the rent, difficulty and inconvenience had arisen in the management of the property, and he therefore sued to have his ten annas share of the land divided by metes and bounds from the six annas share of the patnidars, the land of the entire estate remaining liable as before for the entire amount of the Government revenue payable in respect of it. Held, by the Full Bench, that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for partition. HEMADRI NATH KHAN V. A mokurari lease, which was by its terms to become null and void on default of payment of three instalments of the mokurari rent, as also upon alienation by the *mokurari*dar, was not such a permanent or transferable interest as would ensure that any division that might be effected would be of enduring effect. BEFIN BEHARI MITTER V. The opposite party did not appear in the Revenue Court, but on the 20th of April 1904 instituted a suit in a Civil Court against the applicants for partition asking for a declaration of their exclusive possession over part of the property, the subject-matter of the defendants' application for partition in the Revenue Court. Held, that the plaintiffs' suit was not maintainable, *Muhammad Sadig v. 39. ——— Parties—Partition suit—Talukdars and dar-talukdars—Allowing persons not made parties to watch proceedings—Practice. In a suit for partition persons holding interests of an inferior degree are not necessary parties. A person holding a permanent interest, though an interest of an inferior grade, may bring a suit for partition as against persons, who hold interests of a superior grade. A patnidar may bring a suit for partition against his co-patnidars or against dar-patnidars under his co-patnidars; in the latter case the co-patnidars must be made parties. The question as to who are necessary and who are proper parties in a partition suit discussed. In the present suit, held, that the dar-talukdars should not be made parties as the suit would become highly complicated thereby. The course adopted in the lower Court, namely, of allowing the dar-talukdars to watch the partition proceedings, though not made parties, approved. *UPENDRA CHANDRA SINGHA ROY v. 1. ——— Procedure—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 396. Per PONTIFEX, J. (FIELD J. doubting)—In a suit for partition, it is competent to the Court, in its preliminary decree, to appoint any one person whom it thinks fit to be a Commissioner to make the partition under s. 396 of the Civil Procedure Code. The section uses the word "Commissioners," but it is not necessary for the purposes of partition that there should be more than one Commissioner, and by force of the General Clauses Act the word "Commissioners" may be read in the singular number. The intention of s. 396 is that upon the first hearing of a suit, the Court shall determine whether the plaintiff is entitled to a partition, and shall ascertain who the several persons entitled in the property are, and shall direct by a preliminary decree or order that Commissioners be appointed to make the partition. GYAN CHUNDER SEN v. DURGA CHURN SEN I. L. R. 7 Calc. 318 : 8 C. L. R. 415

2. ——— Suit for partition of immoveable property—Commissioner appointed to make partition—Court not competent to modify Commissioner's report. Where in a suit for partition of immoveable property a Commissioner has been appointed under s. 396 of the Code of Civil Procedure to ascertain the shares of the parties, the Court when passing its final decree, must either accept or reject the report of the Commissioner in toto, but is not competent to modify it. *Shah Muhammad Khan v. 3. ——— Commission to make partition—Issue of commission to one person only. A Court issuing under s. 396 of the Code of Civil Procedure a commission to make partition of immoveable property not paying revenue to Government, cannot legally issue such commission to one commissioner only. Per RICHARDS, J.—But there is nothing to prevent the parties to partition proceedings agreeing that one commissioner only should

5. JURISDICTION OF CIVIL COURT IN SUITS RESPECTING PARTITION.

1. ——— Suit to set aside partition—Beng. Reg. XIX of 1814—Minor, right of.* A partition by the Collector under Regulation XIX of 1814, if consented to by all the parties, is final, and cannot be set aside by any party in the Civil Court; but where one of the parties was a minor at the time of partition, the Court remanded the suit for an enquiry whether his guardian acted in the partition proceedings bonâ fide, and with a due regard to the interests of the minor. HARI PRASAD JHA v. MADDAN MOHAN THAKUR

2. ——— Suit for declaration of right to share larger than that allotted—Beng. Reg. XIX of 1814.* Where a partition of an estate under Regulation XIX of 1814 has been carried out, and confirmed by the revenue authorities, it seems that one shareholder cannot maintain a suit in the Civil Court to have it declared that he is entitled to a share larger than he claimed in the partition proceedings. *RAMSAHAYA SINGH v. 2 B. L. R. Ap. 40

3. ——— Suit for larger share than that allotted by Collector—Beng. Reg. XIX of 1814, ss. 1 and 20, cl. 2.* S. 20, Regulation XIX of 1814, which says, "the determination of the Board of Revenue or Board of Commissioners on the paper of partition shall be final," refers to those questions only which can be legally determined by the revenue authorities, and will not prevent a regular suit being instituted to establish a right and title to the land, which a party has lost by a butwarra, notwithstanding that the plaintiff may have failed to make his objection before the Collector within fifteen days as required by cl. 2, s. 4, Regulation XIX of 1814. There is nothing in the butwarra law or in any other Regulation to prevent the Civil Court from entertaining a suit for a declaration of the plaintiff's right to a larger share than that recorded in his name in the paper of partition. Where a butwarra had been made, and the plaintiff had had a specific share allotted to him, but which share was less than his proper share in the estate, and the plaintiff brought his suit against the co-sharers generally, without specifying in whose share the quantity he had lost was included:—Held, that the Court could, in such suit, declare the plaintiff's title to the same, treating him as a shareholder to that extent only in the pottah in which it may have been included. *SPENCER v. 7. ——— Dispute with regard to shares—Parties. Where two or more proprietors of a joint estate held in common tenancy, desirous of having separate possession of their respective shares, apply each and all to have that estate divided in exactly the same proportionate shares, and no other sharers oppose the butwarra, the Collector may at once comply with the application; and if no objection is raised when the parties have opportunity of raising objection, the shares cannot again be re-united by a suit in a Civil Court. But if the Collector has judicial notice of a dispute with regard to a share, it is questionable whether he has jurisdiction to make a partition of that share. 11. ————— Partition of mehal—Application by co-sharer for partition—Notice by Collector to other co-sharers to state objections upon a specified day—Objection raised after day specified by original applicant—Question of title—Distribution of land—Jurisdiction—Civil and Revenue Courts—Act XIX of 1873, ss. 111, 112, 113, 131, 132, 241 (f)—Civil Procedure Code, s. 11. Reading together ss. 111, 112, and 113 of the North-Western Provinces Land Revenue Act (XIX of 1873), as they must be read, the objection contemplated in each of them is an objection to be made by the person upon whom the notice required by s. 111 is to be served, i.e., a person who is a co-sharer in possession, and who has not joined in the application for partition. So far as ss. 111, 112, 113, 114, and 115 are concerned, a Civil Court is the Court which has jurisdiction to adjudicate upon questions of title or proprietary right, either in an original suit in cases in which the Assistant Collector or Collector does not proceed to inquire into the merits of an objection raising such a question under s. 113, or on appeal in those cases in which the Assistant Collector or Collector does decide upon such questions raised by an objection made under s. 112. The remaining sections relating to partition do not provide for or bar the jurisdiction of the Civil Court to adjudicate upon questions of title which may arise in partition-proceedings or on the partition after the time specified in the notice published under s. 111. S. 132 is not to be read as making the Commissioner the Court of Appeal from the Assistant Collector or the Collector upon such questions, nor does s. 241 (f) bar the jurisdiction of the Civil Court to adjudicate upon them. Where, therefore, after the day specified in the notice published by the Assistant Collector under s. 111, and after an Amin had made an apportionment of lands among the co-sharers of the mehal, the original applicants for partition raised for the first time an objection involving a question of title of proprietary right, and this objection was disallowed by the Assistant Collector and the partition made and confirmed by the Collector under s. 131:—Held, that the objection was not one within the meaning of s. 13, that the remedy of the objectors was not an appeal from the Collector's decision under s. 132, and that a suit by them in the Civil Court to establish their title to the land allotted to other co-sharers was not barred by s. 241 (f), and, with reference to s. 11 of the Civil Procedure Code, was maintainable. Habibullah v. The lower Appellate Court decreed partition not only of the plaintiff's share but also of the shares of the defendants inter se, though such partition was not asked for. Held, that the lower Appellate Court had no jurisdiction to partition as amongst the defendants the residue of the property left after the partitioning off of the plaintiff's share. HIKMAT ALI v. 19. — Suit for partition of lands in different estates—Assam Land and Revenue Regulation (I of 1886), s. 154, cl. (e) and s. 96. In a suit for partition, without division of revenue, of certain lands held jointly by the parties in four different estates governed by the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation (I of 1886):—Held, that, although the decision asked for may not include all the lands of each of the four estates, still such division would result in a division of each of those estates, the lands left out forming one portion and the lands sought to be divided forming another. The suit therefore was one for an "imperfect partition" within the definition in s. 96 of the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation, and s. 154, cl. A Civil Court therefore has jurisdiction to decree partition in such a case; and a suit for possession, after partition of a share in part of an undivided estate, in which part alone the plaintiff has a share, is maintainable in a Civil Court if no division of revenue is sought. *Debi Singh v. agreed to remain joint, and appointed the defendant No. 1 as their common manager for a period of seven years, commencing from the 1st September, 1896. On the 7th of March, 1897, the plaintiff gave notice to the defendants, stating that he would no longer continue joint, and dismissed the defendant No. 1 from the managership of his share of the properties. The defendants denied the plaintiffs' right to be separate without a formal deed of partition, or suit in Court. The plaintiff thereupon brought this suit for partition and accounts against all the defendants. On objection being taken that all the joint properties were not included in the schedule to the plaint, the plaintiff applied for the appointment of a Commissioner to inquire and report whether there were any other joint properties. The Subordinate Judge did not grant the prayer of the application, but framed an issue for the purpose of deciding that question, and dismissed the suit on the ground that all the joint-properties were not included in the suit. On appeal, it was held that, before dismissing the suit, the Subordinate Judge ought to have acceded to the prayer of the plaintiff for the appointment of a Commissioner; that the common manager (defendant No. 1) and other defendants were rightly joined together in the same suit, because they made a common cause to defeat the plaintiff's claim for separation, and also because accounts were claimed for the period covered by the managership of the defendant No. 1, and the other defendants are intimately connected with, and interested in taking, such accounts and that, though it may be competent to the parties to enter into an agreement not to divide their joint properties for a limited period and not in perpetuity, yet such an agreement must be for sufficient consideration. *Radha Nath Mukerjee v. If a party to a partition, which is being conducted by the Revenue authorities under Ch. 1. ——— Joint property in sole possession of sharer—Protection of sharers from liability for debts. In effecting a partition, account must be taken of any joint property in possession of any sharer; and before transfer of shares, provision should be made for the protection of other sharers from an undue liability on account of debts. ALLY HOSSEIN v. 2. ——— Mode of allotment of land—Land in exclusive possession of one party. In a suit for partition, the land in dispute, being in the exclusive possession of a single co-sharer, should fall as a whole in the share of one or other of the co-owners, and not be subdivided among them. PUDDOMONEE DOSSEE v. DWARKANATH BISWAS

3. ——— Land varying in value. Each party to a butwarra need not have the same quantity of land, nor should the land awarded be always in exact proportion to the jumma paid. The object of the butwarra being to divide the lands in as compact a form as possible, one party may have to pay the jumma on a smaller area than another, though on more valuable land. AFTABOODDEEN v. 4. ——— Convenience—Ground for objection to allotment on partition—Inconvenience. Where a party concerned objects, in appeal, to a partition of land fairly allotted according to value, as not having consulted convenience, it is not enough to show that appellant's own convenience would have been better consulted by a different arrangement. He is bound to show some arrangement which would better satisfy all parties, and be more equitable for all. SUMMUN JHA v. BHOOPUT JHA

5. ——— Compensation for expenditure by certain members of joint family on joint property. In a suit for partition, it appeared that the defendants, who were members of a joint family, had at their own expense enhanced the value of portion of the lands belonging to the joint estate. Held, that the partition should proceed on the basis of each co-sharer having an equal share of similar lands, compensation being allowed to each co-sharer for any private expenditure from which it could be shown the value of the partible property had been increased; and that, unless it could be shown that there were other lands of similar description out of which the share of the plaintiff could be made up, the plaintiff was entitled, on paying compensation to the defendants, to portion of the lands the value of which had been enhanced by the

6. ——— Principle of adjustment after partition between co-sharers—Beng. Reg. XIX of 1814. After partition of an estate among share holders under Regulation XIX of 1814, one shareholder, A, claimed from another shareholder, B, 2½ bighas of land as having been allotted to him by B under a prior agreement, in lieu of certain lands originally held by him which fell into B's putti. The Collector left the parties to settle the matter between themselves, and A brought a suit against B for his claim in the Civil Court. Held, that, in a case of this kind, the only principle that can be adopted is that the Court should ascertain the relative value of the lands originally made over by the defendant to the entire lands of the defendant, and that it should assign, out of the present share of the defendant, lands bearing the same relative value to the whole that the former lands bore: this to be done without interference with the proceedings of the Collector under the batwarra law, and the plaintiff (if successful) to be brought in as a co-sharer to a limited extent in the land assigned by the defendant. OOMA DUTT CHOWDHRY v. 8. ——— Family dwelling-house—Consent of co-parceners—Execution of decree. A decree directed partition of a family dwelling-house with its appurtenances, including a poojah dalan and courtyard adjoining it. In execution of that decree, the Civil Court Ameen, at the request and with the consent of two out of three co-parceners, did not partition the poojah dalan and courtyard. To this the third co-parcener objected, but her objection was overruled by the lower Courts, and it was directed that the property in question should remain undivided. Held, that the Court would be disinclined to order the property to be divided without giving the co-parcener or co-parceners who might wish to keep it entire an opportunity of doing so. Held, per WHITE, J., that having regard to the form of the decree, it was not open to the Court executing it to order that any part of the property should remain joint, except with the consent of all the co-parceners who were parties to the suit. Semle: per MITTER, J., that the lower Courts were not precluded by the decree from dealing with the property in the mode in which they had done. RAJ-COOMAREE DASSEE v. 11. ——— Suit by transferee for partition—Partition Act (IV of 1893), s. 4—Suit for partition by sharer against transferee—Procedure. S. 4 of the Partition Act (IV of 1893) applies only where the transferee sues for partition. 12. ——— Dwelling-house belonging to undivided family—Partition Act (IV of 1893), s. 4—Application of section—Re-acquisition by members of such family after it has been sold to a stranger does not give any right under the section as against such stranger. A dwelling house belonged to four brothers, K, R, V, and P, joint members of a Hindu family. In 1874 the shares of K and P were sold in execution of decrees against them, and in 1877 the remaining shares were sold, and finally the house became the property of the plaintiff and one A in equal moities. The plaintiff sued A for partition and obtained a decree, but pending execution A conveyed his moiety back again to R and V. The brothers had continued to occupy the house notwithstanding the changes in ownership. V now applied under s. 4 of the Partition Act (IV of 1893) to be allowed to buy the plaintiff's moiety. Held, that he was not entitled to the advantage given by the section. It is ownership, not occupation, that gives the right. After the sales in 1877, the house no longer belonged to an undivided family. V and his brothers were then either tenants in the house or trespassers. The question was whether the dwelling-house at the time the shares therein, which had not been sold to A, were transferred to the plaintiff belonged to an undivided family. When the plaintiff purchased his moiety, he and A became the owners in common of the house and as between them

s. 4 of the Partition Act had no operation. The subsequent purchase of A's interest by R and V did not confer upon them any rights which A did not possess. 13. ——— Mortgage by one owner of undivided share of estate—Rights of mortgagee and other sharers on partition. Where the owner of an undivided share in a joint and undivided estate mortgages his undivided share, he cannot by so doing affect the interests of the other sharers, and the persons who take the security, i.e., the mortgagees, take it subject to the right of those sharers to enforce a partition and thereby convert what is an undivided share of the whole into a defined portion held in severalty. Where such a partition is effected under the provisions of Regulation XIX of 1814 before the mortgagees have completed their title by foreclosure and the consequential decree for possession, the mortgagees of the undivided share of one co-sharer who has no priority of contract with the other co-sharers would have no recourse against the lands allotted to such co-sharers, but must pursue their remedy against the lands allotted to the mortgagor, and, as against him, would have a charge on the whole of such lands. *BYJNATH LALL v. 15. ——— Partition of a joint family house—Effect of partition by a consent decree where the decree does not reserve any right to the use of light and air—Implied grant of easement upon severance of tenement. On partition of a family dwelling-house by a consent-decree, the plaintiff claimed a right to the passage of light and air necessary for the enjoyment of his share of the building in the way in which it was enjoyed at the time of the partition, though no such right was expressly reserved in the decree. The defence was that the principle of an implied grant of easement upon severance of the tenement should not be applied to the case, but that the rights of the parties should be determined solely with reference to the decree made in the partition suit. Held, that the principles of justice, equity, and good conscience should be applied to the case, and that the plaintiff was entitled to the right claimed, even in the absence of any express provision in the decree reserving such right. Quære :

16. ——— Mode of division—Beng. Reg. XIX of 1814—Evidence of partition. Proceedings for partition having been instituted under Regulation XIX of 1814, it was proposed in order to make, equality of partition, that three villages should be divided in unequal proportions, and a goshwara was accordingly prepared by the Ameen setting out in one column the extent of the shares to be allotted, and in another the assessed jumma of each share allotted. In a suit in 1873 by the representatives of one of the shareholders to recover portions of the three villages, the only evidence that the partition had been completed was an istahar of the Deputy Collector, dated October 1864, directing the Nazir to require the raiyats to pay their rents according to the extent of the shares as set forth in the first-mentioned column of the goshwara; that is, according to the quantity instead of according to the quality and value which were the basis of the partition. Held (affirming the judgment of the High Court), that the plaintiff having failed to prove any order for partition drawn out under s. 13 of the Regulation, by the Collector, was not entitled to recover according to the quantity of that land, but, if at all, according to its value as ascertained in the column of the goshwara in which the assessed jumma was set forth. *HURRO SOONDARI DEBIA v. For purposes of convenience each was in possession of a certain portion, but there was no formal partition. The particular land in question in this suit (plots Nos. 1 and 2 of Survey No. 174) was a part of the land in possession of B. In 1867, without the knowledge of his brothers, B mortgaged these plots of land to the first defendant for R2,800. In 1886, L sued for partition of the whole property, and in 1891, L brought a similar suit. By the decrees in these suits, plot No. 1 was allotted to D and plot No. 2 was awarded to L. The mortgagee was not a party to either suit, the plaintiffs in these suits (as found by the High Court) having had no notice of the mortgage. D and L, on attempting to get possession of the lands allotted to them respectively by the partition decrees, were obstructed by the mortgagee, and now brought these suits against him and the heirs of B (defendants Nos. 2—9), claiming possession of the lands allotted to them free of the mortgage-debt, or that the partition should be re-opened, and that unencumbered land should be allotted to them and the mortgaged land given to B's branch of the family (defendants Nos. 2—9). Held, that the partition should be re-opened and the mortgaged land assigned to the defendants Nos. 2 to 9. Where a co-sharer of joint property has mortgaged his share without the knowledge of his co-sharers and there has subsequently been a partition suit to which, through the fraud of the mortgagor and the mortgagee, the latter has not been made a party, he (the mortgagee) will only be allowed to proceed for the recovery of his mortgage-debt against that portion of the property which has been allotted to his mortgagor. *Hem Chunder Ghose v. By the decree for partition the plot of land under the lease was allotted to the plaintiff who brought the present suit to recover possession of the piece of land on the ground that he was not bound by the lease. Held, that s. 52 of the Transfer of Property Act does not apply to cases where the shares of the parties and their rights to those shares are not disputed. The mode in which the lands should be allotted between the ascertained sharers does not affect the right to any specific property. Held, also, that the tenant, not having been a party to the partition suit, was not bound by the decree, and the plaintiff was only entitled to khas possession of the one-third share of the plot leased out by his co-sharers. *KHAN ALI v. 15. ————— Partition of estates—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 188—Joint landlords. A tenure was held under a zamindari, which originally formed one entire estate. The estate was subsequently partitioned by the revenue authorities into four several estates. The rent of the tenure was thereupon allotted proportionately to each of the four estates thus formed, although the land forming the tenure remained undivided. In a suit for enhancement of the rent of the tenure brought by the proprietor of some of the estates :—Held, that the effect of the partition of the parent estate was to create separate and distinct tenures out of the original single tenure under the proprietors of each of the estates; that the proprietors of the several estates were not joint landlords of the tenure within the meaning of s. 188 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and that therefore a suit for enhancement of rent would lie by a proprietor of one of the estates in respect of the rent allotted to his estate. *Sarat Soonduree Debia v. 16. ————— Co-owners—Dispossession—Adverse possession—Constructive possession—Waste land—Limitation. To effect a partition the property, if susceptible of division, must be transformed into estates in severalty and one of such estates assigned to each of the former occupants for his sole use and as his sole property. Although co-owners cannot enforce a partition of a part only of the common lands, leaving the rest undivided, and, although the entire property must be included in the partition, yet, if by mistake, or by consent of the co-owner, acting innocently and fairly, a partition of a portion only of their estate has been made, whether by order of the Court or otherwise, there is no reason why the Court should not grant a division of the remainder at the instance of one or more of the co-owners. The conclusion is, therefore, irresistible that the effect of a decree in the partition suit was to leave untouched the joint title and possession of the parties (in the remainder), and that the present suit for recovery of joint possession may well be maintained. *Barnes v. To prove title to land by adverse possession for the statutory period it is not sufficient to show that some acts of possession have been done; the possession required must be adequate, in continuity, in publicity and in extent to show that it is possession adverse to the competitor; in other words, the possession must be actual, visible, exclusive, hostile and continued during the time necessary to create a bar under the Statute of Limitation. *Radhanani Debi v. 2. — Suit for confirmation of possession—Beng. Reg. XIX of 1814. To a partition effected by the Revenue authorities under Regulation XIX of 1814 the plaintiff presented a petition of objection, in which he alleged that his share had been included in, and declared to be part and parcel of, the defendant's share. In a suit for a declaration of his right to the share claimed by him, and for confirmation of possession thereof, both the lower Courts gave a decree for the plaintiff. On special appeal, an objection was taken that the suit would not lie, no application having been made in it for the annulment of the partition proceedings by which the property sued for was included in the plaintiff's share. Held, that the suit would lie; that there was no necessity for the plaintiff, who claimed to be in possession of his proper share, and sued only for a declaration of his title thereto, to include in his plaint an application for the renewal of the partition proceedings: and that those proceedings were final. INDRABATI KUNWARI v. objection made by any of the co-sharers, and the Assistant Collector recorded a proceeding setting forth the rules which were to govern the partition, and this proceeding was confirmed by the Collector under s. 138. An Amin was ordered to carry out the partition, and, in taking steps to do so, stated the principle upon which he proposed to distribute the common land. An objection was then for the first time raised by two of the co-sharers in the Court of the Assistant Collector to the inclusion of a particular piece of land in the partition, on the ground that it appertained exclusively to their share. This objection was disallowed by the Assistant Collector, and, on appeal, by the District Judge. Held, that, at the stage of the proceedings when objections were taken, it was too late to determine questions of title under s. 113 of the Act; that accordingly the Assistant Collector could not be said to have done so; that the objections could therefore only be regarded in the light of objections to the mode in which it was proposed to make the partition, and that consequently there was no appeal from the order of the Assistant Collector to the District Judge or from the District Judge to the High Court. *TOTA RAM v. This application was struck off, and a second application was made on the 23rd July 1888. The arbitrator then declined to act, and the application was struck off. The present application was made on the 1st August 1891, and an objection was raised that, more than three years having elapsed from the date of the previous application, the present one was barred under Art. 179 of Sch. II of the Limitation Act. The lower Court of appeal held that Art. 178, and not Art. 179, applied to the case, but that, the plaintiff having applied within three years from the date when the arbitrator declined to act, the application was in time. Held, with reference to the provisions of s. 396 of the Code of Civil Procedure, that the proceedings for the purpose of effecting the partition were proceedings in the suit itself, and not proceedings in execution of the decree that no formal application was necessary, the Court being bound to proceed with the suit and make a final decree; and that the application made on the 1st August 1891 was not one to which limitation was applicable. *DWARAKA NATH MISSEER v. 14. Prior purchaser or incumbrancer—Priority not a right but an equity—Circumstances of each case—Account of past transactions—Death of a co-parcener pending appeal by him—Representation by the co-parcener's widow in and for purposes of appeal. The principle laid down in Andurang v. Bhaskar, 11 Bom. H. C. 72, and Madaram v. Ranu, 11 Bom. H. C. 76, has settled the law governing decrees for partition. Prior purchasers or incumbrancers are, as far as possible, entitled to priority, but not as a matter of right. It is only an equity, and the question how and where the equity should be invoked in aid of a party must depend upon equitable considerations which, again, must depend on the circumstances of each case. In partition suit no co-parcener has any right to an account of past transactions. A co-parcener (who claimed the whole of the property in suit, but who was only allowed a share in that property by the lower Courts) having died pending second appeal by him, his widow was allowed to represent him in or for the purposes of the second appeal notwithstanding the application of the co-parceners of the deceased that they were entitled to his share. *NARAYAN BIN BABAJI v. WHAT CONSTITUTES PARTNERSHIP.*Participation in profits—

Application of English law. M M & Co., merchants in London, carrying on business with W N W & Co., merchants in Calcutta, sought to make the defendant liable as a partner in the latter firm, under a particular memorandum of agreement between the members of the firm of W N W & Co., and the defendant. Held, that such agreement did not constitute the Rajah a partner in or with the said firm. Participation in profits does not constitute a partnership. The question is, not whether the person sought to be made liable participated in the profits, but whether the trade has been carried on by persons acting on his behalf. There is no rule of law which imposes partnership liability upon a man who advances to others money for the purpose of carrying on their business, and in return reserves to himself a share of the profits which may arise from the employment in the business of the money so advanced by him. PRATAB CHUNDRA SINGH v. although a right to participate in the profits of trade is a strong test of partnership, and there may be cases where, from such participation alone, it may, as a presumption, not of law, but of fact, be inferred, yet whether that relation does or does not exist must depend on the real intention and contract of the parties. To constitute a partnership, the parties must have agreed to carry on business and to share profits in some way in common; but where a contract is entered into between partners and a third person for the protection of that person as a creditor, whereby it is agreed that he shall receive in consideration of advances commission on the net profits of the partnership business, and large powers of control over the business are given to him, but no power to direct transactions, the Court, if satisfied that the contract was one of loan and security, will not interpret it as constituting a partnership. In applying the English law of partnership to cases in India, the usages of trade and habits of business of the people of India, so far as they may be peculiar and differ from those in England ought to be borne in mind. Money paid as rent to one party. The parties had entered into a contract of partnership to work certain supposed mines; plaintiff to receive a bonus and also six monthly payments as "rent" for the land, both parties to share the profits and bear the losses; it being stipulated that in case coal should not be discovered, the bonus and any sum paid as rent would be refunded. Held, that this was a partnership arrangement, and the payment of the money which went by the name of rent was not as by a tenant to a landlord, but as consideration-money for land forming a portion of the capital. There is no analogy in respect of the manager being liable to account between a joint Hindu family and a partnership. Where it was arranged amongst the members of a joint Hindu family that the accounts of a banking business carried on by them should be kept, on the understanding that the profits, when realized, should be divided amongst the individual members in certain proportions, and that the expenses of each member should be credited and charged in the name of each member :—Held, that this was in the nature of a partnership, and an account was decreed. *RANGANMANI DASI v. 6. ——— Ancestral business—Account.

An ancestral trade may descend like other inheritable property upon the members of a Hindu undivided family. The partnership so created or surviving has many, but not all, of the elements existing in an ordinary partnership. For example, the death of one of the partners does not dissolve the partnership; nor, as a rule, can one of the partners, when severing his connection with the business, ask for an account of past profits and losses. *SAMALBHAI NATHUBHAI v. 8. ——— Continuing firm—Partnership for a fixed term—Death of partner—Power of partner to nominate a successor—General device not an exercise of power—Effect of default in exercising power of nomination—Good will—Valuable asset. V, J, and S, being large shareholders in the Great Eastern Spinning and Weaving Mills, Limited, entered into an agreement in October 1873 to cause the said company to be wound up and to form a new company to take over its assets and liabilities, and to cause themselves to be appointed agents of the new company under the firm of V J S & Co., and under that name to act as agents of the new company, subject to the terms of the agreement. The agreement provided that the firm of V J S & Co., should take the agency of the new company for a period of thirty years; that of the profits to be derived by the said firm out of the agency V should receive 39 cents, J 31 cents, and S 30 cents; that in case of a vacancy in the firm of V J S & Co., caused by the death or retirement of any of the partners, the nominee of the dying or retiring partner should be admitted into partnership, and should receive the share of such partner, and should exercise all his authority. In pursuance of this agreement, the Great Eastern Spinning and Weaving Mills, Limited, was wound up, and a new company called "The New Great Eastern Spinning and Weaving Company, Limited," was formed and registered. Both the memorandum and articles of association of the said new company contained clauses providing that the firm of V J S & Co., or whatever member or members that firm for the time consist of, should be agents of the company so long as the said firm should carry on business in Bombay, or until they should resign. The firm of V J S & Co., having been constituted under the said agreement, became the agents of the said company, and continued to act as such down to the date of the present suit. No other business was done by the firm, and the three partners divided the profits realized by the firm out of the agency business in the shares specified in the agreement as above mentioned. V died in 1874, leaving a will whereby, in exercise of the right vested in him by the agreement, he nominated and appointed his wife K as his successor in the firm, and she accordingly became and was recognized as a partner therein. In August 1875 she assigned her interest in the firm to H, and he thereupon became a partner and received 39 cents of the profits. In November 1876 J assigned his interest in the firm (31 cents), to H and S, of which 21 cents became the property of H and 10 cents the property of S,—the firm henceforth consisting only of these two partners, of whom the former received in all 60 cents of the profits and the latter 40 cents. In November 1882, H died, leaving a will whereby he appointed his wife B his executrix, and left all his property to her for life, and after her death to his son. The will did not refer to the firm, or nominate any successor in the partnership. In the present suit B as executrix claimed to be entitled to 60 cents or shares in the firm of V J S & Co. up to the date of the testator's death, and to a like share in the profits earned subsequently to his death, or to be earned by the firm so long as it continued to carry on the said agency business of the company. The defendant admitted the right of the plaintiff to the share claimed in the profits earned prior to the testator's death, but resisted her claim to any portion of the subsequent profit. Held (i), on the authority of Beamish v. Beamish, Jr. Rep. 4 Eq. 120, that the testator's will did not operate as an exercise of the power of nominating a successor in the firm so as to make the plaintiff a partner. (ii) That having regard to the nature of the duties of the firm as agents and to the language of the agreement constituting the firm, coupled with the fact that there was no capital employed in the business, it must have been intended that, in default of nomination of a successor by a retiring or deceased partner, the agency should be carried on by the continuing or surviving partners in the name of the firm, and that the interest of the testator in the firm upon his death therefore survived to the defendant. Held, also, that, although the plaintiff was entitled to an account up to the date of the testator's death, she was not entitled to a share of the good-will as an asset of the firm. The good-will of a firm is attached to the name, and in the present case, by the partnership agreement itself, the name was to be used by the surviving partners or partner for their own benefit. That arrangement took away all value from the good-will, if indeed it was consistent with its being an asset at all. BACHUBAI v. SHAMJI JADOWJI. I. L. R. 9 Bom. 536

9. ——— Intention of parties—Profits, participation in—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 242, 238—Broker. A right to participate in profits is sometimes a strong test of partnership; but whether or not the relation of partners does or does not exist depends on the real intention and agreement of the parties, and not upon the mere fact of participation in profits. Davis v. Davis, [1894] 1 Ch. 393, referred to. The facts that B, an assistant in a firm of brokers, received, over and above his salary, a share in the profits; and that, with the knowledge of the partners, he occasionally signed, on delivery orders which came from buyers in favour of the firm, the signature "for Carritt & Co." (the name of the firm), with his own initials or name underneath; that he occasionally signed with his own signature letters dealing with mere matters of detail; and that he purported to make firm offers to buyers and sellers, and initialled alterations in some contracts, do not constitute him a partner in that firm. 10. ——— Partnership, tests of—Participation in profits by lender—Taking active interest in business—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 240, 241—Holding out as partner to strangers—Estoppel—Intention—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 115. The right to participate in the profits of trade is in itself a strong test of partnership, but participation in profits, although strong evidence, is not conclusive evidence of a partnership and the question of partnership must be decided by the intention of parties to be ascertained from the contents of the written instruments, if any, and the conduct of the parties. It being established in this case with regard to a person's relation towards a business carried on with his money, that he was a mere lender:—Held, that neither the fact of his participating in the profits nor that he took an active interest in the business were inconsistent with his position as a lender. Mollou, March & Co. v. Court of Wards, 10 B. L. R. 312, and Badeley v. Consolidated Bank, L. R. 38 Ch. D. 208, followed. Where the question was as to whether a person, though not in fact a partner, did by his acts and conduct hold himself out to strangers as such, so as to become liable by estoppel:—Held, that to establish such liability it was not essential to show that he acted fraudulently or negligently. Even want of knowledge on his part of the effect of his acts and conduct would not absolve him from liability, if his acts and conduct were such as would induce a reasonable man to believe that he was a partner and to act upon such belief. *Sarat Chandra Dey, v. NERS.

1. ——— Construction of deed of partnership—Agreement to give managing partner commission—Dissolution of partnership—Loss of commission on dissolution. By an agreement, made on the 10th of January 1857, between K N and several other persons, it was agreed that they should form a co-partnership for the purpose of erecting a mill for the manufacture of yarn. The capital of the partnership was fixed at Rs. 3,00,000, divided into 100 shares of Rs. 3,000 each. By the 4th clause of the agreement it was provided that, in return for the trouble K N had been at in establishing the factory, "whatever cotton had to be purchased for the factory K N was to purchase, and whatever yarn should be made in the factory K N was to sell, and for whatever he should sell on account of the factory he was duly to receive from the co-partnership his commission at the rate of 5 per cent. during his lifetime," and it was also provided that, though the purchases and sales by the co-partnership should not be made through K N, "yet upon the whole amount of the sales the co-partnership was duly to pay 5 per cent. to K N during his lifetime." The factory was built, and its machinery procured and set up by K N, and both financially and otherwise the factory was wholly managed by him. Shortly after it commenced to work, it was found that the co-partnership had expended all its capital and was heavily involved in debt—incurred by K N without the sanction of his co-partners,—and that the factory was working at a loss; and at the suit of some of them, but against the consent of K N and a minority of the co-partners, the co-partnership was ordered to be dissolved. K N then claimed to be entitled to compensation for the loss of the commission he should have earned upon the sale of the yarn of the factory during his lifetime. Held, that he was not so entitled; that as between his co-partners and K N there was no obligation on the former to subscribe more capital after the original capital of the co-partnership had been exhausted; and that there was no implied covenant on the part of co-partnership to continue to work the factory in order that K N should be in a position to earn his commission during his lifetime. Distinction between right to compensation for loss of fixed wages and right to compensation for loss of commission pointed out. When a partnership is wound up by the Court, all questions arising between the partners out of the partnership transactions should be disposed of in the winding-up suit. *LALBHAI VALLABHBHAI v. PARTNERSHIP—contd.*2. RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF PARTNERS—contd.

2. ——— Payments made by partners—Presumption—Dissolution of partnership. Payments made by the different partners of a firm are presumed to have been made out of the funds of the firm where the contrary is not proved by any satisfactory evidence; and when a firm consisting of two members is dissolved by the death of one partner, the presumption is that the deceased was entitled to a moiety of the existing assets. KESHAV GOPAL GINDE v. RAYAPA . . . 12 Bom. 165

3. ——— Dormant partner, liability of—Bond executed by one of several partners—Right of creditor. The doctrine that a dormant partner, when discovered, is liable for every debt incurred for the partnership by the active partner, is not absolute in the Courts in England, and is not to be followed by the Courts of this country, unless found in particular cases to be consonant with justice, equity, and good conscience. Where money was lent on a bond to a "malik and mukhtear" of a factory on his personal credit and the security of the entire factory, and it was afterwards discovered that other parties had a share in the factory, it was held that the lender was not entitled to go beyond his contract and recover from those other parties personally. NUNDEEPUT MAHATAH v. URQUHART 9 W. R. 355

4. ——— Bill drawn by one partner. Every one of the partners in a mercantile firm of ordinary trading partnership is liable upon a bill drawn by a partner in the recognized trading name of the firm for a transaction incident to the business of the firm, although his name does not appear upon the face of the instrument, although he be a sleeping and secret partner. In order to take a case out of these principles of the general law, it must be shown that the holder of the bill knew at the time he received it that the transaction was the private affair of a single partner. *BUNARSEE DOSS v. 6. ——— Liability of partner for purchases made by co-partner out of the scope of partnership business—Application of proceeds of sale to pay partnership debts. C, the managing member in Calcutta of a firm of which B, the other partner, was absent in England, made, unknown to B and without authority from him, various purchases from the plaintiff of articles not within the scope of the partnership business. The purchases were made as for the firm, and were delivered on the partnership premises by the plaintiff. Subsequently, the goods were taken to C's house, and, together with certain private property belonging to C, were sold by auction, and the whole proceeds of the sale were paid by C to a bank in Calcutta to the partnership account with that bank, and were eventually remitted to B in England as from the partnership funds, and applied in payment of certain bills of the firm then due. B, on coming to Calcutta, took over the management of the business from C. Some time after the date of the agreement, while there was a balance due, the defendants' firm took in a new partner. Held, that the words "belonging to" included all goods in the possession of the new firm that came to them in the way of business. Held, also, that the new firm, not having given notice to the contrary, must be taken to have engaged the plaintiff as banian upon the terms expressed in the agreement with the old firm, and to have taken over the balance due at the time when the new firm was constituted as a debt due by the new firm. *BALDEO DAS AGARWALLA v. such estate. In 1864 H, E, and I joined the firm. In 1870 H died; and in 1871 T purchased the shares of E and I, and in 1873 of R. In 1875, T gave the Delhi and London Bank a mortgage on such estate as security for the repayment of money which he had borrowed from the Bank ostensibly for the purposes of the estate. The Bank obtained a decree against him personally for the money, in execution of which his rights and interests in the estate were put up for sale on the 20th June 1877 and were purchased by the Bank, which obtained possession of the estate in August 1877. In August 1879 B and W's executor sued T and the Bank, claiming a declaration that they were or had been partners with T in the estate; that if the partnership should be held to be subsisting, it might be dissolved, or that, if it had ceased to exist, the date of its termination might be fixed, and that in either event a liquidator might be appointed to take an account, and, after realizing assets and discharging liabilities, might be ordered to pay them each one-third of such balance as remained. Held, that, as the effect of the purchases by T in 1871 and 1873 was to relieve the estates of H, E, I, and R of all past and future liabilities of the partnership, in respect of which B and W still continued as liable as T, and to which they would have to contribute to discharge, such purchases should be regarded and treated as made on behalf of the partnership; and therefore, at the time of the execution of the mortgage of the estate, B, W, and T were interested in the estate to the extent of one-third each: that, although T was not authorized, either actually or impliedly, by B and W to mortgage the estate, and the mortgage therefore was not binding on them, yet, as they allowed him to conduct the business of the estate in such a manner as to make it appear that the control and management of it rested with him, and he was for all ordinary business purposes their representative, B and W were bound, in any accounting that might take place, to recoup the defendant Bank for such advances as were made to T for the necessary purposes of the estate, in the same proportion as they must discharge debts due to other creditors; that T was entitled to be reimbursed such moneys of his own as he had expended within the legitimate scope and for the proper purposes of the partnership as originally contemplated by the parties. October 1896, plaintiff obtained a decree on an award against the first defendant in the Civil Court at Baroda for Rs13,909-4-0, and in execution of this decree he recovered a sum of Rs7,000. In 1897, plaintiff filed this suit in the Court of the First Class Subordinate Judge at Ahmedabad to recover the balance, viz., Rs6,909-4-0, from all the partners (defendants Nos. 1 to 8). The Subordinate Judge dismissed the suit; the plaintiff appealed to the High Court. Held, that, the original liability of the partners being a joint liability, the first defendant had no authority, without the consent of his partners, to change the joint liability of each partner, which was the ordinary incident of the partnership, into a joint and several liability. *LAKSMISHANKAR DEOSHANKAR v. 13. ———— Payment to a partner in fraud of his co-partners—Discharge of debt—Constructive notice—Lease taken by agreement in name of one partner. The defendants, other than the first defendant, styling themselves the "agricultural association," entered into three rental agreements, two of them dated April 23rd, 1891, and the third dated June 21st, 1891, with the plaintiffs and the first defendant, for the cultivation of certain lands belonging to an undivided family, of which the plaintiffs and first defendant were members, and took possession of and cultivated the said lands. On the 17th June 1891, an agreement, of which the second defendant had notice, was entered into between the plaintiffs and first defendant to the effect that the first plaintiff should be the managing member of the family and should be entitled to receive the rent and give receipts for the same. Subsequently, disputes arising between plaintiff and first defendant, the other defendants made payments of rent to first defendant alone. Held, that these payments were not a valid discharge as against the claim of the plaintiffs on its being proved that second defendant had notice of the agreement of the 17th June, and that notice to him must be taken to be notice to his partners, the other defendants. By an agreement between the defendants any one partner was empowered to take a lease; such lease to be binding on all the partners as if executed by them. The leases were not signed by the 13th defendant (now represented by appellants 19, 20, and 21), who was admittedly a partner and took actual part in the management of the affairs of the firm after the leases were executed. Held, that it was intended that the leases should operate as if all the members had executed them, and that the representatives of 13th defendant were bound. *CHINNARAMANUJA AYYANGAR v. 15. ——— Abandonment of share—Account ordered—Account ordered on dissolution decreed—No abandonment by plaintiff—Effect of managing partner's not having kept clear accounts—Mode of taking account. However speculative the subject-matter of a partnership may be, it is a matter of inference, to be drawn from the facts of the case, whether there has or has not been an abandonment by a partner of his share; or loss thereof consequent upon his refusing or neglecting to take his part in the business, and allowing a length of time to elapse, in such circumstances. Where the evidence was that the plaintiff, now suing for a winding up of a partnership, and an account, had some years before his suit declined to advance more money for the business, and had left with some subsequent intervention by him, the management to his co-partner, now defendant: Held, that there was no sufficient ground for the inference that the plaintiff had abandoned, or lost by laches, his position as a partner before this suit was brought. The defendant, on the other hand, while managing partner, had been engaged in dealings in timber peculiar to himself, in the same quarter as the partnership dealings and on a larger scale. His agent in the timber district had expended largely, but on which of the accounts it was impossible for the Court to distinguish. It had been possible for the defendant to have given full accounts of certain of his transactions, but he had not done so. He had mixed up his own separate dealings with those of the partnership, and had not kept clear accounts. Held, that the Courts below acted rightly, in disallowing all charges made by the defendant that were disputed by the plaintiff and were unsupported by vouchers, notwithstanding that there might have been certain expenses disallowed which had been honestly incurred. MOUNG THA HUYN MAH THEIN MYAH (1900)

19. ——— Partner, power of single, to mortgage partnership property—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 251. A single partner by objecting cannot vary articles of partnership—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 53—Transfer cannot be impeached by any but the creditors. Where one of several partners has, under arrangement with the other partners, the sole management of the business, he has the power of borrowing as incidental to the power to trade, and the power to pledge partnership assets as incidental to the power of borrowing. Obiter: The English doctrine that a single partner cannot mortgage the immoveable property of the firm does not apply in India. It is not competent to a single partner to take objection to the exercise of any power conferred by the articles of partnerships. Where a partner has power to borrow or mortgage for the purpose of trade, he has power to give a mortgage for an antecedent debt. An objection that a transfer of property was made with intent to defeat or delay creditors must be taken by the creditors and it is not open to others to object to the transfer on that ground. *ASAN KANI RAVUTTAR v. 1. ———— Suit for account without asking for dissolution. Partnership dissoluble at will. A member of an ordinary trading partnership, dissoluble at will, cannot, except under special circumstances, seek an account without praying for a dissolution. GOLLA NAGABHU SHANAM v. KANA-KALA GANGAYYA . . . 2 Mad. 28

2. ———— Liability of partners to account—Suit for an account—Suit by partner to recover from co-partner share of losses and advances. It is only in exceptional cases that a suit can be brought by one partner against another, which involves the taking of partnership accounts prior to dissolution. A suit was brought by the widow of a partner in an indigo concern against her deceased husband's co-partner in respect of certain alleged losses of the concern, and to recover a moiety of moneys expended by her husband in advances made to indigo cultivators on behalf of the partnership. At the time when the suit was brought, the partnership had not been dissolved. Held, that, the partnership not having been dissolved, the plaintiff was not entitled to an account, and the suit must therefore fail. *Brown v. 3. ———— Suit for dissolution and an account—Partner seeking to remove attachment on partnership property. The proper course for a partner seeking to remove an attachment on partnership property in execution of a decree against one partner only is to sue for a dissolution of the partnership and an account, with a view to ascertain the amount due to the partner in execution against whom the partnership property is attached. KARIMBHAI v. CONSERVATOR OF FORESTS

4. ———— Suit by partner against co-partner—Suit for share of profits. A member of a subsisting partnership is not in a position to sue his partner, still less one of his alleged partners, for the profits which had up to a particular time accrued, but he must, if he desires relief, sue in the ordinary way for an account. DOYARAM LUSKUREE v. SOOKHANUM . . . 16 W. R. 141

5. ———— Suit for general adjustment of account. In disputes between partners respecting their accounts, the plaintiff should so frame his suit that there may be a general adjustment of the partnership accounts. 6. ———— Suit against co-partners for money deposited and profits—Necessity for taking accounts. In a suit against co-partners in a joint firm to recover money deposited as plaintiff's share, and to have accounts rendered of the profits, before any order can be made to the effect that the plaintiff is entitled to be paid by any one of his partners or out of the assets of the firm the actual money advanced, the whole accounts of the firm ought to be taken, and the ultimate liability of each of the partners ascertained. KALLEE CHURN SAHOO v. RAM LALL SAHOO 21 W. R. 300

7. ———— Suit for contribution among partners—Transactions by some only of partners—Obligation to ask for account of partnership dealings. Four members of a partnership consisting of seven persons borrowed certain sums on account of the partnership for which they gave their joint and several promissory notes on which decrees were afterwards obtained against them. In a suit for contribution brought by one of the four members against the others, as having paid more than his share under the joint decrees:—Held, that the giving of the promissory notes was not a partnership transaction so as to debar the plaintiff from a suit for contribution without asking for an account of the partnership dealings. DOYAL JAIRAJ v. KHATAV LADHA . . . 12 Bom. 97

8. ———— Suit for contribution—Money borrowed by agreement by one partner and paid into partnership business—Decree against one partner—Suit for contribution by him against other partners—Adjustment of account whether necessary. In a partnership business entered into between the plaintiff and the defendants, it was agreed that each member, together with the gomasthas of the business, should be at liberty to borrow money upon his individual credit and to pay into the firm the money so borrowed to carry on the business. The plaintiff conjointly with defendants 4 and 6, in accordance with that agreement, borrowed several sums of money upon promissory notes, and paid the amounts so borrowed into the business. After the loan, the partnership business came to an end, but no account was settled. Afterwards decrees were obtained upon those promissory notes, and the plaintiff was obliged to pay up the decretal amounts. To a suit for contribution by the plaintiff, for money so paid, against the members of the firm, the defence, inter alia, was that the suit was not maintainable, in the absence of adjustment of the accounts relating to the firm. Held, that the suit was maintainable, inasmuch as the money secured by the promissory notes did not become an item of the partnership account. *Doyal Jairaj v. 10. ———— Suit on agreement in nature of partnership deed—Suit by one party for his share. An agreement was entered into whereby the defendant undertook to pay to the plaintiff and two other co-creditors of an insolvent a share in any sums which he might recover from the insolvent in consideration of receiving a share in any sums which might be recovered by the other creditors. In a suit by one of the persons in whose favour the agreement was passed, without making the others parties, against the person who executed it, to recover his share, it was held that the suit was not maintainable, as it could only be brought as a suit between partners for an account, and the result of all the partnership transactions must be brought at once under the view of the Court. *BHAGTIDAS BHAGVANDAS v. and each partner was to be separately liable for the moneys advanced in proportion to his share in the concern. In a suit against one of the partners for his proportion of the moneys so lent:—Held, that the plaintiff could not sue for those moneys on the footing of a mere creditor, and that the suit should be so framed as to determine, the profits or losses of the concern, and whether any and what assets would be available to each partner to liquidate the loan in proportion to his share. *CHUNDER SIKHUR BISWAS v. 13. ———— Suit by representative of a deceased partner for a share of a specific asset of the partnership recovered after the right to a general partnership account is barred. A suit may be brought by the representative of a deceased partner against the surviving partner of a firm to recover a share in a sum received by the surviving partner in respect of a partnership transaction within the period of limitation, although a suit to take partnership accounts generally would be barred. H J, the plaintiff's father, and the defendant R were partners in the firm of Hormusji and Rustomji, which carried on business in China. In the year 1862 the firm of N K & Co. was largely indebted to the firm of Hormusji and Rustomji. At the end of that year the latter firm ceased to do business but no formal dissolution of the partnership ever took place. In 1869 the defendant R filed a suit (No. 461 of 1869) in the High Court of Bombay in his own name and that of H J, his former partner, against the firm of N K & Co. for an account of the dealings of that firm with the firm of Hormusji and Rustomji, and by a decretal order, dated 19th March 1870, the suit was referred to the Commissioner to take the accounts as prayed for. On the 17th December 1872 H J died at Hongkong intestate. On 22nd February 1873 the defendant R assigned to the second defendant W for R20,000 the claim of the firm of Hormusji and Rustomji against the firm of N K & Co. The plaintiff did not know of this arrangements, and he only became aware of it in 1880. The plaintiff alleged that of the said sum of R20,000 the second defendant W paid to the first defendant R R10,000 in 1878, and for the remaining R10,000 gave a promissory note payable in July, or August 1881. The plaintiff took out letters of administration to his father H J, and brought this suit on 16th July 1880, claiming a moiety of the R10,000 already paid by the defendant W to the first defendant R, and praying that he might be declared entitled to a moiety of the remaining sum of R10,000 payable by the defendant W, and that the same might be paid over to him. The defendant R alleged that he had assigned the claim against the firm of N K & Co., to the defendant W, and had received the consideration for such assignment in February 1873, and contended that if the plaintiff had ever any claim to any portion of the said money (which he denied), such claim was barred by limitation. He also alleged that he had carried on the suit No. 461 of 1869 without any assistance from the plaintiff's father H J, or from the plaintiff, who, although applied to, refused to assist him, and he submitted that under no circumstances was the plaintiff entitled to any of the moneys claimed by him without giving credit to the defendant for his (plaintiff's) share of the expense of prosecuting the said suit, and for the amount of proper remuneration to the defendant for the time and labour bestowed by him in the said suit. He also claimed that the partnership accounts of the firm of Hormusji and Rustomji should be taken, and alleged that on such accounts being taken a large sum would be found due to him from the partnership. The second defendant W paid into Court the Rs10,000 due on the promissory note abovementioned, and was dismissed from the suit. At the hearing the Judge found that, of the other moiety of the consideration for the assignment of February 1873, a sum of Rs1,000 was paid by the defendant W to the defendant R on January 23, 1878, and a sum of Rs6,000 on September 13, 1879. Held, that the suit was not barred by limitation in respect of the said sums of Rs1,000, Rs6,000, and Rs10,000, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover a half share of these sums from the defendant R, deducting all sums expended by the defendant in the prosecution of the suit No. 461 of 1869, no allowance, however, being made to him as remuneration for conducting the suit. Held, also, that the defendant might deduct the amount (if any) which might be found due to him on taking the partnership accounts although a separate suit for such account would be barred by limitation. MERWANJI HORMUSJI v. RUSTOMJI BURJORJI. I. L. R. 6 Bom. 628

14. ——— Suit by sole surviving partner—Representatives of deceased partner—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 45—Civil Procedure Code, s. 26. The rule of English law that, in trading partnerships, although the right of a deceased partner devolves on his representative, the remedy survives to his co-partner, who alone must enforce the right by action, and is liable on recovery to account to the representative for the deceased's share, should be applied in India, in the absence of statutory authority to the contrary. The effect of s. 45 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872) is to extend the English law applicable to trading partnerships to all cases of partnership. There is nothing either in that section nor in s. 26 of the Civil Procedure Code read with it, to show that the representatives of a deceased partner must be joined in an action for a partnership-debt brought by the surviving partner, though it may be that they might be joined in such an action. *GOBIND PRASAD v. in the firm of N C & Co. He died on 8th November 1884. On the 9th November 1885, his executors passed a release to the defendants, which recited that R's share in the firm and future business had ceased on his death; that the surviving partners had requested the executors to settle the account of their testator with the firm, and that, after examining the books and taking accounts, etc., a balance of Rs3,395-11-0 was found due, on payment whereof the executors released the defendants from all claims in respect of the share and interest of R. On the 7th April 1887, the executors assigned over to the plaintiff a one-anna share in the said firm, and the plaintiff, as assignee, brought the suit for a declaration of his right to the share and for an account. He alleged that there had been no accurate examination of the books at the time of the release; that the amount really due to the testator's estate by the firm had not been ascertained; and that it had been agreed on by the partners, at the time of the release, that in addition to the sum therein mentioned, the executors as representing the testator's estate, should receive a one-anna share in the partnership. Held, on the evidence, that it had not been proved that all the partners consented to the alleged new partnership, and that on this ground alone the plaintiff could not succeed in his suit. COWASJI RUTTONJI LIMBOOWALLA v. BURJORJI RUSTOMJI LIMBOOWALLA. I. L. R. 12 Bom. 335

16. ——— Partnership shares—Interest. The parties to the suit, the heirs and representatives of the original partners, a family carrying on a banking business, made and acted upon a new arrangement of their shares, the amounts of which were found in the first Court, and affirmed on appeal. 17. ——— Alleged agreement as to shares in partnerships—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 253. In a partnership suit where one party does, but the other party does not, allege a specific agreement that the shares in the said partnership were unequal, the existing presumption as to the equality of the partner's shares casts the burden of proof on those alleging the agreement who must therefore begin. *JADOBRAM DEX v. 18. ——— Assignment by Plaintiff's partners of their shares—Decree for winding up and for an account. The plaintiff, as a partner in lending a sum of money upon security given, had a half share in the joint adventure with the first and second defendants. These two, without the plaintiff's exonerating them from liability to him, had assigned their shares to two other persons. The assignees were added as co-defendants after this suit had been filed, claiming a decree for a judicial winding up and for an account. It was not proved that the plaintiff had ever relinquished his claim upon the assignors as a partner, though he might have been aware of the assignment. The two added defendants appeared in the Court below, but not upon this appeal. Held, that the facts were sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to have the winding up of the partnership and the account decreed against all the four. The suit had been dismissed by the Recorder as having been prematurely brought before the complete execution of a decree, already obtained, before this suit was filed, by the plaintiff-appellant, against the borrowers of the money; that decree having followed upon an award of arbitrators which directed that all sums realized in the adventure should be divided in equal moieties between the plaintiff and the original defendants. Held, that this suit ought to have been allowed to proceed, and should not have been dismissed. The plaintiff having, on this appeal agreed to account for all money received by him in the transaction, an account should be directed with a declaration that the added defendants were jointly and severally liable to account with the first and second defendants for what had been received by them from the adventure. *DOMATY NURSIAM v. 19. ——— Suits by different partners for specific sums of money on adjustment of accounts—Accounts adjusted by Amin appointed in previous suits—Contract Act, s. 265—Plaint, amendment of, under s. 53, Civil Procedure Code, 1882. After dissolution of a certain partnership, two separate suits were brought in 1889 by different partners for specific sums of money due to them, and, in the alternative, for such other amount as might be found due on an adjustment of accounts. Objections were raised against these suits on the grounds, inter alia, (i) that the suits were barred by the provisions of s. 265 of the Indian Contract Act; (ii) that separate suits for the same matter were not maintainable; (iii) that the suits would not lie in the Munsif's Court; and (iv) that accounts having been already adjusted, there was no cause of action. The Munsif overruled the first three objections, and held, as regards the fourth, that the adjustment pleaded had been ratified by the plaintiffs; he appointed an Amin, who examined the accounts and ascertained the respective claims of the partners, and the plaintiffs in those suits obtained decrees on the basis of the Amin's adjustment of account. The present suits were brought in 1891 by certain other partners, who were defendants in the suits of 1889, on the allegation that the partnership account had been already adjusted by the Amin appointed in the suits of 1889, and that the debts and dues of all parties had been determined by the Court. The plaintiffs prayed for recovery of the amount due to them under the Amin's adjustment and, in the alternative, for such other relief as might be deemed proper by the Court to grant them against any of the defendants. Held, by NORRIS and BANERJEE, JJ. (RAMPINI J., dissenting), that the suits were correctly framed, and that such defects as there were in the plaint, viz., an incorrect statement as to the dues of all the partners having been determined in the former suit, and the omission of an alternative prayer for an account, were no bar to the maintenance of the present actions. *Taylor v. 20. ——— Advance made by one partner to another in respect of the latter's share of partnership debt—Suit for contribution. A and B were partners. A decree was passed against them for the payment of a certain debt, each partner being liable for the whole sum, and being bound to indemnify the other against the payment of more than his share. A paid B's share as well as his own and brought a suit against B for contribution. B contended that A's claim, being in respect of a partnership transaction, ought to be adjusted when the partnership account was settled and that the suit did not lie. Held, that the advance made by A to B by paying his share was not an advance to the partnership but to the other partner in respect of what he had to contribute, and that consequently A was entitled to contribution from B. *SUBBARAYUDU v. This doctrine is founded on the rule that the same individual, even in two capacities, cannot be both a plaintiff and defendant to one and the same action. One partner cannot sue for money lent by him to a firm of which he is a member. The advance is but an item in the partnership account. It is open to the Court of Appeal to vary a decree under appeal, not only for error, but also on grounds which have come into existence since it was passed. Sakharam v. Hari, I. L. R. 6 Bom. 113. The plaintiff, Purshotamdas Chaturdas, and his son, Nagindas, were members of a joint Hindu family, and were the owners of and equally interested in the firm of Gordhandas Bhagwandas. The son, Nagindas, was also a partner in another firm carrying on business in the name of Pathak Shanghavi and Company. The plaintiff, Purshotamdas, brought this suit against the latter firm, which consisted of four partners, including his son Nagindas (defendant 2), to recover Rs. 61,419-3-1 in respect of advances made by the firm of Gordhandas Bhagwandas to the defendants' firm. The fifth defendant was sued as a surety for one of the partners (defendant 4) in the defendants' firm. The lower Court passed a decree for the amount claimed, against all the defendants. One of the partners (defendant 4) and the surety (defendant 5) appealed. Pending the appeal the plaintiff died, and his son Nagindas (defendant 2) became sole owner of the family firm and was substituted for his father on the record, thus becoming both plaintiff and defendant in the suit. Held, (i) that, although Nagindas (defendant 2) was partly interested both as creditor and debtor, and could not have sued for his share, nevertheless, all parties interested being before the Court, either as plaintiff or defendants, the Court would adjust and determine their rights in accordance with the rule of justice, equity and good conscience; (ii) that, Purshotamdas and Nagindas being equally interested in the plaintiffs' firm, the lower Court should have made a declaration that they were entitled to the amount advanced in equal shares, and have passed a decree that one moiety thereof should be paid to Purshotamdas and the other moiety treated as an item to the credit of Nagindas in the partnership accounts; (iii) that, although, on Purshotamdas' death pending the appeal, Nagindas as his heir had become sole plaintiff, the Court of Appeal would not pass a decree in his favour, even in respect of Purshotamdas' half share, but would only declare that for this amount also Nagindas was entitled to credit in the partnership accounts. Under the circumstances, Nagindas could only get such relief as would have been permissible had he occupied the position of plaintiff at the institution of the suit; (iv) that Nagindas was entitled to credit in the partnership accounts, as against those who actually were his partners from time to time. S. 264 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872) only operates in favour of strangers to the partnership. As to the liability of defendant 5 as surety, the Court held, on the evidence, that defendant 5 had become a surety for the partnership debt. The partners were the principal debtors. But the liability of the surety is co-extensive with that of the principal debtor; therefore no decree could be now passed against defendant 5. Further, Nagindas, now the beneficial owner of the debt, was one of the principal debtors, and as such was bound to indemnify his surety and to repay any sum paid under the guarantee. He therefore could not be entitled to any relief against his surety. RUSTOMJI ASPANDYARJI SETHNA v. SHETH PURSHOTAMDAS CHATURDAS (1901) . I. L. R. 25 Bom. 606

22. ————— Two firms—Common partners—Advances by one firm to the other—Suit to recover such advances—Partnership account necessary—Practice—Procedure. The two plaintiffs were the owners and sole partners of the firm of Apaji Kasinath. They were also partners in the defendant firm of Ganesh Hari Narkar, in which there were three other partners besides themselves. Between 1891 and 1896 the firm of Apaji Kasinath advanced money to the firm of Ganesh Hari Narkar, which latter firm ceased to do any business in 1897, although the partnership was not formally dissolved. In 1899 the plaintiffs brought this suit against the firm of Ganesh Hari Narkar to recover their advance. Being partners in the firm, the plaintiffs appeared also as defendants (Nos. 3 and 4) in the suit, the real object of the suit being to recover from the other partners (defendants 1, 2 and 5) their share of the amount alleged to be due by the firm to the plaintiffs. Held, that the suit as framed was not maintainable. The money claimed was only one item in the partnership account between the plaintiffs and the defendants. Without taking a general partnership account it was impossible to say whether there was anything due by the defendants to the plaintiffs. *Rustomji v. Purshotamdas, I. L. 23. ————— Joint Hindu family—Partners—Co-partners not necessarily partners—Suit in the name of the owner of the firm—Parties—Adding parties—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 27. The plaintiffs sued, as owner of a firm, to recover a debt. The defendants pleaded that the plaintiff was joint with his father and brother, and contended that the latter were therefore partners in the firm and ought to be joined as plaintiffs. The lower Appellate Court held that the plaintiff's father and brother were partners with him by reason of their being joint members of a Hindu family, and that they ought, therefore, to have been co-plaintiffs. It further held that it was too late to amend the plaint and to add them as parties, and it therefore dismissed the suit. On second appeal:—Held (reversing the decree, and remanding the case), that, although a person carrying on business is a co-partner in a joint family, it does not necessarily follow that all his co-partners are his partners in that business, entitled with him to its rights and responsible with him for its liabilities. The fact of partnership must be proved by evidence showing that the persons alleged to be partners have agreed to combine their property, labour or skill in the business and to share the profits and losses thereof. Held, also, that if on remand it was found that the plaintiff's father and brother were partners, the Court ought to allow them to be brought on the record, and under s. 27 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) the plaintiff was entitled to amend. *Kasturchand v. 24. ————— Mistake in settled accounts—Re-opening—Surcharge and falsification—General words of release—What passes. B and S partners had the partnership accounts strictly adjusted and R39,645-7-0 was found due to B. By a deed of assignment B, in consideration of R34,000, assigned and released his share in the firm to S. By common mistake Government promissory notes for R7,000 were omitted from the accounts. On discovery of the mistake B sued for a share of the notes. Held, that either the whole account might be re-opened or leave given to B, to surcharge and falsify. It is no answer to such a suit that the general accounts of the partnership were not taken at the time the promissory note was given, and that, if such account were taken it would appear that nothing was due to the plaintiff. Such a defence amounts to a set off of an unliquidated amount, which is not allowable. VALLAMKONDU SUBBIA v. MALUPEDDI VENKATARAMIAH (1908) . I. L. R. 31 Mad. 343

Where one of the partners of a firm sued to recover a debt, which was really due to the firm on the allegation that it was due to himself and not to the firm and his suit was dismissed on the ground that he had materially altered the hatchitta executed by the debtor by striking out the other partners' name without the debtor's consent:—Held, that the other partners were not precluded from suing for the debt on behalf of the firm, making the first-mentioned partner a defendant in the suit. *Master v. Other similar property in Naini Tal was mentioned in the plaint, but the plaintiff said he would bring a separate suit in respect to that property. The first suit was withdrawn, but without permission being granted to bring a fresh suit. Subsequently a second suit was brought in Naini Tal respecting the property there. The plaintiff alleged himself to be in possession of this property, but it was found that he was not. Held, that the second suit was barred by the operation of s. 43 as well as of s. 373 of the Code of Civil Procedure, as also, on the finding that the partnership had been dissolved more than three years before suit, by Art. 106 of the second schedule to the Limitation Act. *NAIAZ AHMAD v. In regard to suits by one partner against another for a partial account, the general rule, as applied in India, is that if the account is sought in respect of a matter, which, though arising out of partnership business, or connected with it does not involve the taking of general accounts, the Court will, as a rule, give the relief applied for. It will be for the Court to determine under what circumstances it will be equitable to order a partial account, having regard to the rights of the parties under the contract. There is no rule of law now in force that a partial account can be ordered only under exceptional circumstances. Fairthorne v. Weston, 67 Eng. Rep. 432, followed. Golla Nagabushanam v. Kanakala Gangayya, 2 Mad. H. C. R. 28, not followed. If no assent is given by the other partners to the assignment, the assignee is on dissolution at liberty to sue for an account and for distribution, not as a partner, but as assignee of the right of his assignor in the partnership property. They owned two printing presses, one at Ahmedabad and one at Bombay. They had had dealings with the plaintiffs since 1878, and the accounts between them had been adjusted from time to time, and signed by one or other of the defendants on behalf of their firm, acknowledging the amount due to the plaintiffs. The last adjustment was signed in December, 1894, and this suit was filed in 1897 for R1,023 then admitted to be due. The first defendant admitted the claim. It appeared that in 1892 the defendants had quarrelled, and by arbitration the presses were divided, the Ahmeda-bad press being given to the first defendant and the Bombay press to the second defendant. At the time of this suit the books and outstandings still remained to be divided. The second defendant now alleged that the partnership had been dissolved in 1892 to the plaintiff's knowledge, and contended that he was not bound by the acknowledgment signed in 1894 by the first defendant and that the claim as against him was therefore barred by limitation under s. 21 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). The lower Appellate Court held that the claim against the second defendant was barred, on the ground that at the date of acknowledgment in 1894 the partnership had ceased to be a "going concern" and that the partners no longer continued to be agents for each other. Held (reversing the decree, and remanding the case), that the questions to be decided by the Court were the following: (i) whether the partnership between the two defendants had been dissolved before the date of the acknowledgment in 1894; (ii) whether (if it was then subsisting) that acknowledgment was or was not an act necessary for or usually done in carrying on the business of the partnership (s. 251 of the Contract Act, IX of 1872); and (iii) if the partnership had been dissolved at the date of the acknowledgment, then, whether notice of such dissolution had been given, or whether as a matter of fact the plaintiff had notice of such dissolution. *Premji Ludha v. 10. ————— Dissolution of partnership—Appointment of Receiver—Debt of the firm—Decree against one partner—Satisfaction of the decree by the partner—Suit by the partner against his co-partners for contribution—Court—Practice and procedure. The plaintiff and defendants traded in partnership from 1884 to 1894. In 1894 a suit for dissolution of the partnership was instituted with the result that on the 11th June 1897 a decree was passed appointing a Receiver with the usual directions for accounts and inquiry. In the meanwhile, J, a creditor of the partnership, sued the plaintiff and defendants for the debt due to him, but the Court passed a decree against the plaintiff alone, leaving his rights against the defendants to be settled in the accounts under the decree dated the 11th June 1897. The plaintiff satisfied J's decree, which was for R5,561 5-9, by means of a havala under which S and K paid on his account R5,400 to J. The balance R161 5-9 due under the decree was paid to J by plaintiff himself. The plaintiff then instituted a suit to recover from the defendants their share of the decretal debt. The Subordinate Judge awarded the plaintiff's claim. On appeal:—Held, (i) that, as J's decree had been satisfied by the plaintiff becoming liable to S and K, he was entitled to call upon the defendants to enable him to meet their share of the liability; (ii) that it was open to any creditor of the partnership to sue the partners and obtain a decree for the recovery of his debt, but no creditor, after the appointment of a Receiver, could execute any decree, obtained after that appointment, to the prejudice of the other creditors of the partnership. To obtain satisfaction of his decree the creditor was bound to go to the Court, which had appointed the Receiver, and take its directions; (iii) that the plaintiff's right to recover the amount he claims from the defendants depended, firstly, upon the result of the accounts as between him and the defendants as partners, directed to be taken in the decree, which declared the partnership dissolved and appointed a Receiver; and, secondly, upon whether J could, under that decree and upon the accounts consequent upon it, claim more than a rateable share of his money advanced to the partnership, as against the other creditors, if any, of the partnership. *SHIDLINGAPPA v. IV of the Civil Procedure Code, and at the first hearing should have determined whether there had been a partnership; what were its conditions; was it dissolved; or ought it to be dissolved; and who were the parties interested, and in what shares; and upon determining these questions, should have directed accounts to be taken; and after the accounts had been taken, should have made a final decree. *RAM CHUNDER SHAHA v. Plaintiff erected a hut on public ground in a village in the district of Thana, and lived there annually for a few months while his cattle grazed on the public grazing ground in that village. He was not the owner or lessee of any land in the village. On being prevented by the Collector of Thana from thus grazing his cattle, plaintiff brought a suit against that officer for a declaration of his right to graze his cattle within the limits, not only of that village, but of any other village in the district of Thana. Held, that plaintiff was not entitled to any such right. The phrase "village cattle" in s. 32 of Bombay Act I of 1865 does not include the cattle of any roving grazer who may choose to squat for a few months on the public ground of a village. The High Court, in second appeal, differing as to the nature of the right and the character in which it was claimed, set aside the decree and made an order of remand for the case to be decided in accordance with their remarks. On appeal the Judicial Committee discharged the order of remand as unnecessary, and restored the decree of the Subordinate Judge with the addition of a clause that the decree should not prevent the defendants or their successors in title from cultivating or executing improvements upon their waste lands, so long as sufficient pasturage was left for the plaintiffs. Held (agreeing with the judgment of the High Court), that the right claimed was not a right in gross. *BHOLA NATH NUNDI v. was obtained is no argument against its being a useful invention within s. 25, Act XV of 1859. Cannington v. Nuttal, L. R. 5 H. L. 205, followed as to the test of "novelty" in an invention. In deciding whether a machine, patented as an entire invention, is an imitation and piracy of another machine previously patented as an entire invention the question is,—Is the later patented machine substantially the same as the earlier one? The fact of considerable differences existing in the several parts of the two machines will not prevent the latter machine from being, as a whole, a copy of the earlier one; even where an exclusive privilege might have been acquired had the alterations in the later machine been claimed as improvements on the earlier one. Clark v. Adie, 2 App. Cas. 315, followed. Where a patent has been obtained for a machine which the patentee subsequently somewhat improves, a subsequent specification claiming the improved machine as a novel combination is bad, though the improvement might be claimed and protected as such. Where a new arrangement of the parts of a machine is claimed as an improvement, the arrangement must be clearly described in the specification. The mere substitution of one mechanical equivalent for another already in use will not protect it. Where a case of infringement of a patent has been made out, an injunction will follow as a matter of course. A plaintiff cannot pray for an account of profits and for damages. He must elect between the two remedies. If the plaintiff elects to take an account of the profits, such accounts will only be carried back to the period of one year before the filing of the plaint, in accordance with Act IX of 1871, Art. 11. *KINMOND v. 3. ————— Act XV of 1859, s. 23—Measure of damages—Evidence of particulars. Held, by the Court, in a suit under Act XV of 1859 for the infringement of a patent, where the plaintiff had been in the habit of licensing the use of his invention, that the loss of the amount paid for such license was the measure of damages. Per SPANKIE, J.—The meaning of the words "publicly or actually used" in s. 23 of Act XV of 1859 discussed. Held, per SPANKIE, J.—That where the defendant did not allege in his written statement that the invention was publicly used at certain places prior to the date of the petition for leave to file the specification, but was allowed to give evidence that the invention was so used at such places, the plaintiff was not bound before trial to have called upon the defendant to supply the particulars as to such places, and such evidence was not admissible. *SHEEN v. 4. ————— Particulars of infringements, Sufficiency of—Practice—Act XV of 1859, s. 34—Stat. 15 & 16 Vict., c. 95 (Patent Law Amendment Act, 1852), s. 41. In a suit for the infringement of certain inventions, the plaintiff did not, as required by s. 34 of Act XV of 1859, deliver with his plaint particulars of the breaches complained of in the suit. In his plaint, after describing his inventions, he alleged generally that the defendant had made and used them at a certain place without his license. Held, that, as required by s. 34 of Act XV of 1859, the plaintiff should have delivered with his plaint particulars of the breaches complained of; that the general allegation as to infringement contained in the plaint did not amount to such particulars; and that under these circumstances the plaintiff came into Court with a case which could not be tried. PETMAN v. BULL . . . . . I. L. R. 5 All. 371

In the same case, on appeal to the Privy Council:—Held, the sole object of Act XV of 1859, s. 34, corresponding with s. 41 of the English Patent Law Amendment Act, 1852, is to give the defendant fair notice of the case which he has to meet, and it is quite immaterial whether the requisite information be given in the plaint itself or in a separate paper. Talbot v. La Roche, 15 C. B. 310, and Needham v. Oxley, 1 H. & M. 248, approved. Particulars of breaches must be distinguished from particulars of objections for want of novelty. In the latter case the particular instances may not be within the knowledge of the patentee and must be specified; in the former the defendant must know whether and in what respect he has been guilty of infringement. Where three patents of the plaintiff all related to one article,—a kiln for burning bricks,—and the second and third in date were for improvements upon the invention specified in the first, and the plaintiff alleged a particular kiln constructed and used by the defendant, and in his plaint not only referred to his patents, but indicated in the case of each of them the infringements of which he complained:—Held, reversing the decision of the High Court, that this was a sufficient compliance with the Act. LEDGARD v. BULL

Where a landlord (patnidar) and his tenant were defendants in a suit by the zamindar for setting aside the patni, and both were by the decree made liable for the mesne profits which the tenant eventually paid out of his own pocket:—Held, that the effect was to cancel all relation of landlord and tenant between them, and to give the tenant a right to receive back what he had paid. *RAKHAI MONEE DOSSEE v. 7. ——— Refusal of patnidar to give security—Inability to collect rents owing to zamindar in consequence withholding amaldastak. If, by reason of the patnidar not giving security, the zamindar withholds his amaldastak, and also abstains from availing himself of the power which the law gives him of collecting the rents himself, it would be inequitable to allow him to recover from the patnidar the rent which the withholding of the amaldastak has prevented his collecting. *BIDHOO-MOOKHI DEBI v. 9. ——— Non-joinder of parties—Misjoinder of causes of action—Res judicata—Putnis, successive grant of—Rights of putnidars inter se—Tenure intermediate between the zamindar and putnidar, if can be created. R and H were each the proprietress of an 8 annas share in each of the mehals Nos. 5582 and 194, the lands of which were undivided. Plaintiff was the putnidar of H's half share in mehal No. 5582 and was the purchaser of its other half, which belonged to R. The co-plaintiffs were the purchasers of the 8 annas share of the other mehal No. 194, which belonged to H. The other 8 annas share of this estate was purchased by I and P. The defendants held putnis in respect of certain specified lands within the mehals by virtue of two leases granted by R and H. The defendants' putnis were prior in date to the plaintiff's putni of the entire 8 annas share in mehal No. 5582. The plaintiff had formerly brought a suit in the Munsif's Court for arrears of rent against the defendants, which was dismissed on the ground that the plaintiff being a putnidar had no right of suit for rent against a fellow

putnidar. The present suit was brought by the plaintiff in the Court of the Subordinate Judge against the defendants for arrears of rent. The co-plaintiffs were added because H was in the habit of collecting the rents due in respect of both estates jointly from the defendants, but I and P were not joint. Held, that there was no defect for non-joinder of parties: first because the law does not require that the owner of two different estates should sue for their rents jointly, if the rent due to each is known, and secondly because as a matter of fact I and P were found to have been collecting their rents separately from the defendants. That though the plaintiff's demand was based upon two separate leases, the plaintiff was not bound to bring two separate suits, since the plaintiff was entitled to collect the entire rent due from the defendants in one estate. He might sue for the entire rent in one suit, the two shares in the estate being undivided and the two leases alike. Held, further, that the decision of the Munsif in the former suit was not res judicata in the present suit, because the latter suit would not have been cognizable by the Munsif's Court, which tried the former suit. Gopi Nath Chowbey v. Bhagwat Pershad, I. L. R. 10 Calc. 697; Raghu Nath Panjah v. Issur Chunder Chowdhry, I. L. R. 11 Calc. 153; Kailash Chandra De v. Tarak Nath Mandal, I. L. R. 25 Calc. 574, note; and Bhugwanbutty Chowdhry v. Forbes, I. L. R. 28 Calc. 78, distinguished. That the grant of a putni lease to the plaintiff could not operate in derogation of the defendants' previously acquired rights as putnidars. Nevertheless the zamindar had the power to grant away a portion of his remaining rights and to create a tenure intermediate between himself and the defendants by granting the putni lease to the plaintiff. Therefore the plaintiff was entitled to demand the rent, which the defendants were bound to pay to their superior landlord. RAJKUMAR MAJUMDAR v. PRABAD CHANDRA GANGULY (1905) . . . . . 9 C. W. 12. ———— Enquiry into pauperism—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 310—Limitation Act, 1859, s. 14—Deduction of time—Presentation of plaint in wrong Court—Institution of suit. The plaintiff applied by petition, on 20th February 1873, to the Subordinate Judge of Meerut for leave to sue in forma pauperis. The petition contained a statement of the claim and such particulars as are required in a plaint, and a prayer that, as part of the immoveable property claimed was situated in the Punjab, the Subordinate Judge would seek the necessary sanction to give him jurisdiction. The Subordinate Judge, considering that the suit should be instituted in the Delhi district, rejected the application. On 3rd March the plaintiff presented the petition to the Deputy Commissioner of Delhi, and was admitted by that officer to sue as a pauper. The Deputy Commissioner having applied for sanction to try the suit, the High Court, North-Western Provinces, and the Chief Court of the Punjab considered it advisable that the suit should be tried at Meerut; and on 10th June 1873 the Deputy Commissioner returned the petition for presentation in the proper Court in the North-Western Provinces. On 19th July the plaintiff presented it to the Subordinate Judge of Meerut, who received and registered it as a plaint. On 10th November the defendants filed written statements, wherein they agreed that the plaintiff ought not to be allowed to sue in forma pauperis until he had proved his pauperism in the Subordinate Judge's Court. Upon this the Subordinate Judge threw out the suit, holding that he had no jurisdiction to admit it. Held, that the Subordinate Judge, if he regarded as ineffectual the order of the Deputy Commissioner admitting plaintiff to sue as a pauper, should himself have entered into an inquiry into the plaintiff's pauperism, and not have thrown out the suit. Held, also, that the provisions of s. 340 of Act VIII of 1859 were not applicable to the order of the Subordinate Judge refusing to allow the plaintiff to sue as a pauper, as he pronounced no opinion on the point. Held, also, with reference to the question of limitation, that the time during which the suit was pending in the Delhi Court should be deducted in computing the period of limitation. Semble: That the order admitting the plaintiff to sue as a pauper, which was made by the Delhi Court, became ineffectual when the plaint was returned by that Court; and that it became the duty of the Meerut Court, when the petition was again presented to it, to pass orders de novo on the subject. *SKINNER alias MIRZA v. 17. ——— Civil Procedure Code, s. 401, Explanation, and s. 407. On an application to sue in formá pauperis the Court is required to deal with the question of the applicant's pauperism with reference to the definition of that word as given in the explanation to s. 401 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and in deciding it to ascertain the exact property, its market value, and the title thereto, and then to deal with the case under s. 407 of the Code, irrespective of any surmises as to the reason why the applicant has valued his claim at a high figure. MUHAMMAD HUSAIN v. AJUDHIA PRASAD . . . . . I. L. R. 10 All. 467

18. ——— Application for leave to sue as a pauper—Property admitted by the respondent to be the property of petitioners not the "subject-matter of the suit" although claimed in the petition—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 401, 405, 509, 410. The petitioners prayed to be allowed as paupers to sue the respondent for certain property specified in the schedule annexed to their petition. At the hearing of the petition under ss. 408 and 409 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) the respondent appeared and deposited in Court some of the articles claimed by the petitioners to which he admitted they were entitled. The value of the articles deposited was R100. The petitioners acknowledged that the articles were their property, but declined to take possession of them. Held, that the petitioners were not paupers as defined by s. 401 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), being possessed of property worth R100 other than the subject-matter of the suit, and that they could not therefore be allowed to sue as paupers. The inquiry into pauperism under ss. 408 and 409 takes place before any suit is in existence; for, until an application to sue as a pauper is granted, there is no plaint, and consequently no suit (see s. 410). Any property therefore found at such inquiry not to be really in dispute cannot be regarded as part of the "subject-matter of the suit," although it may be entered in the particulars of the application for leave to sue as a pauper. The ground for excluding the "subject-matter of the suit" under s. 401 is because such property is presumably out of the petitioner's reach, and cannot be made use of by him to carry on his litigation. In the present case the articles deposited in Court were freely at the disposal of the petitioners and could not therefore be excluded from consideration. DWARKANATH NARAYAN v. MADHAVRAV VISHVANATH I. L. R. 10 Bom. 207

19. ——— Ground for rejecting petition—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 407—Rejection of application to sue as a pauper. The terms of s. 407 (e) of the Code must not be read as limiting the Court's discretion to merely ascertaining whether the "right to sue" arose within its jurisdiction, but have a more extended meaning, namely, that an applicant must make out that he has a good subsisting cause of action, capable of enforcement in Court, and calling for an answer; and not barred by the law of limitation or any other law. Also per MAHMOOD, J.—The provisions of s. 407 must be interpreted strictly, inasmuch as they operate in derogation of the right possessed by every litigant to seek the aid of the Courts of Justice; and an exercise of jurisdiction under that section, when such exercise of jurisdiction is open to the objection of illegality or material irregularity, would form a proper subject of revision by the High Court. *Har Prasad v. limitation. The plaintiff contended that the suit should be taken as instituted at the date of his application for leave to sue as a pauper. The lower Court held the suit barred, and dismissed it. Held, confirming the decree, that the plaintiff's application to sue as a pauper having been disposed of under s. 409 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), there was no proceeding pending which could be continued and kept alive by the payment of Court-fees. On the rejection of an application for leave to sue as a pauper, the only course open to the applicant is that declared in s. 413, viz., to institute a suit; and the date of the institution of that suit for the purposes of limitation is the actual date thereof. As he did not proceed with the application, it was rejected with costs on the 29th November 1888. There being no opposition, the application was granted, and was registered as a suit. On the 20th September 1893, when the suit had been heard nearly to the end, the Government pleader intervened, and applied that it should not be allowed to proceed further until the plaintiff had paid the cost incurred by Government in opposing the first application, which had been rejected. But the plaintiff refused to do so and thereupon the Subordinate Judge dismissed the suit with costs under s. 413 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), and ordered the plaintiff to pay the Court-fees under s. 412. Held, on appeal, (i) that the order rejecting plaintiff's first application was an order under s. 409 of the Code of Civil Procedure; (ii) that both the applications were made in respect of the same right to sue; (iii) that the order reject-

After the presentation of the plaint in another Court and before the termination of the suit, the Collector applied to the Subordinate Judge for execution of the order as to costs, by seeking to recover the amount of the stamp duty from the plaintiff. The Subordinate Judge refused, to execute the order, on the ground that the pauper suit was still pending in another Court. His order was affirmed by the District Judge on appeal. On second appeal to the High Court:—Held, that, under s. 412 of Act X of 1877, the Subordinate Judge had no jurisdiction to make the order for payment of Court-fees by the plaintiff. 38. ————— Court-fees, recovery of, by Government—Civil Procedure Code, s. 411—Subject-matter of suit—Cross-decrees under same decree. A plaintiff suing in forma pauperis to recover property valued at Rs. 60,000 obtained a decree for Rs. 1,439. The Court, with reference to the provisions of s. 411 of the Civil Procedure Code, directed that the plaintiff should pay Rs. 1,196 as the amount of Court-fees which would have been paid by him if he had not been permitted to sue as a pauper. The Collector having applied under s. 411 to recover this amount by attachment of the Rs. 1,439 payable to the plaintiff, the defendant objected that (i) certain costs payable to her by the plaintiff under the same decree, and (ii) a sum of money payable to her by the plaintiff under a decree which he had obtained in a cross-suit in the same Court should be set off against the Rs. 1,439 payable by her to him, with reference to ss. 246 and 247 of the Code, and that thus nothing would remain due by her which the Government could recover. No application for execution was made by the plaintiff for his Rs. 1,439 or by the defendant for her costs. On appeal from an order allowing the Collector's application, it was contended that the 'subject-matter of the suit' in s. 411 of the Code meant the sum which the successful pauper-plaintiff is entitled to get as a result of his success in the suit; but that in the suit and the cross-suit taken together, the plaintiff ultimately stood to lose a small sum, the defendant being the holder of the larger sum awarded altogether. Held, that the contention had no force, as execution had not been taken out by the plaintiff or the defendant or both, and it could not be said that the Government had been trying to execute the plaintiff's decree or was a representative of the plaintiff as holder of the decretal order in his favour for Rs. 1,439, so as to bring into operation the special rules of ss. 246 and 247 of the Code between him and the defendant. Held, also, that the plaintiff was one who, in the sense of s. 411, had succeeded in respect of part of the "subject-matter" of his suit, and on that part therefore a first charge was by law reserved and secured to the Government, which was justified in recovering it in these proceedings from the defendant, who was ordered by the decree to pay it in the same way as costs are ordinarily recoverable under the Code. Held, that the decrees in the suit and the cross-suit not having reached a stage in which the provisions of ss. 246 and 247 of the Code would come into play, no questions of set-off and consequent reduction or other modification of the "subject-matter" of the suit decreed against the defendant as payable by her to the plaintiff had arisen or could be entertained. *JANKI v. The Court granted this application, but made no order as to the payment of Court-fees. Thereupon the Collector applied to the High Court, under s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), to direct the lower Court to make an order for the payment of Court-fees under s. 412 of the Code. Held, that the Collector, though not a party to the suit, was entitled to move the High Court under s. 622 of the Code. Held, also, that s. 412 had no application to the present case, as there was no adjudication of the rights of the parties, and the plaintiff could not therefore be said to have failed in the suit. The Subordinate Judge had therefore no jurisdiction to make the order desired by the Collector. S. 412 of the Code applies only to cases of adjudicated failure and to the other cases specified, as where the plaintiff has been dispaupered, or where the suit has been dismissed under s. 97 or s. 98. A portion of that land was, in 1896, put up for sale in order to recover the amount due to Government as stamp fees in connection with the pauper suit, and the present plaintiff bought it. The same land was attached in 1899 in execution of another decree, which was passed in March, 1894. Plaintiff made a claim, which was rejected, and the land was sold to the second defendant in execution of that other decree, in September, 1899. Plaintiff now sued for a declaration that the land was not liable to be sold in satisfaction of the other decree. Held, that inasmuch as the amount of the stamp fees recoverable by Government in connection with the pauper suit was a first charge on the property, under s. 411 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the purchase by plaintiff prevailed as against the purchase by the second defendant. 4. — Right of appeal by Government—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 411, 412—Right of Government to appeal in respect of Court-fee on portion of plaintiff's claim dismissed. In a suit in formā pauperis the District Judge decreed the plaintiff's claim in part and dismissed it in part but omitted to make any provision for payment to Government of the Court-fee on the portion which was dismissed. The Secretary of State, not having been a party to the litigation in the Court below, then preferred an appeal in respect of the Court-fee on that portion of the plaintiff's claim which had been dismissed. Held, that such an appeal would lie, though the more suitable procedure would have been for the Government to have applied, through the Collector, to the Court of first instance to review its judgment and to repair the omission in its decree. *Janki v. The Collector applied to the High Court under its extraordinary jurisdiction for the rectification of the decree. The Court of first instance dismissed the suit. Thereupon the plaintiffs preferred an appeal in formā pauperis to the High Court. Pending the appeal the parties entered into a compromise, under which it was agreed (inter alia) that the appeal should be withdrawn, and that the respondent should pay to Government the Court-fees which the plaintiffs were liable to pay both in the first Court and in the Court of appeal. When the appeal came on for hearing, the appellants informed the Court of their intention to withdraw from the appeal. Thereupon the Government pleader intervened, and applied for an order directing the respondent to pay in accordance with the terms of the compromise, all the costs payable to Government on account of institution fees, etc., in the first Court as well as in the Appellate Court. This application was opposed by both parties. The Government pleader then moved the Court to dispauper the appellants under s. 414 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). Held, that, the appeal having been withdrawn, no order could be made either under s. 412 or under s. 414 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held, also, that it was not open to the Court to order the respondent to pay any fees on the strength of any agreement between the parties. Both parties appealed against this order, but pending the appeals the defendant paid the amount into Court. The plaintiff, however, refused to take it, on the ground that he had appealed against the order under which it was paid in, and the Court subsequently passed an order that the money should be returned to the defendant. But before this could be done, the money was attached by a third person, in execution of his decree against the defendant and a few days afterwards the money was paid over to him. Shortly afterwards the appeal against the order directing the defendant to pay R140-8-0 to the plaintiff was heard and the order was confirmed. Thereupon the plaintiffs applied in execution (inter alia) for payment of the sum of R140-8-0. The defendant contended that he had already paid it. The Subordinate Judge directed the defendant to pay this sum into Court within one month. The defendant appealed to the District Court, who confirmed the order of the Subordinate Judge. The defendant then appealed to the High Court. Held, that the orders of the lower Courts should be reversed. When the defendant paid the R140-8-0 into Court in execution of the decree, the Court held the money on account of the plaintiff, and the plaintiff, who had not obtained a stay of execution, could not refuse to take it because an appeal was pending. The plaintiff's refusal, therefore, to take the money out of Court did not justify the Subordinate Judge in treating the money as the defendant's and in ordering it to be paid to another judgment-creditor of the defendant without his having in any way expressed his assent to s. 81 and s. 323—Act likely to cause harm, done without a criminal intent and to prevent other harm—Causing hurt. The accused was a sepoy in a native infantry regiment. On the occasion of a fire in the city of Ahmednagar, he and the rest of his company turned out to assist in extinguishing it. He with other sepoys was stationed by their officer with orders to keep clear a space in front of the burning house, and not to allow any one not in uniform to intrude on that space. The police under the city chief constable were also engaged at the fire, and on some one of them coming round from the rear, they were warned off by the sentries. A fracas between the soldiers and the police took place, and the chief constable was kicked by the accused. For this he was charged before the Magistrate, and fined for voluntarily causing hurt under s. 323 of the Penal Code. In evidence it appeared that the police attempted to force the military guard, which had been posted as above stated, and it was further proved that the chief constable was not in uniform, and that the accused did not know who he was. It was not alleged that the kick was unnecessarily violent. Held, that the conviction was bad. The Magistrate having found that the chief constable was not in uniform, and that the accused did not know who he was, the kick was justifiable as given in good faith for the purpose of preventing much greater harm under s. 81 of the Indian Penal Code, and as a means of acting up to the military order. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. 1. Capacity for doing wrong—Malice. In construing s. 83 of the Penal Code, the capacity of doing that which is wrong is not so much to be measured by years as by the strength of the offender's understanding and judgment. The circumstances of a case may disclose such a degree of malice as to justify the application of the maxim malitia supplet aetatem.

QUEEN v. AIMONA . . . 1 W. R. Cr. 43

2. Capacity of understanding to commit offence. An objection that the accused is of such an age as not to have attained sufficient maturity of understanding to judge of the nature and consequences of his conduct is not one of a preliminary character, but rather a matter of defence to be considered with the other issues arising in the case. Where the accused is over seven years of age and under twelve, the incapacity to commit an offence only arises where the child has not attained sufficient maturity, etc. : such non-attainment would have apparently to be specially pleaded and proved. The "consequences of his conduct" mentioned in s. 83, Penal Code, are not the penal consequences to the offender, but the natural consequences which flow from a voluntary act. QUEEN v. Unsoundness of mind
—Knowledge of the nature of the act. Where the accused cut his wife's throat without any rational motive, and was captured at once without any attempt on his part to escape or offer resistance, and the evidence showed that before the commission of the offence he suffered from a failure of reasoning powers, and also that he entertained delusions as to dangers which threatened his wife :—Held, that the facts proved unsoundness of mind which prevented the accused from knowing the nature of his act, and that s. 84 of the Penal Code applied. One of the party of the deceased struck a blow on the accused which felled him to the ground. The accused rose up and inflicted a blow on the head of S, which fractured his skull causing death within a short time. Held, that under the circumstances of the case the accused did not exceed his right of private defence by inflicting the blow on the head of the deceased, as the circumstances were such as reasonably caused the apprehension that grievous hurt would, but for his action, have been the consequence of the attack that was being made upon him. ss. 109 and 366—Kidnapping from lawful guardianship—Kidnapping not a continuing offence—Abetment. One Musammatt Chunia, by making certain false representations to the mother of Jiwania, a married girl of eleven years of age, induced her to part with the custody of her daughter. Chunia took the girl away from her own village to a neighbouring village, where she was joined by one Tika. Thence Chunia and Tika took the girl about with them from place to place making unsuccessful attempts to dispose of her in marriage, until they were arrested by the chaukidar of Tiabpur, on his being informed that an attempt had been made to sell the girl in that village. Upon these findings Chunia was convicted of the offence punishable under s. 366 of the Penal Code and Tika of abetment of that offence, following the ruling in The Queen v. Samia Kaundan, I. L. R. 1 Mad. 173. On appeal to the High Court, that of Chunia was summarily rejected. As to Tika, it was held, dissenting from The Queen v. Samia Kaundan and agreeing with the view taken in Queen-Empress v. Ram Sundar, I. L. R. 19 All. 109, and Rakhal Nikari v. Queen-Empress, 2 C. W. N. 81, that the offence of kidnapping being completed as soon as the minor was actually taken out of the custody of her guardian, Tika could not properly be convicted of abetment on the hypothesis that the offence was a continuing one. But, inasmuch as there was evidence on the record that the assistance given by Tika in attempting to dispose of the girl Jiwania was the result of a conspiracy entered into before the kidnapping took

1. — Exciting disaffection towards Government—Disapprobation of doings of Government, expression of. "Disaffection" and "disapprobation" explained, and s. 124A referred to and explained to the jury. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. JOGENDRA CHUNDER BOSE I. L. R. 19 Calc. 35

2. — Evidence—Writings showing intention or animus—Letters of contributors published in newspapers—Disaffection. The accused, who was the editor, proprietor, and publisher of the "Kesari" newspaper, was charged under s. 124A of the Penal Code with exciting, and attempting to excite, feelings of disaffection to Government by the publication of certain articles, etc., in the "Kesari" in its issue of the 15th June 1897. In order to show the intention of such publications, counsel for the prosecution tendered in evidence a certain letter signed "Ganesh" which appeared in the issue of the "Kesari" of May 4, 1897. Objection was taken that it was not admissible, inasmuch as letters to newspapers often express opinions which are not the opinions of the editor and publisher. Held, that the letter was admissible to show intention and animus. S. 124A of the Penal Code explained. Meaning of the word "disaffection." QUEEN-EMPRESS v. BAL GANGADHAR TILAK I. L. R. 22 Bom. 112

3. — Seditious publication—Disaffection. The word "disaffection" in s. 124A of the Penal Code is used in a special sense as meaning political alienation or discontent, a spirit of disloyalty to the Government or existing authority. An attempt to excite feelings of disaffection to the Government is equivalent to an attempt to produce political hatred of Government as established by law, to excite political discontent, and alienate the people from their allegiance. This meaning of the word "disaffection" in the main portion of the section is not varied by the explanation. Per PARSONS, J.—The word "disaffection" used in s. 124A of the Indian Penal Code cannot be construed as meaning an absence of, or the contrary of, affection or love, that is to say, dislike or hatred, but is used in its special sense as signifying political alienation or discontent, that is to say, a feeling of disloyalty to the existing Government which tends to a disposition not to obey, but to resist and subvert the Government. Per RANADE, J.—"Disaffection" is not a mere absence or negation of love or good-will, but a positive feeling of aversion which is akin to disloyalty, a defiant insubordination of authority, or when it is not defiant, it secretly seeks to alienate the people and weaken the bond of allegiance and prepossesses the minds of the people with avowed or secret animosity to Government,—a feeling which tends to bring the Government into hatred or contempt by imputing base and corrupt motives to it, and makes them indisposed to obey or support the laws of the realm, and which promotes discontent and public disorder. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. RAMCHANDRA NARAYAN . I. L. R. 22 Bom. 152

4. Exciting disaffection—Meaning of the term "disaffection" explained. Any one who, by any of the means referred to in s. 124A of the Penal Code, excites, or attempts to excite, feelings of hatred, dislike, ill-will, enmity, or hostility towards the Government established by law in British India, excites or attempts to excite, as the case may be, feelings of "disaffection" as that term is used in s. 124A. Such feelings are necessarily inconsistent with and incompatible with a disposition to render obedience to the lawful authority of Government and to support that Government against unlawful attempts to subvert or resist it. The term "disaffection" may be taken as synonymous with "disloyalty." The ordinary meaning of the term "disaffection" as used in s. 124A is not varied by the explanation appended to that section. When a person is charged with having committed the offence punishable under s. 124A of the Penal Code, his intention may be inferred from one particular speech, article, or letter, or from that speech, article, or letter considered in conjunction with what such person has said, written, or published on another or other occasions. Where it is ascertained that the intention of such person was to excite feelings of disaffection to the Government established by law in British India, it is immaterial whether or not the words spoken, written, or published could have the effect of exciting such feelings of disaffection, and it is immaterial whether the words were true or were false, and, except on the question of punishment, or in a case in which the speaker, writer, or publisher is charged with having excited such feelings of disaffection, it is immaterial whether or not the words did in fact excite such feelings of disaffection. Queen-Empress v. Jogendra Chunder Bose, I. L. R. 19 Calc. 35; In re the petition of Bal Gangadhar Tilak, I. L. R. 22 Bom. 112, referred to. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. AMBA PRASAD I. L. R. 20 All. 55

5. Sedition—"Swaraj," incitement to secure. The incitement of the members of a public meeting to exert themselves to secure "swaraj" does not amount to the offence of sedition under s. 124A of the Penal Code, and is consequently not within the purview of s. 108 of the Criminal Procedure Code. BENI BHUSHAN ROY v. EMPEROR (1907) . I. L. R. 34 Calc. 991

6. Criminal Procedure Code, ss. 225 and 537—Actual words used, need not be stated in charge or proved in prosecution under s. 124A of the Indian Penal Code—Evidence Act, ss. 159 and 160—Relevancy of notes of speeches. Held, per BENSON and WALLIS, JJ.—The gist of an offence under s. 124A of the Indian Penal Code is the bringing or attempting to bring into hatred or contempt, or the exciting or attempting to excite disaffection towards His Majesty, etc. If an offence under s. 124A is committed by words spoken, the requirements of the law are satisfied if the charge gives such a description of the words used as is reasonably sufficient to enable the accused to know the matter with which he is charged, i.e., if the charge states the words used with substantial, though not absolute, accuracy; and it is enough if the substance of the words proved to have been used is the same as that of the words set out in the charge. Even if the words or the substance of the words used are not entered at all in the charge, this will be only an irregularity which, under s. 225 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, will not vitiate a conviction unless such omission has misled the accused and occasioned a failure of justice. Chithambaram Pillai v. Emperor, I. L. R. 32 Mad. 37, referred to. Per SANKARAN-NAIR, J.—Where a person is charged under s. 124A with exciting disaffection or bringing His Majesty into hatred or contempt, the exciting of disaffection, and not the utterance of seditious words, is the gist of the offence and the charge need not set out the words, nor need the words themselves be proved. It is, however, quite different where the person is charged with attempting to excite disaffection. Attempt implies intention, and a man's intention must be gathered from the words used by him and not from what others rightly or wrongly understood him to mean. In such cases the words themselves are the gist of the offence and they ought to be set out in the charge; and whether set out or not must be proved. Where the words, though not actually in the charge, are indicated with sufficient certainty and the accused knows the words for which he is tried, the defect in the charge can be cured under s. 225 or 537 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. What ought to be contained in a charge is a different question from what ought to be proved to secure a conviction; and although the omission to state the exact words may not vitiate the charge, the words themselves must be proved to convict a person for attempting to excite disaffection. Where a person records, not the actual words used, but simply notes of the impression made on his mind by a speech, such notes are inadmissible under s. 160 of the Evidence Act to prove the actual words used. MYLAPORE KRISHNASAMI v. 7. ————— Declaration under Act 25 of 1867, presumptive evidence of liability as printer and publisher—Criminal liability of proprietor of a newspaper—Authority of proprietor to publish, proof of—S. 14 of the Evidence Act. A person, making a statutory declaration under Act XXV of 1867 that he is the printer and publisher of a newspaper, is presumably liable as such printer or publisher, but may rebut such presumption. Ramasami v. Loganatha, I. L. R. 9 Mad. 387, 390. The liability of a proprietor is not governed by the Act and depends upon different considerations. The ground of liability in his case is that he authorised the publication of the incriminating article. The authority may be established by direct proof or as a reasonable inference from all the facts of the case. Under s. 14 of the Evidence Act, it is open to the Court to presume that the proprietor, having the control of the paper, authorises the publication of the matter which appears in it. Such a presumption may be improper in the case of a large paper, with a separate editor responsible for the selection and publication of the literary matter; but in the case of a petty paper, with no responsible editor and published under the eye of the proprietor, the presumption might be reasonable though it would be open to him to rebut such presumption, by showing that the publication was in fact not authorised by him. Though no authority to publish libellous matter may have been originally given, such authority may be inferred from the conduct of the parties, such as the publication of other libellous matter without any remonstrance or interference from the proprietor when it has come to his knowledge. Other issues of the same paper containing libellous matter are relevant as evidence to prove such authority. Mere absence of the proprietor at the time of the publication of the libel will not rebut such presumption if during such absence he exercises complete control over the paper. of the Indian Penal Code, on two charges, one with respect to each of the two articles he published on different dates in his newspaper called the "Hind Swarajya." At the trial there was no other evidence of the publication of the newspaper in Bombay except the declaration made by the accused under the Press Act, and the depositions of witnesses who received the newspaper in Bombay as Government servants in their capacity as such. The accused was convicted on both the charges and sentenced separately on each of them. It was contended in appeal that there was no evidence of the publication of the newspaper in Bombay, and that there was a misjoinder of charges vitiating the trial. Held, that the evidence on record was sufficient to prove the publication of the newspaper in Bombay. Held, further, that the trial was not bad as there had been no misjoinder of charges. EMPEROR v. 1. ————— Wantonly giving provocation with intent to cause riot—Abetment of riot by the public—Penal Code, s. 117. In August 1893 a riot took place in Bombay between Hindus and Musalmans. The excitement caused by the riot had not entirely subsided, when the accused composed and published a poem, giving an account of the outbreak, and, incidentally, extolling certain classes of the Hindu community, namely, the Ghatris and Kamatis, for the brave resistance which they had offered to the Mahomedan rioters. The poem extolled the Ghatris and Kamatis, and then followed these lines: "May God give glory to you, confer joy on you, night and day! Fight again for your country's good! Brave, brave are the Kamatis! Why fear for dying, brother, why fear for dying? Sooner or later, but only once, a man has to die." The poem was written in Gujarati, a language not ordinarily spoken by the Ghatris and Kamatis, or even by the Mahomedans. It did not appear that any copies of the work were distributed among the people who had taken part in the riot, nor did any fresh riot take place subsequently to the publication of the work. The accused were prosecuted and convicted under ss. 117 and 153 of the Penal Code (XLV of 1860) on the ground that the lines quoted above, specially the words "Fight again," were a direct instigation to the Ghaties and Kamatis to renew the disturbances. Held, that the meaning of the passages complained of was to be gathered from the whole poem. The general spirit of the poem was clearly in favour of peace and reconciliation. It consisted from beginning to end of a lamentation over the riots and the destruction and death they had caused, and of repeated counsel to peace and harmony between Hindus and Mahomedans. And there was nothing to indicate that the author's intention was to instigate the Hindus or provoke the Mahomedans to renew the disturbances. The words "Fight again" were no doubt objectionable, but it would not be a proper construction of the words to allow them to override the whole context of the work. The composition could not be regarded as an "illegal act," and its publication was not "malignant" or "wanton" within the meaning of s. 153 of the Penal Code. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. KAHANJI. . . . I. 2. ————— Bribe—"In the exercise of official functions"—Motive or reward—Essentials of the offence. S. 161 of the Indian Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860) requires proof that an official has obtained, as a motive or reward for official conduct, an illegal gratification for himself or another. That other may or may not be an official, and therefore may be wholly unconnected with the official conduct. The conduct which is contemplated as the consideration for the bribe must be that of the official obtaining it. This is clear from the phrase "in the exercise of his official functions." To obtain a bribe as a motive or reward for another's conduct does not fall within the section though it may be an abetment of that offence or cheating. The performance of the act which is consideration for the bribe is not essential. But it is essential that the bribe should be obtained "as a motive or reward." That phrase evidently means on the understanding that the bribe is given in a police officer at a police station, who, being as such officer bound to enter all reports brought to him of cognizable or non-cognizable offences in the station diary, refused to enter a report made to him concerning the commission of an offence,

a district by giving certain information which he knew to be false to the District Superintendent of Police. Held, that such person had not thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 177 or
s. 188 of the Penal Code, or the offence of attempting to "cheat" within the meaning of s. 415 of that Code. EMPRESS v. DWARKA PRASAD

7. ——— False returns furnished by vaccinators. Certain vaccinators were charged with furnishing false returns to their official superior. The Magistrate found as a fact that the returns furnished were false, but acquitted the defendants on the ground that they were not "legally bound" to furnish information within the meaning of s. 177 of the Penal Code. Held, that
s. 177 embraces every case in which a subordinate may seek to impose false information upon his superior. The defendants in the present case were public servants, and part of the duties which they undertook was to make true returns to their official superior. To make false returns was therefore an offence. ANONYMOUS 6 Mad. Ap. 48

1. False information to the police—Charge made against no specific person—Specific charge. S. 182 of the Penal Code must be read as an entire section, and, when so read, it applies to those cases in which the police are induced, upon information supplied to them, to do or omit to do something which might affect some third person, and which they would not have done had they known the truth of the matter laid before them. In the matter of the petition of GOLAM AHMED KAZI . . . I. L. R. 14 Calc. 314

2. Giving false information to a public servant. Under s. 182 of the Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), the giving of false information to a public servant is penal, when either of two consequences is intended to be caused or is known to be likely to be caused by the false information, the first being the causing the public servant "to use the lawful power of such public servant to the injury or annoyance of any person," the second being the causing the public servant "to do or omit anything which such public servant ought not to do or omit, if the true state of facts respecting which such information is given were known to him." To constitute an offence under the latter part of the section, it is not necessary to show that the act done would be to the injury or annoyance of any third person. A personated B at an examination, called the Vernacular Sixth Standard Examination. A passed the examination, and obtained a certificate from the educational authorities in B's name. B thereupon applied to the Assistant Collector to have his name entered in the list of candidates for service in the Revenue Department. He attached to this application the certificate issued in his name, as it was a rule of Government that only those who had passed the Sixth Standard Examination were eligible for employment in the Revenue Department. On receipt of this application, the Assistant Collector ordered B's name to be entered on the list of candidates. Held, that B was guilty of the offence of giving false information to a public servant within the meaning of the latter part of s. 182 of the Penal Code. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. GANESH KHANDERAO . . . I. L. R. 13 Bom. 506

3. Criminal Procedure Code, ss. 342, 428, 540—Examination on affirmation of one preferring a criminal appeal—Verification of petition of appeal. In a petition of appeal from a conviction, the appellant falsely stated that the convicting Magistrate declined to summon his witnesses. The Magistrate to whom the appeal was preferred called upon the appellant to verify the allegations in the petition of appeal on solemn affirmation, and he did so. Held, that the appellant had not committed an offence under s. 181 or 182 of the Penal Code. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. vided for in s. 182 explained. In order to constitute the offence defined in s. 182 of the Penal Code, it is not necessary that the public servant to whom false information is given should be induced to do anything or to omit to do anything in consequence of such information. The gist of the offence is not what action may or may not be taken by the public servant to whom false information is given; but the intention or knowledge (to be inferred from his conduct) of the person supplying such information. In the matter of the petition of Golam Ahmed Kazi, I. 6. and s. 189—Right of person against whom information has been falsely given to institute criminal prosecution—Consent of public servant. A person against whom information has been falsely given with a view to his injury has a right to bring a civil action for damages, with or without the consent of the public servant against whom the offence was committed; but he cannot bring a criminal charge under s. 189, or any other section of Ch. X of the Penal Code, without the permission of such public servant; the law looking upon the conduct of the person who gives the false information as an offence, not against the individual charged, but against the public servant to whom the false information was given. To constitute an offence under s. 182 of the Penal Code, the information given must be information which the informer knew or believed to be false, and it must be proved that he gave it with such knowledge. In the matter of the petition of ABDOL LUTEEF

10. ————— Giving false "information" to a public servant. M falsely informed the Collector of a district that certain zamindars had usurped possession of certain land belonging to Government, with the intent "to give trouble to such zamindars and waste the time of the public authorities." Held, that, inasmuch as such information was no more than an expression of a private person's belief that the Collector might, if he chose, sustain a civil suit with success against such zamindars, and as, had the Collector agreed with the informant, the result would not have been that he would have used his lawful power as a Collector or as a Magistrate to the injury or annoyance of such zamindars, or that he would have done anything he ought not to have done, M had not committed an offence under s. 182 of the Penal Code. *EMPRESS v. 11. ————— Public servant—Forest Act (VII of 1878). Under s. 172 of the Forest Act (VII of 1878), a forest officer is a public servant within the meaning of the Penal Code. Code, in respect of the report which he had made at the police station, and K was convicted under that section. Held, that K's conviction under s. 182 of the Penal Code was illegal, as the Magistrate had no power to entertain a complaint under that section at the instance of R, the application of s. 182 and the institution of prosecutions under it being limited to the public servant against whom the offence has been committed or to his official superior, as mentioned in s. 467 of Act X of 1872, and it is not being intended that those provisions should be enforced at the instance of private persons. Moreover, if K's complaint was false, his offence was against R, and not against the public servant to whom the complaint was made, and fell within s. 211 of the Penal Code. *EMPRESS v. S. 195, Criminal Procedure Code, clearly shows that a complaint directly made by a public servant mentioned therein is quite as sufficient as his sanction. *Empress v. Radha Kishan, I. L. 21. ——— Deed conveying property to other than legal heir—Suit by Mahomedan widow for share of property. In a suit by a Mahomedan widow against the brother of her deceased husband for her share of the property of her husband, the defendant set up a tumliknamah by which the deceased conveyed the property away to the son of the defendant. Held, that the burden of proof was on the defendant, and that he was bound to adduce the very strictest proof of the conveyance, as it cut away property from the natural heir. The tumliknamah was rejected, having regard to its terms and to the probabilities and facts of the case. SADUK ALI KHAN v. PEAREE . . . . . 9 W. R. 142

22. ——— Voluntary deed—Suit by settlor to set aside his deed. One M (the original plaintiff) was priest in the family of the first and second defendants, and was treated with much kindness by the first defendant (N), upon whom he chiefly relied for advice in worldly matters. A sum of R30,000, which was the bulk of his property, was in deposit in the defendants' firm at interest. Early in 1887 he became ill, and in June 1887 he expressed a wish to execute a trust-deed and an English will. He gave instructions to N for the trust-deed. By this deed, which contained no power of revocation, he settled R30,000 upon the first and second defendants (who were uncle and nephew), as trustees to perform his funeral ceremonies and to carry out certain religious observances and to pay two annuities, each of R25, and with the residue to found a Sanskrit class. The deed provided for the payment during his lifetime, of a sum of R100 per mensem for his maintenance and expenses, or such larger sum as he might require for such purposes, but in other respects it was not to come into operation until after his death. The will of even date gave certain property to his wife, and subject to this bequest gave the residue of his property to his sister. After receiving instructions for these documents, N took them to an attorney. From these instructions drafts were prepared, which were read over to M in his room by the attorney's managing clerk. Neither drafts, nor instructions, nor the documents themselves were, however, left with M. The drafts were then engrossed, M having made some trifling corrections in them. On the 23rd June 1887 he attended at the house of the attorney. The documents were explained to him by the attorney, and were interpreted to him by a High Court interpreter. M was then examined by a medical man with a view to ascertain whether he was capable of understanding what he was doing. M then executed the trust-deed and the will, and both were then duly attested. At the same time M signed the accounts in the defendants' books, and the balance of the money, which stood to his credit over and above the ₹30,000 comprised in the deed, was produced and made over to him, and he made it over to N to be kept by him personally. Shortly after this, M's sister and her son came to Bombay, and he fell under their influence. He became dissatisfied with what he had done with the ₹30,000, and on the 21st November 1887 he executed a will by which he purported to remove the deed and the will of the 23rd June, and he left the whole of his property to his sister. On the 2nd September 1888 his nephew took him to Surat, and on the 14th September 1888 at Surat he executed a deed revoking the trust-deed of the 23rd June 1887. He also signed instructions and a power-of-attorney under which this suit was filed. He died subsequently to the filing of the suit, and his sister and executrix became plaintiff. The plaintiff prayed that the deed of the 23rd June 1887 should be set aside on the ground of undue influence, etc., but the personal charges against the defendants were abandoned at the hearing. Held, that the deed must be set aside on the ground that the circumstances of the case threw upon the defendants the burden of showing that M understood the effect of the settlement and its finality. This they had failed to do. The facts of the case brought it within the principles deducible from Anderson v. Elsworth, 3 Giff. 154; Forshaw v. Welsby, 30 Beav. 243; and Wollaston v. Tribe, L. 23. ——— Suit for cancellation of instrument—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 39—Fiduciary relationship—Undue influence—Gift to spiritual adviser—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 111. In a suit under s. 39 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877) for cancellation of a deed of gift executed by the plaintiff in favour of the defendant, the plaintiff was a Chatri by caste, well advanced in years, and the defendant was his guru or spiritual adviser, a Brahman held in high consideration in the locality where he resided. The gift comprised the whole of the plaintiff's property and the only reason for its execution was the plaintiff's desire to secure benefits to his soul in the next world, and his having heard the defendant recite the holy book called Bhagwat. Almost immediately, after execution of the deed the plaintiff repudiated it, and sued for its cancellation on the ground of fraud. Held, that, having regard to the fiduciary relation subsisting between the parties, the improvidence of the gift, the absurdity of the reason alleged for it, and the principle recognized by s. 111 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872), the burden rested upon the defendant to show that the transaction was made without undue influence and in good faith; and, in the absence of such proof, the plaintiff was entitled to obtain cancellation of the deed. *Sital Prasad v. 24. ——— Deed of gift and endowment executed by Mahomedan widow in favour of agent—Fiduciary relationship—Burden of proving absence of undue influence. An instrument executed by a widow, after setting apart the rental of villages belonging to her as her patrimony to defray the expenses of her and her deceased husband's tombs, gave to her managing agent, who was her sole adviser, the management of the endowment in perpetuity with the residue, after the above expenditure should have been met, for himself, so that a large surplus would have remained each year in his hands and he would have been the person substantially interested. Held, that this transaction was within the well-recognized principle that every onus is thrown upon a person filling a fiduciary character towards another of showing conclusively that he has acted honestly and bona fide, without influencing the donor who has acted independently of him. In a suit by the agent's representative to have the gift enforced against the widow's successor in the estate, this burden had not, in the opinion of the Courts below, with which their Lordships concurred, been sustained, and it was held that the gift had been rightly set aside. *WAJID KHAN v. ## 16. DEED, EFFECT AND OPERATION OF.

1. ——— Deeds of gift between joint brothers of part of family estate—Deeds of partition—Subsequent partition between them of residue. Two brothers, the only members of a joint Hindu family, executed and registered mutual deeds of gift to one another of their interests in specified portions of their family estate. In after years the younger brother sued the elder for partition of the estate excepting so much of it as had already been the subject of the above gifts. The elder defended the suit on the ground that the deeds of gift had not been intended to operate, not representing any real transaction. To negative their effect, the burden of proving that the transaction was not real, but only a pretence, was laid upon the defendant who failed to adduce that proof. *SHAM CHAND PAL v. joint owners and in joint occupation of the land in dispute. Finding himself unable to execute the decree, the Mamlatdar referred the matter to the Collector for advice. The Collector, on looking into the papers of the case, ordered a surveyor to execute the decree by dividing the land in dispute and putting the decree-holder in possession of his share. The surveyor, in attempting to execute the decree, was obstructed by the accused, who was thereupon tried and convicted of the offence of voluntarily obstructing a public servant in the discharge of his public functions under s. 186 of the Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860). Held, reversing the conviction, that, as the Collector had no legal authority to issue the order to the surveyor in execution of the Mamlatdar's decree, the surveyor acting under that order was not discharging a public function, and the act of the accused was not an offence against s. 186 of the Penal Code. Held, further, that the Collector's order was so entirely ultra vires as to leave no room for the operation of either the first or the second clause of s. 99 of the Penal Code. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. A crowd collected, and the commissioner felt it would be unsafe to proceed to carry out the order by force, and was unable to do so otherwise. The defendant was prosecuted and sentenced under Penal Code, s. 186. Held, that the facts disclosed no offence under that section. The use of the word "voluntarily" in that section seems to contemplate some overt act of obstruction, and not that mere passive conduct should be penal. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. SOMMANNA

12. Obstructing public servant in discharge of his public functions—Ameen, power of, to measure lands in butwarra proceedings—Public functions—Estates Partition Act (Bengal Act VIII of 1876), ss. 112 and 116. The public functions contemplated by s. 186 of the Penal Code mean legal or legitimately authorized public functions, and were not intended to cover any act that a public functionary might choose to take upon himself to perform. A butwarra Ameen, in proceeding to measure certain lands in the course of proceedings connected with the partition of an estate under Bengal Act VIII of 1876, was obstructed by certain persons who claimed the lands and objected to their being measured. The lands were stated in the report of the Ameen to be the common land of estate No. 546 and of certain other estates. The persons who obstructed him were not co-sharers in that estate, and contended that the land sought to be measured had been divided amongst the maliks of the different estates, and different portions of it had been held separately by them. The persons so obstructing the Ameen were charged with an offence under s. 186 of the Penal Code, the Deputy Collector in charge of the butwarra proceedings being of opinion that s. 112 of the Act applied, and that the Ameen was entitled to measure the land. The accused were convicted. Held, that s. 112 is limited to cases where the community of interest in the land in dispute between the proprietors of the estate under partition as a body and the proprietors of other estates is admitted. When this is not admitted, the provisions of s. 116 apply. Held, further, that, as there was no evidence to show that such community of interest was admitted, the accused were entitled to the benefit of the doubt and to have the case treated as one under s. 116, and that, as the procedure laid down in that section had not been followed, the Ameen had no power to measure the lands, and could not be said to be a public servant acting in discharge of his public functions, and that the conviction must consequently be set aside. LILLA SINGH v. A public servant executing a warrant of arrest which is not signed by the Magistrate as required by s. 75 of the Criminal Procedure Code, but only bears his initials, and the substance of which is not notified to the person to be arrested as required by s. 80 of the Code, cannot be said to be acting in the discharge of his public functions in a manner authorized by law. A person obstructing him cannot be convicted under s. 186 of the Penal Code. ABDUL GAFUR v. QUEEN-EMPRESS

The petitioner was convicted under s. 186 of the Penal Code of obstructing a Civil Court peon, who was attaching his property in execution of a decree; the warrant of attachment was addressed to the Nazir of the Court, who delegated its execution to a peon by an endorsement of the peon's name. Held, that the Nazir had authority thus to delegate the execution of the warrant to the peon. The words "to be executed" in s. 251 of the Code of Civil Procedure would seem to imply that it was not intended that the "proper officer" should himself execute all warrants sent to him. And there is nothing in the Code which indicates in any way that warrants being either warrants of arrest or of attachment, or for distress and sale, are to be executed by the "proper officer," in any manner different from the service of summonses. The Court-fees Act (VII of 1870) distinctly contemplates that the peons are to be employed, not only for the service of summonses, notices, or orders, but also for the execution of other processes, such as warrants of arrest, or of attachment and distress. Though the authority may well be conferred in more clear and explicit terms than are expressed by a mere endorsement by the Nazir of the peon's name, still it is impossible to say that that is not sufficient evidence of the delegation. *DHARAM CHAND LAL v. Where a District Magistrate issued a warrant for the arrest and production of a witness for the purpose of giving evidence at an investigation held by the police, and in attempting to execute such warrant the police arrested the wrong person and were assaulted in the attempt:—Held, that, apart from the fact that the attempt to arrest was made on the wrong person, a District Magistrate has no authority to issue a warrant for the production of a witness at an investigation by a police-officer, but only before his own Court under ss. 76 and 81 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Held, also, that, as the investigation was held by a police-officer under Ch. XIV of the Criminal Procedure Code, the proper course was for the Sub-Inspector of Police to require the attendance of the witness under s. 160 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and, on failure by her to comply with such order, prosecute her under s. 174 of the Penal Code. Held, further, that the accused were justified in their resistance, and that no offence either under s. 143 or s. 186 of the Penal Code was committed, and that they should be acquitted. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. A notice of demand of a house-tax under the Local Boards Act, V of 1884 (Madras), was affixed to the house. The owner, who was a potter and cultivator by occupation, was in the village at the time. He did not pay the tax. A warrant of distress was issued, the house-register not having been completely filled up, and a bucket and spade belonging to the defaulter were attached. The defaulter successfully resisted the distraint. Held, that the provisions of the Act had been sufficiently complied with as regards the preliminary steps for making the demand and the service of notice, and the fact that the spade and the bucket were protected from attachment under s. 94 did not justify the resistance, and accordingly that the defaulter was guilty of offences under Penal Code, ss. 186 and 353. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. 14. Act XXXI of 1860, s. 26—Criminal Procedure Code (Act XXV of 1861), ss. 250, 251—Carrying fire-arms without license—Disobedience of an order promulgated by a public servant. A Magistrate issued a notification that all persons desirous of carrying arms should take out a license enabling them to do so under s. 26 of Act XXXI of 1860; and certain persons were, in consequence of his notification, arrested and brought before him charged in a police report with carrying arms without license. No summons or warrant had been applied for, nor any complaint lodged before the Magistrate previous to the arrest of the prisoners. No charge in writing was framed as required under ss. 250, 251 of the Criminal Procedure Code. No evidence was taken, but the prisoners admitted carrying the fire-arms. The Magistrate convicted them, under s. 188 of the Penal Code, of disobedience of an order duly promulgated by a public servant. There was no evidence that the disobedience would cause, or tend to cause, annoyance, obstruction, or injury to human life, health, or safety. Held, the convictions must be quashed. The Magistrate accepted the report of the majority of the jury so constituted and made an order under s. 526. The order having been disobeyed proceedings were taken under s. 188 of the Penal Code against the person to whom it was directed, and he was convicted and sentenced to imprisonment. Held, that, the report upon which action was taken not being the report of a regularly constituted jury, the order and the conviction and sentence passed on disobedience thereto were illegal. *EMPRESS v. Previously to November 1885, B sold an 8-anna share of his interest in the disputed land to C, who at the time of his purchase had notice of the order of the 21st of May 1883. In November 1885 B and others went to the disputed lands, and attempted to turn A out of possession by force, and to compel the tenants of the lands to pay rent and give kabuliats to B and C. At the time that B and his companions went to the disputed land, the latter were aware of the order of the 21st of May 1883, though none of them was a party to the enquiry then made by the District Magistrate. In December 1885 they were all tried and found guilty of disobedience to an order duly promulgated by a public servant. Held, that the conviction was right. GOLUCK CHANDRA PAL v. KALI CHARAN DE

Also that, as a matter of fact, he did not, by removing J's corpse from one field to another, cause any evidence of J's murder, which that corpse afforded, to disappear, and his act, although his object may have been to divert suspicion from himself and B, did not constitute the offence defined in that section. *EMPRESS OF INDIA v. It was proved that the razai belonged to the deceased, that it was found concealed in a stack, and that it was pointed out by the accused to the police. The accused was convicted of concealing evidence of the murder, with the intention of screening the offender from legal punishment, under s. 201 of the Penal Code. Held, that the conviction must be quashed, inasmuch as, if the razai had not been concealed or destroyed, its presence or existence would have been no evidence of the murder. 11. Causing disappearance of evidence of an offence. Held, that it is necessary, in order to justify a conviction under s. 201 of the Penal Code, that an offence for which some person has been convicted, or is criminally responsible, should have been committed. EMPRESS OF INDIA v. ABDUL KADIR I. L. R. 3 All. 279

12. Causing disappearance of evidence of an offence—Omitting to report a sudden, unnatural, or suspicious death. Before an accused can be convicted of an offence under s. 201 of the Penal Code, it must be proved that an offence, the evidence of which he is charged with causing to disappear, has actually been committed, and also that the accused knew or had information sufficient to lead him to believe that the offence had been committed. Empress of India v. Abdul Kadir, I. L. R. 3 All. 279, followed. MATUKI MISSER v. QUEEN-EMPRESS I. L. R. 11 Calc. 619

13. Abetment of murder—Causing disappearance of evidence of offence. Prisoner was present at a murder without being aware that such an act was to be committed. Through fear he not only did not interfere to prevent the commission of the crime, but joined the murderers in concealing the body. Held, that he was guilty, not of abetment of murder, but of causing the disappearance of evidence of a crime under s. 201 of the Penal Code. QUEEN v. GOBURDHUN BERA . . . 6 W. R. Cr. 80

14. Causing disappearance of evidence. The accused was attacked by a man whom he found by a hole cut in his house for the purpose of committing a burglary, and struck out at the man a blow which caused his death. Held, that the accused simply exercised his right of private defence, and was guilty of no offence. Two other men who helped him to remove the dead body, and were accused of causing the disappearance of evidence, knowing that an offence had been committed under s. 201, Penal Code, were also acquitted, for that section contemplates a belief that an offence has been committed, and as the first prisoner was acquitted of all offence, it may be presumed that the other prisoners did not believe that any offence had been committed.

15. Causing disappearance of evidence of supposed murder—Want of proof of commission of offence. S. 201 of the Penal Code applies merely to the person who screens the principal or actual offender, and not the principal or actual offender himself. The accused were charged with murder and also with causing the disappearance of the corpse of the deceased with the intention of screening the murderer from punishment under s. 201 of the Penal Code. Evidence for the prosecution pointed conclusively to one or other of them being the actual murderer; but it was impossible upon the evidence to say which of them caused the death. They were acquitted on the charge of murder, but convicted on the charge under s. 201. Held, that the conviction could not stand. TORAP ALI v. QUEEN-EMPRESS . I. L. R. 22 Calc. 638

The amount due under the certificate cannot be regarded as a forfeiture or fine, but is money due under a decree, the certificate having the force and effect of a decree of a Civil Court. Where such an offence was taken cognizance of by a Magistrate without sanction for the prosecution being given, as should have been the case, but there was nothing in the proceeding to show that the want of such sanction had in fact occasioned a failure of justice:—Held, that the conviction was not bad only on that account. SUNDER DASADH v. Code of Civil Procedure. The judgment-debtor, being under the circumstances compelled to deposit the amount of the decree in Court, applied for and obtained sanction to prosecute the decree-holder for an offence under s. 210 of the Penal Code. It was contended that the case did not fall within that section, as the satisfaction, not having been certified to the Court, could not be recognized by the Court executing the decree, and that consequently no offence had been committed. Held, that the words "after it has been satisfied," used in s. 210 of the Penal Code, indicate only the fact of the satisfaction of the decree. The fact that the satisfaction is of such a nature that the Court executing the decree could not recognize it, does not prevent the decree-holder from being properly convicted of an offence under that section. *MADHUB CHUNDER MOZUMDAR v. The judgment-debtor then applied for and obtained sanction to prosecute the decree-holder under s. 210 of the Penal Code. Held, that such sanction must be revoked, because the decree had not been caused to be executed and therefore no offence under s. 210 of the Penal Code had been committed. SHAMA CHARAN DAS v. EMPEROR (1904)

2. ————— Preferring a false charge—Statement not reduced to writing by police officer. A person was convicted, under s. 211 of the Penal Code, of having preferred a false charge. It appeared that the accused had stated to a police officer that certain of the prosecution witnesses had stolen his goats, and that he had made this statement intending to set the criminal law in motion against those persons. The statement had not been reduced to writing in accordance with the requirements of s. 154 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. On its being contended that there was no evidence of a false charge within the meaning of s. 211:—Held, (i) that the test is—did the person, who makes the charge, intend to set the criminal law in motion against the person against whom the charge is made; (ii) that (it being clear from the evidence that the accused did so intend) the fact that the statement made by the accused to the police officer had not been reduced to writing in accordance with s. 154 of the Code of Criminal Procedure did not prevent the statement made from being a false charge within the meaning of that section. MALLAPPA REDDI v. EMPEROR (1904)
I. L. R. 27 Mad. 127

3. ————— False charge—Improper order for prosecution. It is not in every case, which a Magistrate considers to be false, that he should direct under s. 476 of the Criminal Procedure Code a prosecution under s. 211, Penal Code. Each case must be judged by its own facts. Where, therefore, the Magistrate and the Judge came to different conclusions upon the evidence which was of a doubtful character and the complainant was a boy of 12 years of age, it was held that the Magistrate should not have directed his prosecution, and his order was accordingly set aside. EMPEROR v. GOPAL BARIK (1906)

4. ————— False charge—Practice—Opportunity to be given to prove charge before prosecuting. Where it is intended to prosecute any person under s. 211 of the Indian Penal Code such person ought to be given an opportunity of substantiating, if he can, the charge which he has brought before he is prosecuted. *Queen-Empress v. Information of an alleged dacoity was given to a village munsif, who sent a report to the police. The police thereupon investigated the case and rejected it as false. The informant was prosecuted under s. 211 of the Penal Code. Held, that there was no institution of criminal proceedings by the informant, as the village munsif had no power to investigate in cases of dacoity. The informant had made no "false charge" within the meaning of s. 211, as it was not made to one having power to investigate and send up for trial. The subsequent investigation was not the result of the information given, but of the report sent by the village munsif. Karim Buksh v. Queen-Empress, I. L. R. 17 Cal. 574, followed. CHINNA RAMANA GOWD v. EMPEROR (1908). I. L. R. 31 Mad. 508

s. 211—contd.

6. Complaint to Village Magistrate is a charge and an institution of criminal proceedings within the meaning of s. 211, Indian Penal Code, if it is his duty to forward such complaint for action by the police—Criminal Procedure Code, ss. 45, 154, 161 and 162. On the question raised by a reference from the Sessions Judge whether a person giving false information about an alleged offence to a Village Magistrate can be prosecuted for an offence under s. 211 of the Indian Penal Code:—Held, per BENSON and MUNRO, JJ. (SANKARAN-NAIR, J., dissenting), that a false complaint to a Village Magistrate of an offence, when the information is one which, under s. 45 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, the Village Magistrate is bound to pass on to the higher constituted authorities, will amount to an offence under s. 211 of the Indian Penal Code. The words "false charge" in s. 211 must not be understood in a technical or restricted sense, but in its ordinary meaning of a false accusation made to any authority bound by law to investigate it or to take any steps in regard to it, such as giving information of it to superior authorities; and institution of criminal proceedings includes the setting of the criminal law in motion. The complaint to the Village Magistrate, in such a case, amounts to a "charge" and is also an institution of criminal proceedings within s. 211 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. It would be otherwise, if the offence complained of is one in regard to which the information need not, under s. 45 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, be passed to the higher authorities. Chinna Ramana Gowd v. Emperor, I. L. R. 31 Mad. 506, dissented from. Obiter: The taking of a complaint to any of the other persons who, under s. 45 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, are bound to pass such information to higher authorities, may also fall within s. 211, Indian Penal Code. Per SANKARAN-NAIR, J.—Where information of an offence, "given to a Village Magistrate," is forwarded by him to a police officer and the latter takes a written statement from the person giving such information, such statement is not one taken under s. 154 but under ss. 161 and 162 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. It is not a complaint but a statement by a witness in an investigation under s. 157,

s. 211—concl'd.

and no charge under s. 211, Indian Penal Code, can be founded on such statement. To constitute a "false charge," it must be made to a Court or officer, who has powers to investigate and send up for trial. S. 45 of the Code of Criminal Procedure imposes the duty of forwarding information to superior authorities on a number of persons other than Village Magistrates and the Legislature could not have intended to constitute all such persons authorities before whom criminal proceedings may be instituted. S. 45 does not impose the duty of reporting in the case of bailable offences, and if the duty to report is taken as the determining test, it will follow that the information is to be considered as a proceeding in some cases and in others not. *SESSIONS JUDGE OF TINNEVELLY DIVISION v. These rupees were stolen and the appellant on the discovery of the theft gave certain information to the police, which led to the discovery of 64 of other counterfeit coins in C's house. C was separately tried and convicted under s. 243 of the Penal Code of being in possession of the latter coins. C and the appellant were also tried jointly and were convicted; C under s. 240 of the Penal Code with reference to the 50 counterfeit rupees he had made over to the appellant and the appellant under s. 243 of the Code of being in possession of the said rupees. On appeal it was contended that C could not be tried for an offence under s. 240 after he had been previously convicted of the possession of base coin under s. 243 of the Penal Code, and further that the joint trial was bad in law. Held, that the joint trial was valid, that the trial of C under s. 240 of the Penal Code was legal, it being for an offence distinct to that for which he had been previously convicted. *EMPEROR v. — s. 292—Distributing obscene pamphlet —Definition—Intention. The test of obscenity, with reference to a charge of distributing obscene literature, is whether the tendency of the matter is to deprave and corrupt those whose minds are open to such immoral influences and into whose hands a publication of this kind may fall. If a publication is detrimental to public morals and calculated to produce a pernicious effect in depraving and debauching the minds of the persons into whose hands it may come, it will be an obscene publication, which it is the intention of the law to suppress. Empress v. Inderman, I. L. R. 3 All. 837, Queen-Empress v. Pareshram Yesvant, I. L. R. 20 Bom. 193, and The Queen v. Hicklin, L. R. 3 Q. B. 300, referred to. The question whether a publication is or is not obscene is a question of fact. If a publication is in fact obscene, it is no defence to a charge of selling or distributing the same that the intention of the person so charged was innocent. Reg. v. Gathercole, 2 Lewin C. Conditional line clear certificate—Collision—Remote cause—Contributory negligence. The Bengal Nagpur Railway is worked on the line clear and caution message system so that no train can be started from any station without a line clear certificate, which in terms is a copy of a telegram to that effect from the next station. B, an assistant station master at a station G, had in anticipation of receiving such a telegram and against rule (and in order, as he explained, to save time) written out in the prescribed form book a conditional line clear message (which further did not contain all the necessary particulars) to the effect that on the arrival at G of a down train then due from a station S, the line would be clear for a certain up train at G to start for S. The guard of the latter train thereafter without the knowledge of B and also against rules, entered the station master's room in his absence, tore this imperfect certificate from out of the book and without reading it as he ought to have done, signed and passed it on to the driver and gave the signal for the train to start, but without taking the permission of the station master, as the rules required. The driver also without examining the certificate started the train and a collision took place in which several persons, including the driver, were killed. B and the guard were both convicted under s. 304A of the Penal Code and s. 101 of the Railways Act. Held, that B was not liable. The consequences were too remote to have been caused by B's writing out the certificate in disobedience of the rule. BAL KRISHNA v. EMPEROR (1904) 8 C. W. N. 645

The warrant was sent to a certain thana to be executed. It was there, after being copied into a book kept for that purpose at the thana, made over to a particular constable for execution. When the constable to whom the warrant had been made over had left the thana, it was discovered that D was in a village other than that in which he had been supposed to be. Thereupon the officer temporarily in charge of the thana made a copy from the book at the thana, endorsed on the back the names of one N and some other constables and having signed the endorsement, sent N and the others out with this paper to arrest D. N and his companions arrested D ; but, as they were returning with him in custody, some of D's friends aided by D himself attacked them, rescued D, and caused hurt to the police. Held, that the police officers concerned in arresting D under the circumstances above described were not acting in the lawful discharge of their duty within the meaning of s. 332 of the Penal Code, so as to render the accused liable to conviction under that section ; but, inasmuch as they were acting in good faith under the colour of their office, s. 99 of the Penal Code applied, and D and his associates

The constable was not engaged in the execution of his duty as a public servant and was technically guilty of house trespass, and his action was calculated to cause annoyance to the inmates of the house, and was insulting to the accused, who was justified in causing the slight harm which he had inflicted on the constable. —Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 363, 366, 498.
The accused was tried on charges under ss. 363 (kidnapping from lawful guardianship) and 366 (kidnapping a woman) of the Indian Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860). At the conclusion of the evidence to establish those charges and after the evidence for the defence had been recorded, the Court added a charge under s. 498 (enticing a married woman) of the Code notwithstanding the objection by the accused's counsel. The trial ended in conviction of the accused on all the three charges. The accused appealed contending that the procedure adopted was contrary to the provisions of s. 199 of the Criminal Procedure Code and to the spirit of s. 238 of the Code. Held, (i) that the procedure adopted in the case was not regular. The additional charge framed at the stage it was framed, notwithstanding the objection by the accused's counsel, was prejudicial to the accused; (ii) that the conviction under s. 498 of the Indian Penal Code should be set aside and further investigation be made into the remaining charges. *EMPEROR v. 1. Selling or hiring minor for purpose of prostitution. To constitute an offence under s. 372 of the Penal Code, it is not necessary that there should have been a disposal tantamount to a transfer of possession or control over the minor's person. REG. v. ARUNACHELLAM

2. Disposing of and receiving girls for purpose of prostitution. The prisoners were convicted, the one of disposing of, and the other of receiving, two children, females under the age of sixteen years, with intent that such females should be used for the purposes of prostitution. The evidence showed that the children were disposed of and registered as dancing girls of a pagoda for the purpose of being brought up as dancing girls. Held, that offences under ss. 372 and 373 of the Penal Code had been committed, and that the prisoners were properly convicted. Ex parte PADMAVATI . . . 5 Mad. 415

3. Dedication of minor girl to service of temple.—Disposal for purposes of prostitution. Held, that the dedication of a minor girl under the age of sixteen years to the service of a Hindu temple, by the performance of a religious ceremony, where it was shown that it was almost invariably the case that girls so dedicated led a life of prostitution, was a disposing of such minor knowing it to be likely that she would be used for the purpose of prostitution within the meaning of s. 372 of the Penal Code. REG. v. JAILI BHAVIN
6 Bom. Cr. 60

4. Illegal disposal of minor.—Dedication of dancing-girl to temple. A dancing-woman of a temple applied to the manager of the temple for the appointment of a minor girl, whom she falsely described as her daughter, to her kothu miras; the manager ordered that the girl be placed on the pay abstract like other dancing-girls, and she was employed about the temple, though the ceremony of tying the bottu (after which the girl could not be married) did not take place. Held, that the above facts constituted prima facie evidence that an offence under Penal Code, s. 372, had been committed by the dancing-woman, the manager abovenamed, and the parents of the girl. SRINIVASA v. ANNASAMI . I. L. R. 15 Mad. 41

5. ————— Disposal of a minor—Dedication of a girl in a temple. The accused dedicated his minor daughter as a Basivi by a form of marriage with an idol. It appeared that a Basivi is incapable of contracting a lawful marriage, and ordinarily practises promiscuous intercourse with men, and that her sons succeed to her father's property. Held, the accused had committed an offence under Penal Code, s. 372. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. BASAVA . I. L. R. 15 Mad. 75

6. ————— Illegal disposal of a minor—Dedication of girl to temple as dancing-girl—Revision. A dancing-woman (fourth accused) of a temple applied to the manager (first accused) of the temple for the appointment of a girl under the age of sixteen, whom she had adopted as her daughter, to her kothu mirasi office, to which duties more or less connected with the preparation of provisions of the temple were attached. The manager, before whom the girl had sung and danced, ordered that she be placed on the pay abstract like other dancing-girls, and she was employed in the abovementioned duties about the temple for about five months. It appeared that the dancing-women of the temple lived partly at least by prostitution, and there was evidence that the girl sang and danced in the temple, received wages and wore a bottu (an emblem of marriage). The Magistrate upon these facts refused to frame a charge against the manager of the temple and the adoptive mother of the minor under the Penal Code, s. 372. Held per COLLINS, C. J. (PARKAR, J., dissenting), that the Magistrate should have framed a charge. On a petition under the Criminal Procedure Code, ss. 435, 439, preferred by the complainant, who was a dismissed servant of the temple, after the prosecution had been pending for two years, it appeared that the girl had suffered no harm. Held, that, whether or not the Magistrate should have framed a charge, the High Court was not bound to send the case for re-trial. SRINIVASA v. ANNASAMI . I. L. R. 15 Mad. 323

7. ————— Minor, illegal disposal of—Dedication of a minor to the service of a temple with the knowledge that she was likely to be used for immoral purposes—Dancing-girls. The accused dedicated his minor daughter, five or six years of age, to the service of a temple as a dancing-girl. The evidence showed that dancing-girls attached to a temple, as a rule, led immoral lives. Held, that these facts were sufficient to constitute an offence under s. 372 of the Penal Code. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. 8. ————— and s. 373—Obtaining possession of minor for purpose of prostitution. The prisoner was tried upon a charge of having obtained possession of Dowlat Bee, a minor aged ten years, with intent that she should be used for an unlawful and immoral purpose,—that is to say, for the purpose of illicit intercourse,—and having thereby committed an offence under s. 373 of the Penal Code. The evidence showed that the prisoner met Dowlat Bee, a girl, eleven years old, in a street at Triplicane, and promised to give her a pice if she would accompany him into an uninhabited house close by and allow him to have sexual intercourse with her. The girl went willingly with the prisoner, and both were detected in the act having sexual intercourse. The girl had gone out without permission, had not attained the age of puberty, and the evidence tended to show that the girl had not before had sexual connexion. The jury convicted the prisoner. Held, by the High Court, that the case proved against the prisoner did not make out the offence charged. QUEEN v. SHAIK ALI 5 Mad. 473

9. ————— Obtaining a minor for prostitution—Dancing-girl caste—Adoption. A woman, being a member of the dancing-girl caste, obtained possession of a minor girl and employed her for the purpose of prostitution; she subsequently obtained in adoption another minor girl from her parents, who belonged to the same caste. She and the parents of the second girl were charged together under ss. 372, 373 of the Penal Code. The charges related to both girls. Held, that ss. 372, 373 of the Penal Code may be applicable in a case where the minor concerned is a member of the dancing-girl caste. Per MUTTUSAMI AYYAR, J.—It would be no offence if the intention was that the girl should be brought up as a daughter, and that, when she attains her age, she should be allowed to select either to marry or follow the profession of her prostitute mother. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. RAMANNA . I. L. R. 12 Mad. 273

10. ————— Letting to hire a girl under sixteen for immoral purpose for one occasion—Prostitution for a course of life—Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882), s. 273. A young prostitute under 16 years of age was brought to a house of assignation by the accused at the request of the complainant and for his supposed use on that one occasion, it not being contemplated that the girl should be sold or let out for a period of employment, or for the purpose of being employed by the complainant as a prostitute, or for the purpose of being disposed of by him for that course of life. Held, that such a letting out by the accused was not within the meaning of s. 372 of the Penal Code, which on the authorities contemplates a case of letting or hiring or other similar transaction by which the possession of a girl is obtained with the intention of employing her habitually for the purpose of indiscriminate sexual intercourse. *Dowlat Bee v. 11. ———— Buying or selling minor for the purpose of prostitution, etc. Certain persons, falsely representing that a minor girl of a low caste was a member of a higher caste, induced a member of such higher caste to take her in marriage and to pay money for her in the full belief that such representation was true. Held per STUART, C.J., that such persons could not be convicted on these facts of offences under ss. 372 and 373 of the Penal Code. Per OLDFIELD, J., and STRAIGHT, J., that if such girl was disposed of for the purpose of marriage, it could not be said, because the marriage might be invalid under Hindu law, that such persons acted with the intention that she should be employed or used for the purposes of prostitution or for any unlawful and immoral purpose, or that they knew it to be likely that she would be employed or used for such purpose, and consequently they could not be convicted of an offence under those sections. Per PARSON, J., and SPANKIE, J., that such girl having been disposed of for the purpose of marriage although the marriage might be objectionable under Hindu law, it did not appear that it was wholly invalid, and therefore such intent or knowledge could not certainly be presumed, and such persons could not be convicted of offences under those sections. *EMPRESS OF INDIA v. for purposes of prostitution. The District Magistrate of Sholapur convicted accused No. 1 of an offence under s. 372 and accused No. 2 of abetment of the offence under ss. 372 and 108A of the Indian Penal Code, and sentenced them each to six months' rigorous imprisonment. Held, that there was no offence committed in British India, and therefore the accused No. 2 was not guilty of abetment, and s. 108A of the Penal Code had no application to the present case. Mere intention not followed by any act cannot constitute any offence, and an indirect preparation which does not amount to an act which amounts to a commencement of the offence does not constitute either a principal offence or an attempt or abetment of the same. The intention of either of the accused while they were staying at Sholapur did not constitute any offence, and their removal with the girl to Tuljapur did not by itself constitute an abetment. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. under s. 373 of the Penal Code, it is not necessary that the intention or knowledge of likelihood as to the employment of the minor for purposes of prostitution should be with reference to employment either immediate or at some definite and not very remote future period; but an offence under the section is complete as soon as a girl is purchased with the guilty intention or knowledge of likelihood that she will, while still a minor under the age of sixteen years, be employed for that purpose, although the point of time for such employment may be remote by reason of her physical incapacity for the purpose. H. the father of two girls, twins about a year old, sold one of them to K. a prostitute, for R9, and within ten days of such sale also sold her the other for R14. K. was shown to have previously purchased another child whom she had brought up from her infancy, and who was then living with her and leading the life of a prostitute. Both H. and K. made confessions as to the guilty knowledge and intention with which the sale of the two children was made. K.'s confession was made within two hours after her arrest, and immediately thereafter she was committed to hajat for seven days. On the seventh day, on being brought up for trial before the Deputy Magistrate, she retracted her confession and assigned an innocent reason for her purchase of the girl. H. and K. were tried jointly, H. being charged with an offence under s. 372, viz., selling the girls for the purpose of prostitution, and K. with an offence under s. 373, viz., buying for the same purpose. Neither was charged with abetting the other. The two confessions were used as evidence, and there was other evidence tending to prove the intention and guilty knowledge. The Deputy Magistrate convicted each of the offence with which they were charged. On appeal the Sessions Judge acquitted K. on the ground that the offence under s. 373 could not be committed unless the intention was that the minor was to be used for the purpose of prostitution at some definite future time, and that it would be carrying the law too far to hold that the intention had reference to a period some twelve or fourteen years after the purchase when the minor became capable of being used for that purpose. Held, for the reason above stated, that the acquittal on that ground was erroneous. Held, further, that having regard to the circumstances under which the confession of K. was given and retracted, it was open to suspicion, and could not safely be acted upon, and that the confession made by H. was not legally admissible against her, as they were not being tried jointly for the same offence. Held, also, that, having regard to the provisions of s. 106, ill. (a) of the Evidence Act, and to the fact that there was evidence apart from the confessions, which tended to show the knowledge and intention which the character and circumstances of the act suggested, the onus lay on K. to show that the intention was other than that which the act suggested, or that the employment of the girls as prostitutes was

On its being contended that there was no evidence of intent to support a conviction under s. 373 of the Indian Penal Code:—Held, that there was evidence before the Court to support the conviction. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. Theft—Charge of stealing chanks—Shell-fish taken from beds in sea—Fæ naturæ—“ Possession ” of complainants—Subject of theft. “ Chanks ” (popularly included among shell-fish, but really large molluscs) are found buried in beds of sand or in the sandy crevices of coral reefs in Palk's Bay, a large bay landlocked by British dominions for eight-ninths of its circumference and containing numerous islands, which form part of the districts, to which they are adjacent on the shores of India and Ceylon. It was shown by evidence that this bay (as well as parts of the adjacent Gulf of Mannar) had been effectively occupied for centuries by the inhabitants of India and Ceylon, respectively; that the “ chanks ” found therein had for centuries been the monopoly of the rulers of the country, both in India and Ceylon, and that licenses to gather them had been granted by the sovereign; and that "chank royalty" was one of the heads of revenue on which permanent assessment of an adjacent zamindari was fixed in 1802. Petitioner, who had leased from the Rajah of Ramnad "the chank beds" five miles off the coast of his zamindari, charged the counter-petitioners with having committed the offence of theft of "chanks" from these beds. On the defence being raised that "chanks" were fish, and were feræ nature and that those in question had been taken from beds in the open sea and had therefore not been taken from the possession of the complainant and could not be the subject of theft:—Held, that the "chanks" in question were capable of being the subject of theft. *ANNAKUMARU PILLAI v. 1. Theft—Dishonestly quarrying and removing stones from land in possession of another. Stones, when quarried and carried away, are "things severed from the earth" (within the meaning of s. 378, explanation 1, of the Penal Code) and are "moveable property" (within the meaning of s. 22) and as such are capable of being the subject of theft. A person, who quarries and carries away stones from land in the possession of another, commits theft. Queen-Empress v. Kottayya, I. L. R. 10 Mad. 255, dissented from. *VENKATAPPAYYA SASTRI v. 2. Theft—Claim of title—Bonâ fides—Jurisdiction of Criminal Court—Servant, act committed by, at master's bidding—Guilty knowledge, proof of—High Court—Jurisdiction in revision—Finding of fact of lower Court, interference with. Although, as a rule, the findings of fact of the lower tribunal are accepted by the High Court in revision cases, there are exceptions. One must be careful to see that the criminal law is not put in motion with a view to assistance in the prosecution of a civil claim. The Criminal Courts should not convict of theft any person, who asserts a claim of right, unless it is in a position to say that that claim is a mere pretence. A servant should not be held guilty of the offence of theft, when what he did was at his master's bidding, unless it should have been shown that he participated in his master's knowledge of the dishonest nature of the acts. There must be some evidence before the Court from which such knowledge on the part of the servant

can be inferred. HARI BHUMALI v. EMPEROR (1905) . 9 C. W. N. 974

3. Theft—Dishonest taking—Bonâ fide claim of ownership by accused over property in possession of third party—Disputed ownership of land—Possession summarily taken by Revenue authorities—Province of Civil Courts to decide question of ownership between Government and private persons. The petitioner was convicted of theft of certain bamboos, which he said he cut on his own patta land, but which the prosecution alleged he cut on Government poramboke land adjacent to his own. Prior to his conviction, disputes had arisen between the Revenue authorities and the petitioner regarding the ownership of the land. The petitioner contended that he bonâ fide believed the bamboos to be his property at the time he cut and removed them. The Magistrate, finding that the Revenue authorities had taken possession of the land at the time the bamboos were removed, convicted the petitioner. Held, that the conviction was wrong. The questions to be considered were, (i) whether the bamboos did in fact belong to the petitioner or to Government; (ii) whether, if they did not belong to the petitioner, he bonâ fide believed they did. It is the province of the Civil Courts to decide questions of ownership of land between Government and private parties, and if the Revenue authorities take summary possession of land as in the present case, they become mere trespassers and there is nothing dishonest in the owner taking possession of his own property. *ALGARASAWMI TEVAN v. Possession of stolen property—Joint Hindu family—Liability of head of the family or managing member. Stolen property consisting of a considerable quantity of cloth, weighing about five maunds, was discovered on search by the police in a locked room in a house belonging to, and inhabited by, a joint Hindu family composed of a father, son and grandson. The son was found to be the managing member of the family, and the key of the room in which the stolen property was found was produced by him. The object of the accused was to get the complainant to go to Calcutta that he might be sent from there to Assam as a tea garden coolie. Held, that the acts of the accused amounted to an attempt to cheat and therefore the conviction under ss. 417 and 511 of the Penal Code was right. KISHORI LAL CHATTERJI v. The accused was put upon his trial before the Sessions Court on charges under ss. 471 and 471½ of the Penal Code. Upon motion to the High Court it was held that a previous acquittal covered the charge under s. 471, and that the accused could be tried only under s. 471½. When the case came to trial the Sessions Judge amended the charge to one under s. 471½:—Held, that the Judge had full power under the law to amend the charge, and that the High Court did not "intend to fetter his discretion." 2. Mortgage—Dishonestly or fraudulently preventing debt being available for creditors—Debt—Attempt—Application to withdraw money paid into Court—Penal Code, ss. 422 and 511. The petitioners mortgaged their property, and under the terms of the agreement certain persons were appointed managers of the estate under certain conditions in regard to payment of the money realised by them. In execution of a decree obtained by the managers in a suit brought in the names of the petitioners, a certain patni talukh was sold for R3,000. The debtor settled with the petitioners that, on payment of R1,000, the sale was to be set aside. The money was paid into Court, and an application was made by the petitioners for the withdrawal of this money. The Court, however, made no order on this application. The petitioners were convicted of an attempt to commit an offence under s. 422 of the Penal Code. Held, that, having regard to the relation between the petitioners and their managers, at whose instance the proceedings were taken, it could not properly be said that an attempt to commit an offence under s. 422 of the Penal Code was made. Also, that the interference of the petitioners and their application to obtain the money paid into Court might have been breaches of their contract with the mortgagees, but such conduct could not necessarily be regarded as dishonest or fraudulent so as to render them liable to punishment. Their attempt to get this money was more to put an end to the management than to prevent the money from being available for payment of their debt under the mortgage. Nobin Chunder Mud-duck, 22 W. absence of such proof—Illegality. Where a distraint is made under the Rent Recovery Act for arrears of rent there is no presumption that it is legally made; and, if persons are charged with having dishonestly removed property to avoid it, the prosecution must prove that it was a legal distraint. In the absence of such proof, persons who have resisted the distraint or have removed their property to avoid it, cannot be convicted of an offence, inasmuch as they had a right of private defence of their property unless the distraint was legal. *KING-EMPEROR v. But, where it is proved that the crops have been removed dishonestly, or fraudulently, an offence is committed under s. 424, even though the zamindar, under the terms of the tenancy, acquires no property in the share due to him until the raiyats have delivered it to him. *SUBUDHI RANTHO v. *Mischief—Definition—Fishery—Draining off water from river to the detriment of the fishing rights therein. D, as lessee of Government, held rights of fishery in a particular stretch of river C, by diverting the water of that river, converted the bed of the river for a considerable distance into dry land, or land with a very shallow covering of water upon it, and by so doing he was enabled to destroy, and did destroy, very large quantities of fish both mature and immature. Held, that when C deliberately changed the course and condition of the river in the manner described to the detriment of D, he was guilty of the offence of mischief mentioned in s. 426 of the Penal Code. Forgery—Intention to cause it to be believed that document was made at a time at which it was not made—Proof of. On 25th of Jaista a bill was presented to the accused in his shop by B, a servant of H, for payment of money due by the accused to H. On the bill was printed a stipulation that any payment on account of the bill, unless endorsed on its back, would not be admitted. The prosecution alleged that the accused took the bill from B and (in the presence of B and several other persons) wrote on its back the endorsement, 17th Jaista through B, R501, whereupon B snatched the bill away from the accused and asked for payment of the amount thus entered on the bill, to which the accused answered "go away, I have paid." Upon these allegations the accused was convicted on charges of forgery and attempt to cheat. The defence was that R501 had in fact been paid to B on the 17th Jaista and had accordingly been entered in the books of the accused (which were produced) on 17th Jaista, but that the payment had not been endorsed on the bill on 17th Jaista as B had not brought the bill with him on that date, that the bill was endorsed by the accused in the manner mentioned on 25th Jaista and that B took it away without protest or altercation of any kind. Held, on the facts generally that there was no evidence to go to the jury in respect of either of the charges. Held, as to the charge of forgery, that the circumstances of the case did not justify an inference that the endorsement was made by the accused with the intention of causing it to be believed that it was made on the 17th and not on 25th of Jaista when in fact, it was made. Held, as to the charge of attempting to cheat, that the bill having been snatched away from the accused before he had given any indication of what he meant to do with it, the acts of the accused did not constitute an attempt to cheat, supposing that it was cheating that the accused intended and was prepared to commit. *Railway v. In the body of the document A was described as the son of B, though no such description appeared in the signature. A was known to C for a long time and A had no intention of causing it to be believed that the document was executed by any other person than himself. Held, per MUNRO and ABDUR RAHIM, JJ., that A was not guilty of making a false document within the meaning of s. 464, Indian Penal Code. The assertion of a false claim in a document will not constitute the document false, when it is executed by the party who purports to execute it and there is no intention of causing a belief that it was executed by some other person, real or fictitious. Per PINHEY, J.—The document was a 'false document' as it contained a false description. A wanted to cause it to be believed that such a person as the son of B existed and his intention was to defraud the real heir, i.e., the widow of B. A had thus committed the offence of 'forgery' within section 467, Indian Penal Code. *ADAIKALAMMAI v. Amir put in a petition at the police station asking that a search might be made for the missing woman, and he also employed a pleader, one Ali Zohad, to assist him in discovering the whereabouts of Piari. Ali Hasan, the son of Ali Zohad, and a clerk employed in the office of the District Superintendent of Police, forged two orders purporting to be orders of the District Superintendent of Police, the first intimating that the woman Piari was with one Sibni, the wife of Ghisu weaver, and that the Sub-Inspector should be directed to hand her over to the petitioner (Amir), and the second directing the Sub-Inspector of Kydganj to hand the woman over to the petitioner. Held, that in fabricating these two documents, Ali Hasan had acted fraudulently and had committed the offence punishable under s. 465 of the Penal Code. *Queen-Empress v. the Registrar. Held (SUBRAHMANIA AYYAR and DAVIES, JJ. dissenting), that V was guilty of forgery. Per SIR ARNOLD WHITE, C.J.—The offence of forgery is complete if a document, false in fact, is made with intent to commit a fraud, although it may not have been made with any one of the other intents specified in s. 463. It was not necessary having regard to the wording of s. 24 that the accused should have intended to cause both wrongful gain to himself and wrongful loss to the University. Both intentions, however, were present in this case. Moreover, the false document had been made with intent to support a "claim or title" within the meaning of those words as used in s. 463. A claim to be admitted to a University examination is a claim within the meaning of s. 463. It was more clearly so in the present case as the accused had a "claim" to be exempted from the production of an attendance certificate, upon satisfying certain conditions precedent. An intended deprivation of property is not an essential element of an intention to defraud. Per BENSON, J. Those decisions, which proceed on the ground that an act is not fraudulent, unless it causes or is intended to cause loss or injury to some one, would seem to take too narrow a view of the meaning of the word "fraudulently" as used in the Code. The act of the accused was fraudulent not merely by reason of the advantage, which he intended to secure for himself by means of his deceit, but also by reason of the injury, which must necessarily result to the University, and through it to the public, from such acts, if unrepressed. Per SUBRAHMANIA AYYAR.—The document was not made fraudulently within the meaning of ss. 464 and 463 of the Code. Deprivation of property, actual or intended, does not constitute an essential element in regard to offences falling under ss. 465 and 471 of the Penal Code; but the deception must involve some loss or risk of loss to an individual or to the public. It is not enough to show that the deception was intended to secure an advantage to the deceiver. Per DAVIES, J.—It had not been shown that the accused in making the document had either the intention necessary to constitute it a false document within the meaning of s. 464. A mere intention to deceive does not necessarily imply an intention to defraud or to cause wrongful loss to one person or wrongful gain to another. A person to be defrauded must suffer some harm or damage or injury and there was no evidence that the Registrar, as representing the University, had suffered in any of these respects. The University had been deprived of nothing and, on the other hand, had profited by the application by the accused. Moreover, the intention of the accused was to subject himself to examination, which could not be deemed a thing of value. If he failed, it ended in nothing. If he passed, he became entitled to a certificate not in consequence of the false writing, but on his own merits. KOTAMRAJU VENKATRAYADU v. EMPEROR (1905) . . . I. L. R. 28 Mad. 90

1. s. 475—Possession of papers bearing counterfeit marks or devises—Charge under s. 475, how to be framed—Misdirection—Evidence. During the course of a police investigation into a complaint of theft, the house of the accused was searched and a bundle of papers, about 58 in number, were found, which were alleged to be forgeries or preparations for forgeries. The accused was thereupon committed to the Court of Session on a charge under s. 475 of the Penal Code. A few days before the trial of the accused, the police searched the house of one S, who was a witness for the defence, and there discovered a batch of suspicious papers which were produced at the trial, and put in as evidence against the accused. The accused was convicted of the offence under s. 475 of the Penal Code and sentenced to transportation for life. Held, reversing the conviction and sentence, that the suspicious papers found in S's house were not admissible in evidence against the accused. Held, further, that the Judge's direction to the jury regarding those papers, that they established a connection between the accused and many of the witnesses belonging to the same faction, and that they showed the extent to which the practice of forgery had gone in the village, and that in this way they were relevant to the question of guilty knowledge and intention, was a misdirection which prejudiced the accused. In the trial of an accused person on a charge under

It is not necessary to constitute an offence under s. 478 that a trade mark in the sense in which the word is used in the English Patents, Designs and Trade Marks Acts should have been acquired; and a mark is none the less a false mark because it appeared on the box and not on the goods. Under ss. 233, 234 of the Code of Criminal Procedure a person cannot be charged with more than three offences at one trial and the defect cannot be cured after the accused had pleaded and the case had closed, by amending the charges so as to reduce it to three offences. Although the words in s. 227 of the Code of Criminal Procedure are wide enough to warrant a Court in altering a charge by striking out one of the charges at any time before judgment, the section does not warrant the striking out of a charge for the purpose of curing an illegality already committed, and after the mischief, which the Legislature intended to guard against, had been done. *Subrahmania Ayyar v. 2. Enticing away married woman—Presumption of marriage—Onus probandi. In a charge under s. 498 of the Penal Code, the proof that the woman and man other than the accused were living together is sufficient to throw the burthen of proof on the accused that they were not man and wife. QUEEN v. WAZIRA

3. Enticing away wife—Proof of marriage. S and G having been convicted of enticing away the wife of the complainant, the conviction was quashed on appeal, on the ground that strict proof of marriage being necessary for a conviction under s. 498 of the Penal Code, the evidence adduced (viz., of the complainant, the woman and her mother, who swore to the fact of the marriage) was not sufficient to enable the Court to form an opinion whether the marriage took place as a fact, and if it did take place, whether it was according to law. The accused did not cross-examine the witnesses as to the fact or validity of the marriage or otherwise impugn it. Held, that the marriage was sufficiently proved. Empress v. Pitambur Singh, I. 4. Enticing away a married woman—Evidence of marriage—Mere statement of the complainant and the woman. Where a charge is made under s. 498 of the Penal Code of enticing away a married woman, the Court should require some better evidence of the marriage than the mere statement of the complainant and the woman. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. DAL SINGH . I. L. R. 20 All. 166

5. Enticing and taking away. Upon an indictment under s. 498 of the Penal Code, charging that the prisoner took away one A, who was then, and whom he then knew to be, the wife of one M, with the intent that he might have illicit intercourse with the said A :—Held, that there was a taking within the meaning of the section, although the advances and solicitation had proceeded from the woman, and the prisoner had for some time refused to yield to her request. QUEEN v. KUMARASAMI 2 Mad. 331

6. Enticing away married woman—Finding in words of section. A finding exactly in the words of s. 498 of the Penal Code, that the prisoner took or enticed away a married woman from her husband, or some person having the care of her on his behalf, with intent that she should have illicit intercourse with some person, or concealed or detained such woman with a like intent, though not actually illegal when it is doubtful which of the several offences has been committed is a finding which ought not to be resorted to if it can be avoided,

7. ——— Alyasantana law—Marriage—Custom. In the absence of very clear evidence of custom, which, if well founded, must be a matter of general notoriety, the cohabitation of a man and a woman under the Alyasantana system cannot be considered marriage so as to render punishable, under s. 498 of the Penal Code, a person who entices away the woman with the intents specified in that section. *KORAGA v. I. L. R. 3 All. 251

9. ——— Concealing or detaining. In a charge under s. 498 of the Penal Code, the words of the section, "conceals or detains," must be taken to extend to the enticing or inducing a wife to withhold or conceal herself from her husband, and assisting her to do so, as well as to physical restraint or prevention of her will or action. Depriving the husband of proper control over his wife for the purpose of illicit intercourse is the gist of the offence, and a detention occasioning such deprivation may be brought about simply by the influence of allurements and blandishments. QUEEN v. SUNDARA DASS TEVAN

10. ——— Detaining with criminal intent married woman. The words "such woman" in s. 498 of the Penal Code do not mean such a woman as has been so enticed as mentioned in that section, but mean such woman whom the accused knows or has reason to believe to be the wife of any other man; the detention of such a woman with the particular intent defined in the section is one of the offences made punishable under that section. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. NIADAR I. L. R. 10 All. 580

11. ——— Charge of abetment against the woman enticed—"Enticing away" a woman—Validity. Where a man has been convicted of enticing away a woman, under s. 498 of the Penal Code, the woman who was enticed away by him cannot be guilty as an abettor. Quære: Whether a woman could be convicted of abetting the taking away of herself, within the meaning of s. 488. In re BALAMBAL (1902) . I. s. 499—contd.

virtue of its etymological origin, extends to any state of the mind which is wrong or faulty (whether evidenced in action by excess or defect), such as would be unjustifiable in the circumstances and incompatible with thoroughly innocent intentions. It is not necessary that such impropriety of feeling should in all cases be established by evidence extrinsic to the comment which is the subject of the complaint. For, whether fair comment is to be regarded as falling under a branch of the law of privilege or not, it cannot excuse an injury arising not from the mere act of criticism, but from a state of mind in the critic which is in itself unjustifiable and the excuse may be so forfeited either by reason of an evil intent in him, or by reason of mere recklessness in making an unwarrantable assertion. For then the comment would not be fair comment at all. Apart from extrinsic evidence of malice, protection must be withheld even from what purports to be criticism, if it states as a fact to be inferred from the book criticised, an imputation for which the book itself contains absolutely no foundation whatever. The right of fair comment involves two essentials, first that the imputation should be comment on the work criticised, and second that it should be "fair,"—that is to say, that if it professes to be an inference drawn from the contents of that work, it must be an inference which it is possible to draw therefrom. "Good faith" requires not, indeed, logical infallibility, but due care and attention. But how far erroneous actions or statements are to be imputed to want of due care and caution must, in each case, be considered with reference to the general circumstances and the capacity and intelligence of the person whose conduct is in question. It is only to be expected that the honest conclusions of a calm and philosophical mind may differ very largely from the honest conclusions of a person excited by sectarian zeal and untrained to habits of precise reasoning. At the same time it must be borne in mind that good faith in the formation or expression of an opinion, can afford no protection to an imputation which does not purport to be based on that which is the legitimate subject of public comment. The object of exception 6 to s. 499 of the Indian Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860) is that the public should be aided by comment in its judgment of the public performance submitted to its judgment. Comment otherwise defamatory is justified on this ground alone. The comment must, therefore, make it clear to the public that decision is invited only on such evidence as is supplied by the public performance. It follows that an imputation on an author made by a critic without reference, express or implied, to the work under criticism, if in terms so general as to be capable of conveying an unfavourable impression of him apart from what appears in his work, cannot be justified by the critic on the ground that his intention was to base his imputation solely on the work reviewed, and that he had in his mind passages therein supporting the imputation. The responsibility of the critic is to

be gauged by the effect which his comment is calculated to produce and not by what he says was his intention. It is not enough that he should intend to form his opinion on the work before him. He is also bound in the words of the exceptions to express his opinion with due care and caution, and to give the public no ground for supposing that he is speaking of anything but the performance submitted to its judgment. *EMPEROR v. Account cannot be taken in a case of this kind of a vague possibility that the state of mind which is caused by alarm may easily induce a person to commit an offence against the public tranquillity. This would depend on the circumstances of a particular case. The accused, a daffadar of a tea estate in Darjeeling, who had recently returned from Nepal, circulated a report among the garden coolies that a war was impending between the British Government and Nepal, that Nepalese soldiers were stationed on the frontier, and that the coolies would be killed by the British. The effect of the report was that about 150 coolies immediately ran away. Held, that the accused could not be taken to have intended more than the probable result of the report he circulated, the result which, in fact, did take place. In the matter of the petition of MANBIR . . . 3 C. If words are employed in a grant which, expressly or by necessary implication, indicate that Government intends that, so far as it may have any ownership in the soil, that ownership shall pass to the grantee, neither Government, nor any person subsequently to the date of the grant deriving under Government, can be permitted to say that the ownership did not so pass, unless there are in the grant such detailed provisions as show that such words are limited in their operation. 2. ———— Toda garas hak, suit for money in lieu of. In part of Western India annual payments, known as toda garas hak, made by village communities and commuted by them into liabilities to garasias, have been recognized as a species of property, however unlawful their origin. In 1862 a resolution of the Government of Bombay described the position of the garasias at that time, and gave them the option of resuming the collection of the toda garas hak formerly levied resorting only to legal proceedings to enforce their claims, or of receiving from the Government allowances of an equivalent amount, the collections in the latter case being discontinued on all hands. The ancestors of the adoptive father of the plaintiff formerly levied toda garas hak; and after 1862 the Government in respect thereof made payments, under the resolution, to three brothers, of whom one was the plaintiff's father; the latter receiving a one-third share, which on his death in 1865 was no longer paid. Held, that a suit against the Government for payment of this third share with arrears fell under the Pensions Act (XXIII of 1871), s. 4, which prohibits cognizance, save as in the Act provided "of any suit relating to any pension or grant of money or land revenue conferred or made by the British or any former Government, whatever may have been the consideration for such pension or grant, or whatever may have been the nature of the payment, claim, or right for which such pension or grant may have been substituted." Held, that there was no reason, either in the language of the Act itself or in any antecedent legislation, for construing these words as applicable only to rights in the nature of pensions. *MAHARAVAL MOHAN-SINGHJI JEYSINGHJI v. 5. Rent-free grant of land from Government. S. 4 of the Pensions Act (XXIII of 1871) debars the Civil Court from taking cognizance of any suit, whether the Government is a party to it or not, which relates to any pension or grant of money or land revenue conferred or made by the British or any former Government, without a certificate from the Collector or other authorized officer. S. 5 prescribes a remedy for the claimant of such pension or grant, and s. 6 enables the Revenue officer to refer the parties to the Civil Court for the determination of their respective interests in the income or other benefits, which the executive will, however, still, as against either or both of the litigants, be at liberty to allow or withhold. Lands held free of assessment under a grant from Government which bestows on the grantee the lands themselves, and not merely the Government revenue arising from them, do not fall within the provision of the Pensions Act. BABAJI HARI v. 6. Grant of land revenue—Former suit for money. The plaintiffs formerly sued for a sum of money, and, obtaining a decree, attached in 1861 two villages the land revenue of which had been granted in inam. The attachment continued down to 1875, when the last holder of the villages died, and the Government having resumed the villages, the attachment was raised. The plaintiffs now sued to have their right declared to satisfy their decree from the revenues of the villages. Held, that the former suit was not a suit in respect of a pension or grant of money of land revenue, and that an attachment placed in pursuance of an ordinary money-decree before the date of the Pensions Act (XXIII of 1871) could not be treated as a suit in respect of a pension, grant of money, or land revenue instituted before such date, so as to exclude the operation of the Act under s. 1. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v. 8. Gratuitous pension.—Suit for share of annual grant made by Government. One S, a servant of the Delhi Emperor, having been killed in Burdwan while fighting for his master, the Emperor built a tomb over his remains, and made a grant of land (five mouzahs) to his family for the purpose of maintaining it in the manner usual amongst Mahomedans. This grant was subsequently confirmed to a descendant of S and his heirs. Some years later the land came into the possession of the Raja of Burdwan, who paid to the grantees a certain sum of money annually. When the perpetual settlement was made, the British Government continued the payment on account of the Raja, in whose zamindari four of the five mouzahs were incorporated. Owing to disputes in the family, a reference was made to Government, who reduced the money payment and appointed a mutwalli for the tomb. One of the descendants of S then sued the Government and the mutwalli for a share of this annual payment. Held, that the grant to S's family was not a gratuitous pension or allowance, and that the money payment by the zamindar of Burdwan was rent justly due to them for the use and occupation of their land, and that the fact of the payment being continued by Government did not alter its nature. Accordingly the suit was not barred by Regulation XXIV of 1793 or Act XXIII of 1871. HAZARA BEGUM v. COLLECTOR OF BURDWAN

XXIX of 1827, s. 6—Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X of 1876), s. 4—Mokasa amals, meaning of.* In 1826 A obtained a decree on a mortgage, awarding him possession and enjoyment of certain inam property, consisting of lands and of cash allowances annually paid from the Government treasury, called mokasa amals. A and his successors continued in possession down to 1852, when the inam was attached on behalf of Government pending an inquiry, under Bombay Act XI of 1852, into the title of the holder of the inam. The attachment remained in force till 1865, when Government finally decided that the inam property, with the exception of a certain portion, should be restored to those from whose possession it had been taken in 1852. Thereupon D, the successor in interest of A, applied to the Collector to be restored to possession. The Collector refused. D therefore sued him for arrears of the mokasa amals, and obtained a decree in 1868. Thereafter D did not receive any payment from the Government treasury. In 1883 D filed the present suit against Government to recover possession of the inam lands together with arrears of the amals. Held, that the suit against Government was not cognizable by the Civil Courts both under the Pensions Act (XXIII of 1871), s. 4, and under the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X of 1876), s. 4. Both these Acts, though not retrospective in their operation, still do not create rights to relief against the Government where none subsisted before. Accordingly, the suit, being barred under Bombay Regulation XXIX of 1827, was equally barred under the later Acts XXIII of 1871 and X

The sanad granted "water, trees, grass, wood, quarries, mines, buried treasure, present and future cesses and taxes and assessments." The plaintiff brought the present suit to recover from the defendant a part of the abkari revenue for 1884-85 and 1885-86. He contended that the revenue derived by the Government for tapping trees in the villages aforesaid was a tax within the contemplation of the grant. Held, that the Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit under the Pensions Act (XXIII of 1871). The tax in question was a money tax, and as soon as it was imposed, the grant, if it entitled the inamdar to the tax, operated as a grant of the money to be derived from the tax, and was therefore within the spirit, if not the letter, of the Pensions Act, the object of which was to reserve to the Government the determination of all questions affecting grants of money, the bestowal of which was an act of grace or State policy on the part of the ruling power. JANARDHAN BHASKAR v. 24. ——— Suit relating to inam land granted before the time of the British Government—Confirmation of inam. Early in the eighteenth century two villages were granted by the zamindars of Sivaganga and Guntamanaikanur to the last of the Naik rulers of Madura for the maintenance of the rank and dignity of his family which was now represented by the plaintiffs and defendants Nos. 1 to 23. The property was long managed by the representative, for the time being, of the senior line. In 1844 one of the junior members instituted a suit for partition, which terminated in a decree declaring the corpus of the property to be indivisible and the annual produce to be divisible in certain shares. Subsequently in 1857 a compromise was entered into, by which the parties agreed to vary the distribution of the sharers, but they agreed that the management of the estate, indivisible and inalienable, should continue to be vested in the eldest line subject to certain supervision on the part of the other members. The compromise was long acted upon by the family; but in 1892 the representative of the senior line died, leaving only his widow and infant sons. The widow, as guardian of the elder son, then entered on the management, and being gosha, delegated it to a stranger. The plaintiffs, representing a junior line, now sued for the removal of these persons from management and the appointment of another manager, alleging both that they had no right to the management and that they had been guilty of mismanagement. All the members of the family were made parties to the suit. It appeared that the plaintiffs had not received their proper share of the produce, and the defendants in management denied in the pleadings their right thereto. The plaintiffs had not obtained a certificate from the Collector under the Pensions Act (XXIII of 1871), and it appeared that the grant of the villages had been confirmed as an inam by the British Government. Held, that the suit did not fall within the provisions of Pensions Act, s. 4, and a certificate of the Collector was accordingly unnecessary. *TIRUMALAI NAIK v. It effected partition of family property between the brothers A and N. Under the agreement A undertook to pay to N R456-0-6 every year, and for the convenience of the parties this was to come out of the Saranjam lands, which had fallen to the share of A. The payment was regularly made during the lifetime of A, and after his death T, the son of A, continued to make the payment till 1899, when he stopped making any more payments. B, the son of N, who had died, then filed a darkhast to enforce the payment of 1889-1900. T objected to this darkhast on two grounds: (i) that a certificate under the Pensions Act (XXIII of 1871) was necessary; and (ii) that A's interest having terminated with his death, the Saranjam must be considered as a fresh grant to the son, who was not liable to continue the payment. Held, (i) that a certificate under the Pensions Act (XXIII of 1871) was not necessary, for the word "suit" in s. 4 of the Act does not include execution proceedings. Vajiram v. Ranchordji, I. L. R. 16 Bom. 731, followed; (ii) that A was a trustee in respect of the R456-0-6 for Narayan, the obligation to pay which would attach to the succeeding holders of the Saranjam and it followed that N and his descendants would have the right to call upon A and his descendants to account for their management of the Saranjam and pay to them R456-0-6 per annum. A consent decree can only be set aside upon the same grounds as an agreement can be set aside, e.g., fraud or mistake or misrepresentation. Per BATTY, J.—"A Court executing a decree cannot question the jurisdiction of the Court, which passed it." "The present application in no way affects property falling within the purview of the Pensions Act, but seeks enforcement against the general assets of the judgment-debtor, whose liability under the decree is not made a charge on the Saranjam or cash allowance at all." That liability appears to have been imposed and accepted not as effecting any partition of the Saranjam property, but for the purpose of effecting equality in the partition of non-saranjam property, the Saranjam property being merely indicated as a fund available to the defendant for the purpose of discharging that liability. TRIMBAKRAO v. The words of the section were wide enough to include any suit to enforce such a claim provided it related to a pension or grant of money or of land revenue; it was immaterial whether the claim was based on an agreement between the parties or arose out of any other legal right or liability and whether it was a claim for a share by way of partition or maintenance or otherwise. *DAMODAR v. Where, therefore, such a right to receive land-revenue was included along with other property in a mortgage upon which a suit for foreclosure was brought, it was held, that, as regards the right to receive land-revenue the suit would not lie in the absence of the certificate required by s. 6 of the Pensions Act; and, time having been granted for the production of the necessary certificate, which was not produced, the dismissal of the suit quoad hoc was sustained. *Jijaji Pratabji Raje v. Palghat; the first Raja (defendant No. 1) received a malikhana allowance from Government payable to the various stanomdars, but had refused to pay to plaintiff the fifth Raja's share. Held, that the suit was not one relating to any pension or grant of money or land revenue conferred by Government, but was merely a suit for a declaration as to the plaintiff's status; and the Pensions Act, s. 6, was therefore not applicable to the case. *KOMBI v. 3. ———— Collector—Certificate—Civil Court—Suit to recover share of allowance for particular years—Certificate referring only to some years. A certificate granted by the Collector under the Pensions Act (XXIII of 1871) authorized the plaintiff to recover his share in the allowance for the years 1889-90 to 1896-97. On the strength of this certificate, the plaintiff brought a suit to recover his share of the allowance for the years covered by the certificate and also for the year 1897-98. The lower Appellate Court disallowed plaintiff's claim so far as it related to the year 1897-98, on the ground that that year was not mentioned in the certificate. Held, that the certificate given by the Collector might refer only to the plaintiff's share in the allowance for particular years, but if the Collector permitted the plaintiff to establish his right to a share in a Civil Court, the plaintiff was not bound under the Pensions Act to get a certificate for each year's allowance before suing for it. The general right being allowed and established, the right to each year's share follows as consequent upon it. KRISHNAJI SAKHARAM v. ANANT (1904)

In 1861 this grant had been confirmed by the British Government by means of a sanad which contained the following material provision.

PENSIONS ACT (XXIII OF 1871)—
*contd.s. 6—concl'd.

There was a declaration that the village in question shall be continued by the British Government to the grantee and his heirs inclusive of all lands, allowances and rights belonging to others, so long as he and his heirs shall continue loyal to the British Government and shall pay Rs800 to Government as quit rent. The sanad further contained a guarantee against any further payment by the holder on account of Imperial Land Revenue beyond the amount specified, and a declaration that the village and its holder shall be liable for any local taxation, which may be imposed in the district generally. Held, that these provisions did not amount to a grant of land revenue and the grant did not therefore fall within the purview of the Pensions Act, 1871. *Rarji Narayan Mandlik v. The word "pension" in s. 11 of the Pensions Act is used in its ordinary and well-known sense, viz., that of a periodical allowance or stipend granted, not in respect of any right, privilege, perquisite, or office, but on account of past service or particular merits, or as compensation to dethroned princes, their families, and dependants. A toda garas hak does not come within the meaning of the word "pension" which denotes something different from "a grant of money or revenue" as defined in s. 3 of the Act. *SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v. There is nothing in the Regulations to which the permanently-settled estates of Bengal owe their origin to indicate that the Government intended to guarantee to the proprietors the absolute preservation of their estates. 1. GENERAL CONSTRUCTION OF PLEADINGS.
1. _____ Pleadings in Courts in India.

2. _____ Primary and secondary relief. Z and his three minor sons were joint owners of a village which Z hypothecated by deed of simple mortgage to J. Subsequently Z executed another deed of mortgage to J, part of the consideration whereof was the cancellation of the former bond, which was paid off and extinguished accordingly. J, however, fraudulently caused it to appear from the novating document that the former mortgage was still alive, and, after the death of Z, put the bond in suit against Z's widow, who, being ignorant of the fraud, confessed judgment as guardian of her minor sons; and the entire right and interest of Z's heirs were sold in execution of the decree obtained by J. Subsequently the fraud was discovered and Z's sons brought a suit to set aside the execution sale and to recover possession of the property first mortgaged. In regard to three-fourths of this property, they prayed that “possession might be awarded to them by establishment of their right and share by amendment of the revenue papers.” In regard to the remaining one-fourth, they prayed for possession “by right of inheritance to Z” by cancelment of the execution sale and of the fraudulent decree. Held, that pleadings in the Indian Courts must be not construed with the same strictness as in English Courts; that although in an informal and loose way, what the plaintiff substantially set out, as the primary relief sought, was the entire avoidance of the decree and the proceedings resulting therefrom as vitiated by fraud, and, as secondary relief, to be granted, if the Court should not see its way to setting aside those proceedings, a declaration that they took effect only as regards one-fourth of the property. Nawab Nazim v. Amrao Begum, 21 W. R. 59, referred to. NATHU SINGH v. JODHA SINGH . I. L. R. 6 All. 406

3. ———— Pleadings—Reliefs of a nature different from the case made out in the plaint. No declaration ought to be granted where the case upon which the declaration is sought to be obtained not only is not the case made in the plaint but is one that is wholly inconsistent with it. *Eshen Chunder Singh v. ## 2. ADMISSION OF PLAINT.

——— Holiday—Stamp duty. The reception of a plaint for arrears of rent by the Collector on Good Friday, although by the Circular Order of the Board of Revenue such day is an authorized holiday, is not illegal. There is no legality in the reception of a plaint engrossed on insufficient stamp paper, if the full amount of the stamp duty has been paid at the time. GOBIND KUMAR CHOWDHRY v. HARGOPAL NAG

3 B. L. R. Ap. 72 : 11 W. R. 537

3. FORM AND CONTENTS OF PLAINT.

(a) CAUSE OF ACTION.

1. ———— Limitation—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 26. In a suit to recover possession plaintiff is bound, under s. 26, Act VIII of 1859, to give the date on which he was dispossessed as accurately as possible, especially where one of the issue is whether he has been in occupation of the land within twelve years of suit. BOYDONATH SURMA v. OJAN BIBEE . . . 11 W. R. 238

2. ———— Plaint not showing when cause of action arose. A plaintiff is bound by the Civil Procedure Code to show on the face of the plaint that his cause of action accrued within the period of limitation. Where an assignment to himself is a material part of a plaintiff's cause of action, he ought to allege the fact in his plaint. BROOKE v. GIBBON . . . 21 W. R. 47

3. ———— Objection to cause of action being barred. S. 32 of Act VIII of 1859 imposes upon the Court of first instance the duty of taking any legal objection apparent on the face of the plaint; see Balava kom Basangouda v. Shigouda valad Kadapa, 7 Bom. A. C. 99, and the fact that a portion of the claim is evidently barred by the law of limitation from which no ground of exemption is stated, is an objection which ought to be noticed by the Court when receiving the plaint or if not taken notice of, then it may be at any subsequent stage of the suit. SALUJI KESRAJI v. RAJSANGJI JALMSANGJI

2 Bom. 169 : 2nd Ed. 162

4. ———— Taking plaint off the file—Indefiniteness—Omission to show suit not barred. A plaint which merely stated that the cause of action arose previous to 21st August 1869, and which did not show that the suit was not barred by limitation, was ordered to be taken off the file. SONAMULL v. SUNARAM ROTTI 8 B. L. R. Ap. 23

5. ———— Plaint not showing when cause of action arose. The fact of A's plaint not showing when the cause of action arose is ground for rejecting the plaint, but no ground for finding on the trial that the suit is barred upon an issue raised as to limitation. KALLYNATH SHAW v. RAJEEBLOCHUN MOZOOMDAR

6. ———— Omission to state when cause of action arose in plaint—Amendment of plaint. A suit in which the plaint discloses a cause of action falling within the period of limitation should not be dismissed after the framing of issues merely because the Court considers that an erroneous date has been assigned in the plaint as the cause of action. The plaint should be amended. SHEORAJ SINGH v. NUR KHAN . 7 N. W. 354

7. ———— Multifariousness. A plaintiff's cause of action is every fact which a plaintiff must prove to support his case. A cause of action arises when a legal right is infringed, and the date and place of its accrual must be inserted in the plaint. Where the plaintiff claimed the ownership of the properties in suit through her late husband, and alleged that her rights had been infringed at different times and by different sets of defendants, and it was found that the latter did not act in concert and did not combine together to dispossess the plaintiff: Held, that there were separate causes of action against separate sets of persons, and the trial could not proceed as upon a single cause of action. RAM PROSAD v. SACHI DASSI (1902)

24. ——— Suit to set aside deed of sale—Civil Procedure Code, s. 50—Inconsistent causes of action—Inconsistency in pleading the suit. In a suit for cancellation of a sale-deed by the person whose name appeared on it was executant, it was alleged in the plaint that it was a forgery, and that if it was not a forgery, its execution had been obtained by fraud, and that it was, moreover, void for want of consideration. Held, that the gist of the plaintiff's charge against the defendant being that she had never executed a sale-deed in his favour, and that the document set up by him was a forgery. It was not competent to the plaintiff to combine with this charge as an alternative the wholly inconsistent charge that, if she did execute the document, no consideration was received by her or that fraud had been practised upon her. *Mahomed Buksh Khan v. The mortgage was executed, and the undertaking to withdraw the appeal was embodied in the mortgage deed, which was registered, but signed only by A. B, in breach of his undertaking, permitted the appeal to proceed and obtained a decree on 20th November, 1891, which he subsequently executed against A, recovering the value of the promissory note upon which he had originally sued. He also retained the mortgage which had been executed in the compromise. A now sued to recover from B the amount which B had collected under the decree, stating the cause of action as having arisen on the date of that collection, namely, 29th October, 1893, when it was contended that the suit was not maintainable inasmuch as the decree had not been set aside, and that, even if treated as a suit for damages for breach of the undertaking to withdraw the appeal, it was barred as the date of the breach was the date of the decree (viz., 20th November, 1891), which had been wrongly obtained and this suit had not been brought within three years from that date, the plaint having been filed on 14th September, 1896. Held, that, inasmuch as all necessary allegations were made in the plaint, the contract and its breach being alleged, and as the defendant understood what the claim against him was, the plaint sufficiently disclosed a cause of action for damages for the breach of contract. Held, also, that the undertaking in the mortgage was "an agreement in writing, registered," within the meaning of Art. 116 of Sch. II to the Limitation Act, and that consequently the claim was not barred. The fact that the instrument was not signed by B did not take the case out of the operation of that article. *KOTAPPA v. Where a suit was brought in the name of A for self and as guardian of her daughter B, a minor, and it was objected that it should have been brought in the names of A and of B, a minor, by her next friend and guardian, Held, that, as no one was misled or injured by the improper form of the plaint, the objection ought not to be held fatal, but the decree must be taken to be in favour of A and of B suing by A as if the suit had been properly framed. *ALIM BUKSH FAKIR v. 44. ————— Bom. Act III of 1867, s. 11—Cantonment Committee—Contracts entered into a corporate character—Liability to be sued on such contracts as a corporation. The plaintiffs sued the Poona Cantonment Committee to recover damages for breach of a conservancy contract. The Committee was created by rules made by the Local Government under s. 11 of Bombay Act III of 1867. The Committee ordinarily consisted of certain officials acting ex-officio. It was part of their duty to provide for the management and regulation of public roads, of conservancy, and drainage within the cantonment. They defrayed the expenses of such management out of the cantonment fund placed at their disposal. The defendants contended that the suit was not properly framed, and that all the members of the Committee should be made parties. Held, that the suit was properly constituted. The rules by which the Committee was created did, by implication, though not by express words, create the committee a corporation for the purposes of the conservancy of the cantonment. It could therefore sue and be sued in its own name on contracts entered into in its corporate character. CANTONMENT COMMITTEE, POONA, v. BARJORJI BAMANJI . . . I. L. R. 14 Bom. 286

The plaint described the defendant as "Mrs. Sarah G. Barlow, of Mussoorie," and stated that she was executrix of the deceased B. The Court of first instance returned the plaint for amendment under s. 53 of the Civil Procedure Code, because the defendant was not properly described. Held, that this ground failed, because it was clear that the defendant was stated to be the executrix of the deceased, and the suit was brought against her in that capacity. *MUSSOORIE BANK v. 12. ———— Effect of non-verification by real plaintiff—Benami mortgage. In a suit for possession after foreclosure, defendants urged that C (and not A and B, the plaintiffs) was the actual mortgagee. This was denied by A and B who obtained a decree. In a subsequent suit brought by the representatives of A and B for mesne profits, they, in conjunction with C, urged that C was the real mortgagee, and C was made a co-plaintiff, but he did not verify the plaint. A decree was given for mesne profits in favour of C, the plaintiff. Held, that the fact that C had not verified the plaint was no sufficient ground for dismissing the suit. *ROY MOHANLAL MITTRA v. The Court must be satisfied, under s. 52, that a person, other than the plaintiff, verifying the plaint, is acquainted with the facts of the case; but in the case of a person holding a general power-of-attorney or of any other recognized agent, the Court will not insist on any extreme stringency of proof. S. 52 does not require the verification of a plaint to be made in the presence of an officer of the Court, but, having regard to the necessity of satisfying the Court that the person, other than the plaintiff, who verifies the plaint, is acquainted with the facts of the case, it is desirable that a verification by such a person should be made in the presence of the Court unless the Court be satisfied that there is sufficient ground for dispensing with his attendance. KASTALINO v. PLAINT—contd.*4. VERIFICATION AND SIGNATURE—contd.

21. ——— Irregular verification—Dismissal on ground of improper verification after admission of plaint.* The Judge on appeal dismissed a suit on the ground that the plaint was verified by an agent, when it might and ought to have been verified by the plaintiff himself. Held, that, the plaint having been admitted, the suit ought not to be dismissed for this defect, but the Judge might properly have required the verification of the plaintiff to be supplied. GOKUL CHUNDER v. BUREEK BEGUM . . . . . Marsh. 344 : 2 Hay 325

22. ——— False verification—Waiver of objection.* A case having come on for hearing, the verification of the plaint was found to be false. Upon this plaintiff applied to withdraw the suit with permission to bring a fresh suit. The Munsif rejected the application and dismissed the suit with costs. Held, that, as the defendant had filed a written statement and had not objected to the verification, it was the duty of the Munsif to dispose of the case on its merits dealing afterwards as he thought fit with the party making the false verification. SHAMA SOONDUREE DEBIA v. ROHMOOD-DEEN SIRDAR . . . . . 24 W. R. 71

23. ——— Objection to verification—Verification of plaint by agent.* It is not competent to a Judge of a Small Cause Court to raise any objection to the verification of a plaint by an agent, after such verification has been expressly sanctioned by him at the commencement of the suit. SUTTOCHURN GHOSAL v. SUTOOP CHUNDER DOSS

24. ——— Signature of plaint by one of several co-plaintiffs—Parties named as co-plaintiffs—Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882), ss. 30 and 34—Limitation.* It is not necessary that all the persons named in the plaint as co-plaintiffs should sign and verify the plaint, there being no rule that a person named as a co-plaintiff is not to be treated as a plaintiff unless he signs and verifies the plaint. Three suits for money were filed by one of three joint creditors, the others being named as co-plaintiffs with him in the plaints, which he alone signed and verified. An order was made by the Court after the filing of the plaints (and at a time when he could not have been added as a plaintiff, the debt being barred by limitation) that one of these joint-creditors should be added as a co-plaintiff, as if he had not been on the record already. Held, that all the joint creditors became plaintiffs when the plaints were filed, the order adding parties being inoperative, and that the suits when instituted were not defective for want of parties. MOHINI MOHUN DAS v. BUNGSHI BUDDAN SAHA DAS
I. L. R. 17 Calc. 580

25. ——— Sufficiency of verification—Civil Procedure Code, s. 53.* A suit was brought by the manager of the M Bank against the executrix of B to recover a sum of money as due upon a bond executed by B in favour of the Bank. The plaint began thus: "George Henry Webb, Manager of the abovenamed plaintiff's business, states as follows," and proceeded to state that the deceased was, at the time of his death, "indebted to the plaintiff," and to set forth the cause of action in detail. It was signed and verified thus: "For the M Bank, Limited, G. H. Webb, manager." The Court of first instance returned the plaint for amendment under s. 53 of the Civil Procedure Code, because the plaint was set out as made by George Henry Webb as manager, and not as on the part of the Bank. Held, that this ground did not come within s. 53 of the Code, as it was clear that the circumstances set out in the plaint applied to the case of the plaintiff Bank, and the plaint sufficiently fulfilled the requirements of the Code that the facts which the plaintiff considers essential should be concisely and clearly set out, and that the verification should be made by some one acquainted with these facts. MUSOORIE BANK v. BARLOW

26. ——— Verification of plaint by acting manager—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 51 and 435—Principal officer of a Corporation or Company. The Manager at Lucknow of the local branch of the Delhi and London Bank was authorized by a power-of-attorney under seal of the company in London, to sue for debts due to the Bank, and to substitute any person for himself, besides doing other acts of management. A power-of-attorney, executed by him as manager, appointing the accountant of the Bank to be its attorney in Lucknow, did not contain express authority to the person so empowered to sue for debts due to the Bank. The accountant conducted, under this power, the chief business of the branch, and, while he was so conducting it, this suit was instituted against defendants, of whom some objected that he was not authorized to sign and verify the plaint. Held, that s. 51, Civil Procedure Code, regulating proceedings by or on behalf of ordinary plaintiffs, did not apply, but that s. 435 was applicable, the acting manager appointed as abovementioned being a principal officer of the Bank Corporation within the meaning of that section. DELHI AND LONDON BANK v. 27. ——— Suit by agent of an unincorporated society—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 435—Corporation. A suit in ejectment as against a trespasser was brought by a person signing the plaint as "for and as Superintendent and Principal Officer of the Estate of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church of New York." The plaintiff was not shown to be a member of the Board, nor did he set up any possessory title of his own. Held, that, inasmuch as the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church of New York was not a corporation or company authorized to sue and be sued in the name of an officer or trustee within the meaning of s. 435 of the Code of Civil procedure, and also as the person signing the plaint in the manner above described did not profess to be suing on his own possessory title to the land in

28. ——— Result of defective verification—Amendment—Procedure—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 52, 53, and 578—Irregularity not affecting merits. If the verification of a plaint is discovered to be defective at any time whilst the suit is before the Court of first instance, the plaint may be amended by the Court. If such defect be not discovered until the suit comes on appeal before an Appellate Court, such Court may, if it thinks fit, return the plaint to the Court of first instance to be amended by it. But where the defect is such that it is covered by the provisions of s. 578 of the Code of Civil Procedure, there is no necessity for the Appellate Court to take any steps to procure the amendment of the plaint. In any event, a defect in the verification of a plaint will not of necessity result in the dismissal of the suit. Balgobind Das v. Ganno Bibi, All. Weekly Notes, (1896) 75, referred to. A plaint filed by three joint plaintiffs was verified by each in the form: "The contents of the petition of plaint are true to the best of my knowledge and belief." Held, that this form of verification, though not free from ambiguity, was in substantial compliance with the provisions of s. 52 of the Code of Civil Procedure. RAJIT RAM v. 29. ——— Plaint verified when in an incomplete state—Amendment of plaint to correct defective verification. The substantial portion of a plaint, consisting of the statement of the claim of the plaintiffs and the prayer, was written upon two sheets of plain paper and verified by the plaintiffs. Subsequently to the affixing of the plaintiff's signatures, a front sheet, consisting of a piece of stamped paper with the name of the Court and the names and addresses of the parties, was added, and the plaint thus composed filed in Court. Held, that the verification was defective, but that the suit ought to have been dismissed. The plaintiff ought to have been allowed an opportunity of amending the plaint by making a proper verification. FATEH CHAND v. MANSAB RAI

A defect in the signature of the plaint, or the absence of signature, where it appears that the suit was in fact filed with the knowledge and by the authority of the plaintiff named therein, may be waived by the defendant, or, if necessary, cured by amendment at any stage of the suit, and having regard to s. 578 of the Code of Civil Procedure, is not a ground for interference in appeal. *Rajit Ram v. Defective verification, if there is no reason to suppose that anyone is prejudiced thereby, is no ground, at an appellate stage, either for returning the plaint for amendment or for refusing relief on the basis of the alleged defect in the plaint. *Rajit Ram v. 3. ———— Act VIII of 1859. The Court has power to amend a plaint after it has been filed, although no express power to do so is given by Act VIII of 1859. Under Act VIII of 1859, the Court has power to make all such amendments, first in the plaint and afterwards in the issues, as may be necessary, in order to bring about a fair and proper trial of the matter which the plaintiff comes into Court to have tried. *GABIND CHANDRA DUTT v. 4. ———— Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 42, 45, and 53. On the question of amending a plaint, s. 53 of the Civil Procedure Code should be read with ss. 42 and 45; that it is the intention of the Legislature that all matters in dispute should be disposed of in the same suit. The proviso to s. 53 is not intended to interfere with this. SARAL CHAND MITTER v. MOHUN BIBI . . . I. L. R. 25 Calc. 371

5. ———— Discretion of Judge—Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, s. 53. The amendment of a plaint under s. 53 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882) is in the discretion of the Judge, and is not the right of the suitor in all circumstances. It is not enough for a plaintiff to show that the amendment does not alter the character of the suit. TAPIRAM v. SADU

6. ———— Civil Procedure Code, s. 53—Limitation—Area of property claimed in suit for pre-emption described as less than the true area. A Court is not precluded from returning a plaint for amendment because at the time it is returned for amendment the period of limitation for the suit may have expired. The plaintiff in a suit for pre-emption, after filing his plaint, discovered that the property in suit had been described by mistake as being of a slightly less area than it was in reality. Held, that the Court had power and ought to have allowed the plaint to be amended, and that the amendment was not precluded by the fact that, at the time when the application for amendment was made, the limitation for the suit had expired. Held, also, that such misdescription would not render the suit liable to the objection that the plaintiff had sought to pre-empt only a part of

11. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 53—Amendment subsequently to first hearing. The words in paragraph 1 of s. 53 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act X of 1877) "at or before the first hearing" are merely directory and not mandatory, and therefore a plaintiff may, subsequently to the "first hearing," amend his plaint, provided such amendment does not alter the original character of his suit. The plaintiffs (mortgagors in a suit against their mortgagees) sought only for production of the mortgage-deed or for an account, although the averments in the plaint warranted a prayer for redemption. Subsequently to the first hearing of the suit, they applied to be allowed to amend the plaint by adding a prayer for redemption. Held, that the provisions of s. 53 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877) did not preclude the Court from permitting the amendment to be made. *MODHE v. 14. ——— Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882), s. 54—Leave obtained to amend plaint within a certain time—Failure to amend within time allowed—Application for extension of time originally allowed. On the 6th April 1891 the plaintiffs obtained an order giving them leave to amend the plaint and proceedings in the suit. By the order this amendment was to be made on or before the 30th April, 1891. On the 18th August, 1891, the plaintiffs obtained a summons calling on the defendants to show cause why the time allowed for amendment should not be extended for a month, and why the hearing of the suit should not be postponed. Held, making the summons absolute, that although the time originally fixed for amendment had expired, the Judge had a discretion to extend the time, and that under the circumstances the plaintiffs were entitled to the order asked for. *BHAGWANDAS BAGLA v. he is at liberty to prove any cause of action which is not inconsistent with the plaint. LUCKHEE PRADEBIA v. BRINDABUN DEY . . . 12 W. R. 313

19. ————— Misstatement of cause of action. The plaintiff, having failed in an application under s. 441 of the Penal Code, brought a suit in a Civil Court for possession and for the demolition of a wall or fence put up by the defendant, dating his cause of action from his failure in the Criminal Court. In the Court of first instance, he obtained a decree for possession. The Judge on appeal dismissed the plaintiff's suit on the ground that he had no power to set aside a Magistrate's order under the law cited. Held, that, if the Judge was of opinion that the plaintiff had misstated his cause of action, he ought to have directed him to amend his plaint. *DABOO JHA v. 21. ————— Civil Procedure Code, s. 53—Alteration of the relief prayed for. The restriction as to amendment of a plaint is only as to the nature of the suit: the law prohibits any such amendment as would change the fundamental character of a suit, but an alteration in the relief does not change the character of a suit. Where a purchaser of a mortgage-bond at a sale in execution of decree sued to enforce the bond, but did not pray for sale of the mortgaged property, Held, that he might properly have been allowed to amend his plaint and add a prayer for that relief. *KASINATH DAS v. 22. ————— Amendment transforming claim—Suit for rent converted into suit for ejectment—Variance between pleading and proof—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 53 and 562. An amendment of a plaint which materially transforms the nature of the claim cannot be made under s. 53 of the Civil Procedure Code, and certainly not in appeal. S. 53 permits amendment of the plaint before judgment, and not after. The larger powers conferred on Appellate Courts by s. 562 do not authorize such a material transformation of a suit in appeal. BAI SHRI MAJIRAJBA v. MAGANLAL BHAISHANKAR . . . I. L. R. 19 Bom. 303

31. — Amendment of plaint—Multifarious suit—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 5'—Malabar law—Stanom. A suit was brought by the junior members of a tarwad, which consisted of three stanoms and three tavaries, against the karnavan and others, including certain persons to whom he had alienated some tarwad property. The plaint, as originally framed, prayed (i) for the removal of the karnavan; (ii) for a declaration that defendants Nos. 2 to 8, the senior anandravans, had forfeited their right of succession to him; (iii) for the appointment of the plaintiff in his place; (iv) for a declaration that these alienations were invalid as against the tarwad; and (v) for possession of the property alienated. Subsequently, the plaint was amended by the order of the Court by striking out items (i) and (v) of the prayer, and finally the plaintiffs further amended the plaint and sued only for a declaration that the alienations in question were invalid. The lower Court passed the declaratory decree prayed for. Held, that the lower Court was wrong in allowing the plaint to be amended after the first hearing, because the case on which the decree was passed was essentially different from that disclosed in the plaint; and that the appeal must be allowed accordingly. MAHOMED v. 32. — Suit on promissory notes—Variance between pleading and proof—Addition of issue as to items of account. Where a suit was instituted under Act V of 1866 for the sum due on two promissory notes, and the defendant was afterwards allowed to come in and defend, and written statements were filed, and the plaintiff's written statement set out all the facts under which the notes were given, it was found that the items of the account were not properly in issue. 33. — Suit for breach of contract—Variance between pleading and proof. The plaintiff alleged a contract to deliver on the 2nd March, and the evidence showed an extension of time to the 31st March, but the pleading alleged that the breach was on 2nd March. Held, that an amendment might be allowed, as the defendant would not be prejudiced thereby, he having been perfectly aware of the case he had to meet on this point. PIERCE v. OPENDRA SHETTI GANAPATHY . . . . . 7 Mad. 364

34. — Relief in respect of tort—Variance between pleading and proof. The plaintiff sued the defendant, overseer of or for the municipal office, for the recovery of money due on a contract under which the plaintiff had done certain work, the defendant contracting for the municipality, and for the performance of work known by the plaintiff to be municipal work. The municipality ignored the contract, and the Court held the defendant could not be made personally liable. Held, that the plaintiff could not be allowed to amend his plaint so as to make the defendant liable in tort for misrepresentation of his authority. MODHOOSOODUN DEY v. MOHENDRONATH MOOKERJEE . . . . . 9 W. R. 206

35. — Plaint disclosing no cause of action—Contract Act, s. 22—Wagering contract—Suit to recover deposit paid on such contract—Bom. Act III of 1865, s. 1—Deceit—Unilateral mistake. On the 21st of January, 1883, the plaintiff contracted to purchase from the defendant the right to receive dividend on 50 shares of the Empress Mill at R37 per share, the plaintiff being under an impression that the dividend was to be declared on some subsequent day. The plaintiff deposited R100 with the defendant as part payment of the purchase money. Subsequently it was ascertained that the dividend had been already declared on 17th January, 1883 (i.e., four days before the contract) at R25. The plaintiff thereupon sued the defendant to have the contract declared cancelled, and sought to recover the deposit of R100, with interest. The Judge of the Court of Small Causes at Broach, being of opinion that the contract was in its nature a sutta or wagering contract, rejected the plaintiff's claim. The plaintiff applied to the High Court under its extraordinary jurisdiction to set aside the lower Court's decision. Held, that, in the first instance, the plaint, as framed, not disclosing any cause of action, ought to have been returned for amendment. It should either have alleged a mistake common to both parties to the contract, or should have contained an allegation of fraud, on the defendant's part, inducing the plaintiff to enter into the agreement. The mere circumstance that the contract was "caused by one of the parties to it being under a mistake as to a matter of fact" would not, under s. 22 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872), have made the contract voidable. The High Court reversed the lower Court's decision in order that the plaintiff might be given an opportunity to amend his plaint so as to show that his action was one for deceit. *DAYABHAI TRIBHOVANDAS v. 37. ——— Conditional decree. Where the plaintiff in a suit to enforce the right of pre-emption sued alleging that the actual price of the property was not the price entered in the sale-deed, but a smaller price, and claimed the property on payment of such smaller price, and did not allege in his plaint that he was ready and willing to pay any price which the Court might find to be the actual price, and on the day that his suit was finally disposed of presented an application to the Court stating that he was ready and willing to do so:—Held, that the Court was not bound to allow him to amend his plaint and bring into Court the larger sum. *DURGA PRASAD v.
